A Columbia Picture

Exploitation Natural!

Columbia crashes through with a ripping . . . tearing . . . modern melodrama . . . turned out with supreme showmanship!

Backed by a sweet set-up of high-powered promotional tie-ups . . . to beat outdoor summer competition to the punch!

The DEVIL is DRIVING him. Through the influence of the girl, the boy is paroled as officials hope he will lead them to where the bonds are hidden. With the girl, he learns where his convict pal is hiding, but as she tip off her boy friend's foster father, the watchman arrives first to kill the convict and recover the bonds. A reconciliation and understanding effected between foster father and son, the boy and girl start out on a new life.

With the individual players contributing good performances, the show is one of those that should build on successive days. Word of mouth comment should help it much.

Mountain Justice

(FN-Warner)

Melodrama

Back in 1921 a First National production unit turned out a study of the backwoods folk later to be dubbed hillbillies and it set a thus far untouched high for material in kind. The picture was "Tol'able David" and in it Richard Barthelmess and the late Ernest Torrence started their rise to stellar peaks. Sadistic was not then a word commonly applied to entertainment, and might not have fit too well had it been, but the picture simmered down to a terrific battle between these actors and nothing in kind save the brawl in "The Spoilers" ever brought so many people to the nation's box offices with money in hand.

"Mountain Justice" is not, of course, a remake of "Tol'able David," but it contains most of the elements that made that picture click and a number that the 1921 production lacked. It has, in addition to the rough mountain characters, the primitive philosophy and forthright manners of the backward civilization it depicts, and at least theoretical relevancy to the recently headlined case of the daughter who killed her father with a slipper and the juvenile bride theme of contemporary news and editorial writers. It doesn't quite justify, however, and happily, the marquee mention of it made by the Rialto theatre in New York, to wit: "A Gripping Melodrama of Lust and Lash." There is quite a bit of lashing in it, and some closeups of what turns out to be a fatal hand-to-hand encounter between father and daughter, but the lust, if any, is negligible.

The story is about a mountain girl who wants to establish free clinics for the people of her backward community and a doctor and a city lawyer who help her do so over the objections of a father given to enforcing his authority with a whip. The father dies following a resisted attempt to whip his daughter and a jury of his neighbors convicts her of murder, for which she is sentenced to 25 years in jail. The mountaineers think hanging would be more appropriate and set out to lynch her, but the doctor and the lawyer, whom she is to marry of course, extricate her from this situation and fly her to another state, the governor of which disposes of the whole matter by refusing to permit her extradition. (Into this is woven a mountain trial of considerable interest and a childbirth scene, with dialogue, which probably isn't quite the best amusement available to kiddies with a Saturday afternoon to while away.)

On the exploitation side, naturally, the picture is as full of angles as the mountains are of lonesome pines. To recommend one above another is as to choose between this and that, but it's no trick to foresee that, unless you've got a spot like the Rialto in the middle of Times Square, billing of the "lash and lust" variety is likely to snap back.

Reviewed at the Rialto theatre, New York, strictly a drop-in house, where it seemed to satisfy the close packed audience present at the time.—W.R.W.

Farewell Again

(London Films - United Artists)

Melodrama

Difficult to classify, but definitely a creditable piece of work, this Erich Pommer production, first called "Troopship," makes its appeal on the strength of originality of form and a really brilliant range of characterization. Also an asset is its unusual background; most of the action takes place on a troopship at sea. The direction of Tim Whelan has been skillful.

What the film does is to picture, graphically and convincingly, a score or more of persons of different breeds, social status and temperaments, in the confined world of a crowded ship and in the unusual circumstance that the vessel, nearing England with a Lancer regiment which has done five years' Indian service, is advised by wireless that the troops will have only six hours' leave at Southampton before sailing on further Eastern service. The reaction of the officers, men, and their women, to this news, and its direct effect on their personal fortunes, forms the screen material.

Of more importance than the actual incident, —though, in fact, several convincing human dramas and comedies are pictured concurrently, —is the fact that the authors and director have created a whole series of characters who really live, who talk entertainingly and in varied accents and do convince one that that is just how a miscellaneous ship's company would react.

Love interest is provided by the fact that an officer of the regiment falls for a nurse, though he knows that his fiancee will be waiting for him on the quay. Tragedy is in the fact that the Colonel's wife is incurably ill, that he must leave her on shore and never see her again. Melodrama is provided by the trooper who uses his few hours ashore to attempt the murder of a girl he thinks unfaithful.

Sentiment comes when the Sergeant's wife provides him with a daughter in mid-ocrean, while the ship's engines stop for the event. There is a plentiful helping of low-comedy in the squabbles of the soldiers' wives in "married quarters," and in studies of soldier types. The background of it all is a picture of military life afloat, which is full of an interest of its own.

There is very good acting from a long cast, including many of the best players in British pictures. Leslie Banks and Flora Robson are the Colonel and his wife, Sebastian Shaw the Captain and Patricia Hilliard the nurse, Edward Lexy and Marie O'Neill the Sergeant and his lady. The "type" parts also are well portrayed.

There is considerable "Cockney" in the dialogue and the British flag is waved with fair frequency, but the lesson of Service which underlies the story is expressed without ranting. The humaneness of the picture is its outstanding quality.

The picture was applauded heartily at a preview at the Plaza in London. All the humor got over well. The acting was praised in after-comment.—BRUCE ALLAN.

The King's People

(Michael Mindlin)

British Documentary Subject

This is an unusual and in many ways notable filmic documentation of British history, attitude and policy, fabricated by the late John Drinkwater with the cooperation of Lady Astor, Sir Austen Chamberlain, George Bernard Shaw and others, and with well chosen library shots depicting highlights of British history from the death of Queen Victoria forward. The picture was produced with special relevancy to the then imminent coronation but it places chief emphasis upon British policy, temperament and, of course, national honor, glory and nobility of purpose.

A reviewer natively inclined to regard the British as a pretty satisfactory people finds the picture easy to take. But this one is also exposed rather regularly to the documentary films of other nations and comparison is more or less inevitable. He thinks Mr. Drinkwater handled the job very well indeed, introducing a technique quite likely to be appropriated by the nations more active in this type of endeavor, but he has no expectation that the film will be accepted as else than propaganda of an exceptionally straightforward and coherent kind. Possibly Mr. Drinkwater strove for just that.

The technical device mentioned in the preceding paragraph is simple and effective. The picture opens in the Drinkwater home with the author explaining to an American reporter that he is completing a picture suggested by the coronation. His aide in this work, presented as having patched together suitable lengths of historical film, projects it, in two segments, on a screen in another room, Mr. Drinkwater absenting himself at intervals to interview, in his study, such persons as Lady Astor, Mr. Shaw and Mr. Chamberlain, summoned to discuss the undertaking.

In the course of these interviews, Mr. Shaw's being written by himself according to a screen notation, the British Empire is discussed at length and with understandable approval. Lady Astor's American origin is amply stressed. Mr. Chamberlain's long activity in governmental affairs is duly emphasized and Mr. Shaw contrives, naturally enough if not pertinently, to inform the audience that he's quite a playwright, Irishman and wit. All interviews set forth that the British Empire is now a commonwealth of nations, that it includes a quarter of the world's area and population, that it has had a succession of extremely admirable rulers and statesmen and that it is all for peace. United States is well spoken of, too, but a measure of doubt about the rest of the world is negatively indicated.

That is "The King's People." Its usefulness, from the point of view of the individual American exhibitor, is determinable solely by his knowledge of his public's attitude toward the subject matter presented. It is reasonable to conclude, however, that audiences given to cheering the pictures imported from Italy, Germany and Russia are not likely to relish this one.

The picture was seen at the Belmont theatre, New York, on a rainy afternoon when few were in attendance at 65 cents a head and those few attentive if not demonstrative.—W.R.W.

A Night of Mystery

(Paramount)

Murder Mystery

When a picture is without strong names and when a preview indicates its entertainment caliber is anything but strong you have a picture to try the abilities of the most astute showman. Based on S. S. Van Dine's "The Greene Murder Case," which, incidentally, has been made before, this is a complicated murder mystery. Purposely, or otherwise, it is so complicated that the preview audience had difficulty in figuring out what it was all about. Its interest quickly dulled, it sat waiting for something to happen to incite its attention.

Over the objections of familiar "Sergeant Heath," District Attorney "Martin" calls in the redoubtable "Philo Vance" when the law officers are unable to discover just who is bent on wiping out the whole "Greene" family. Dividing his time between being romantically interested in "Ada" and participating in the comedy contrast with "Heath," "Philo" is unable to do anything about the mysterious killings until only "Ada" and "Sibella" are left alive. Not one, but three suspects, "Dr. Von Blon," the butler and housekeeper, are at "Philo's" disposal.

Previewed in Fox Florence theatre, May 10. The cold reception accorded the film by a typically semi-suburban neighborhood audience indicated that the show can be expected to encounter tough going.—G. M.

Talk of the Devil

(G-B)

Melodrama

The "talk" of the title is that of the character played by Ricardo Cortez, and the nature of it supplies the picture with its principal novelty. Mr. Cortez plays an American in London gifted with the power to imitate other persons' voices well enough to deceive their intimate associates and, ultimately, such persons as a Scotland Yard inspector and, momentarily, the villain of the piece himself. (Probably it's all done with sound tracks, but no matter.) Mr. Cortez and Sally Eilers have the leads and a competent English cast supports them adequately.

The story revolves about the awarding of a shipbuilding contract to a company which needs it. The supposed brother of the company's managing director, really an escaped convict, obtains and misuses inside information on the deal by persuading his American friend to impersonate a business associate by telephone. This results in the suicide of the managing director (father of the girl the American wants to marry) under circumstances indicating that his daughter is guilty of murder. After a series of complicated deductions the American corners the supposed brother, who has tried to kill him, and holds him at pistol point while imitating his voice in a counterfeited but accurate confession telephoned to the police. The villian kills himself and the American marries the girl.

The production is attractively mounted and evenly, slowly, paced. All the action is presented as transpiring in England.

Diversified

Three widely separated items chosen for as many reasons, newsy, eye filling and tuneful, constitute the latest issue in the Pictorial series. Beginning with an excursion through a boatyard where after being on drydock for the winter the boats are made ready for the water and the competition that starts in the Spring and ends in the Fall the camera travels to the scenic beauty of the west and a panorama in color is unfolded to the music of "Twilight on the Trail." Then follows a demonstration of a new type organ, which is half the size of a grand piano, with music of famous composers being played to illustrate its versatility. Narration of first subject by Alois Havrilla, photography of second subject by Robert C. Bruce. Running time, 10 minutes.

TECHNICAL PROGRESS GREATEST SINCE SOUND, SMPE REPORTS AT MEETING

Spring Convention Opening Monday at Hotel Roosevelt in Hollywood; Studios To Participate in Sessions

Three-Hour Demonstration at Universal on Methods of Lighting and Direction; Academy To Be Host

"Research and development of motion picture equipment and technique show greater acceleration in the last year than at any time since the first several years after the introduction of sound." With that conclusion the Society of Motion Picture Engineers will undertake a study and estimation, individually, of the principal new technical developments, during its annual spring convention, next Monday, May 24th, to Thursday, at the Hotel Roosevelt in Hollywood.

The principal sessions are those scheduled for Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings when the members of the Society will meet with west coast technical experts. On Monday evening there will be a three-hour session at the Universal studios where talks and demonstrations will be given by a number of the department heads affording members an opportunity to see a set and learn at first hand the methods of lighting and direction. This session was arranged by Homer G. Tasker, former president of the Society.

Tuesday evening members will meet at the M-G-M studios to see a special program of selected films dealing with sound quality; color; special effects, and unusual photography. The material to be demonstrated has been assembled by technicians from the various West Coast studios and will represent some of the finest examples of motion picture art.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will be host to the Society on Thursday evening when a general paper on the technical program of the Research Council will be given by William Koenig, chairman of the Council. Reports also will be presented by chairmen of several Academy committees.

Progress in a Year

J. G. Frayne, chairman of the Progress Committee, which studies new technical developments in motion pictures, will report to the convention on the following mechanical and technical progress this year:

"Further renovation of obsolete sound and picture equipment and continued expansion of studio floor space and facilities were noted during the past year.

"Another stimulant to the aroused interest in color processes was given by the announcement of a new three-color subtractive process.

"A multi-layer emulsion contains components in the three separate layers which react with the developing solution to produce dye images in situ in the layers.

"The completely unblimped camera has still to be adapted for modern sound pictures but a number of refinements were introduced in mechanisms and lenses.

"A growing tendency to use less general illumination and more effect lighting was noted.

"Push-pull recording announced a year ago has made rapid inroads against previously employed systems. One type of light-valve uses four ribbons for recording all push-pull tracks.

"Following the lead of the Fletcher two-way horn development, systems incorporating the fundamental principles of this reproducer came into widespread use.

OCEAN FLYER SIGNED AS FILM SALESMAN

Wivefilm, producer of Swedish motion pictures with headquarters in Stockholm, this week announced it had signed Kurt Bjorkwall, only Swedish born flyer to span the Atlantic by air, as a salesman and exploitation man for their pictures.

Mr. Bjorkwall will use a Waco cabin plane and will carry with him two salesmen from Wivefilm, visiting exhibitors all over the country. On the wings and tail surfaces of the plane will be publicity announcements on the company's coming pictures. Wivefilm will also handle two French pictures, "Un Carnet de Bal" and "Le Coupable."

"Commercial equipment for push-pull recording with ultraviolet radiation was installed in several production centers here and abroad.

"The use of non-slip printers was extended considerably as a further laboratory refinement.

"In the 16-mm. field, new emulsions were made available for ordinary and color photography, and several new cameras and projectors were announced.

"A gradual but definite invasion of the 35-mm. field was noted as equipment for use in small auditoriums was being adopted. Such installations would probably not compete directly with 35-mm. equipment but would augment such equipment."

Educational Film Field

Generally unknown developments in the educational films field are disclosed in a report on that branch to be made by S. K. Wolf, of Electrical Picture Consultants, as follows:

"During the past year the educational sound film has shown greater progress than in any previous year since its inception. In September, 1936, it overcame a possible crisis when a 16-mm. standard was adopted and ratified at Budapest by the International Standards Association. The increase in production of films and sale of projection apparatus and films has more than doubled any previous year's activities in Europe and in this country. Abroad the 16-mm. educational film has been subsidized and assisted in a number of ways. In Hungary, Germany, and other countries, school children are taxed to support the production of educational sound films. In some countries educational sound films are being exhibited on entertainment programs. Objective experiments have been continued with new productions, adding to the already overwhelming evidence of the fact that the film-taught student acquires and retains more than the student instructed without films. Production technic, particularly in the field of technical animation, has shown remarkable improvement.

"Producers in cooperation with school authorities have developed a utilization program properly integrating the films into the curricula, training the teachers, and organizing a complete audio-visual program as contrasted to the former less organized use of films.

"The quality requirements of the teaching film are substantially the same as those of the entertainment film. The mechanical and optical requirements are more severe. The educational film already feels the need for a color process. Different negative and print materials will probably be necessary. Better light-sources for the 16-mm. projection will be required. The operation of the projection equipment must be simplified. The noise created by the operation of present projectors is distracting, and must be reduced to a level not in excess of 40 decibels."

Color Developments

J. A. Ball, chairman of the Color Committee, will report to the convention on 1936-37 color developments as follows:

"The Eastman perforation, although adopted by the Society as a standard for positive and negative film, has certain disadvantages for use in connection with color processes and for background projection. The reasons for these limitations are analyzed, and a proposal is made that the important advantages of the Eastman filleted rectangular shape be retained in a perforation the dimensions of which are the same as those of the Bell & Howell perforation. Such a perforation would fit existing Bell & Howell registering pins.

"The use of a photocell having most of its sensitivity outside the visible spectral region imposes an added burden to those working upon color sound processes. Search is urged for a cell that would have all the advantages of existing caesium cells but with its chief sensitive response in the visible range.

"The term 'Direct Color Developer Process' is recommended for a color process wherein non-diffusing color-formers in the emulsion (multiple-layer) combine with the oxidation products of the developer to form insoluble dyes. A process of this type was introduced recently by Agfa."

Screen Brightness

Screen brightness was one of the subjects under consideration this year by the Projection Practice Committee, which is to report on new projection progress as follows (H. Rubin is committee chairman):

"Among the projects under consideration by the Committee during the past six months are those of screen brightness; its desirable values and methods of measuring it; the question of using a visual test-pattern for checking screen illumination; revisions of the projection room plans; questions of projector motors and take-ups, and difficulties incident to the starting of projector motors; requirements of sound screens; and a recently initiated survey of theatres throughout the United States to determine not only existing conditions of projection, but also for the purpose of establishing a set of recommendations regarding theatre structures."

The 16-mm. and non-theatrical equipment fields will be discussed in two reports, the report on 16-mm. films, made by A. Shapiro, following a review of new developments in 16-mm. sound, including technical advancements and perfections contributing to raising the standards of illumination and quality, and a discussion of the extent to which limitations of picture size and audience have been raised for large-audience performances.

Adoption of the 16-mm. sound-film for educational purposes is discussed. Its function as a medium for auditorium instruction for general education of an extra-curricular nature and its use in the classroom as a corollary to textbook and oral instruction are treated. The use of sound-films for unusual or difficult experimentation is not practical in the ordinary school, the convention will be told.

"There has been an increasing use of 16-mm. sound for commercial and industrial purposes. An example is the extensive use made of such films by automobile manufacturers for sales exploitation. Picturization of plant and manufacturing processes have been used as convincing evidence of quality and precision manufacture, the report said.

"A gradual but slow increase of home users is noted. Rapid development of roadshows indicates a repetition of a cycle of the earlier history of the motion picture. Sources of entertainment film and features now available are outlined. Attitude of large producers toward supplying 16-mm. sound prints, and foreign sources of material are mentioned."

Television a Subject

Friday evening's program will be devoted to the subject of television with a general paper and illustrations by Ralph R. Beal, research supervisor of the Radio Corporation of America. "RCA Developments in Television," is the subject of this paper.

Among the many papers to be read will be one by G. Gaudio, Academy cinematographic award recipient last year. Mr. Gaudio's paper is "A New Viewpoint on the Lighting of Motion Pictures."

Because of the growing interest in colored stills for advertising purposes, O. O. Ceccarini will present a paper on "Color Print Processes."

The Agfa-Ansco Corporation will have a paper "The New Agfacolor Process" which describes for the first time in this country this new process.

H. Joachim will review "Twenty Years Development in High Frequency Cameras," a paper on research in Germany in the field of high speed motion picture cameras.

Transmission Meters

Of particular interest to sound engineers will be a symposium on transmission meters in which four or five instruments developed in the last year will be described.

W. J. Albersheim, of Electrical Research Products, will deliver a paper "A Device for Direct Reproduction from Variable Density Sound Negatives."

The papers sessions have been arranged according to subject matter and sessions devoted to the following subjects will be held: studio problems; color; instruments; acoustics and sound; laboratory and projection; apparatus symposium; sound equipment, and television.

The semi-annual banquet will be held on Wednesday evening.

The complete program follows:

EDUCATIONAL MARKS 22ND ANNIVERSARY

During the week that marked its 22nd birthday anniversary, Educational Pictures scored one of the three highest totals of business for a week in the last four years, according to Twentieth Century-Fox, distributor of the pictures. The period, May 9th to 15th, was also the second week of the May Anniversary Month campaign and the total bookings exceeded that for the corresponding period last year by more than 25 per cent.

New York Sales Tax Is Extended To July 1, 1938

The extension of the New York City sales tax of two per cent, which applies to film rentals within the city limits, until July 1, 1938, was assured this week when Governor Herbert Lehman at Albany signed the Buckley Bill which authorizes the continuation. The bill authorizes the city to use whatever emergency measures of taxation it deems necessary to aid in balancing the municipal budget.

At the same time, in Washington, partial repeal of the admission tax was sought by Representative Bernard Sirovich of New York in a bill introduced in Congress which would lift the tax so far as the legitimate theatre is concerned. The bill provided specifically that the repeal should not apply to motion pictures, radio, television, stock or vaudeville performers. At the same time it was announced that a new copyright measure, representing a unification of the pending Duffy, Sheppard and Guffy bills, may be introduced in Congress this month by Senator F. Ryan Duffy, Wisconsin. Experts, Mr. Duffy said, were now analyzing the three proposals.

The two per cent tax bill on all admissions was signed this week by Governor Teller Ammons of Colorado. There are no exceptions to the levy and the tax will be collected by means of tokens of one-fifth of a cent in value. Theatres cannot absorb the tax, which is to be collected at once.

A graduated tax on theatres to raise revenue for public schools has also been introduced into the House at Tallahassee, Fla., by Representatives Harrell of Hamilton and Winbum of Lafayette. Circuit houses, under the measure, would be subject to higher rates than single theatre units. Beginning at $25 for a single theatre, the bill provides levies up to $500 on each house in circuits of 20 or more theatres.

The two per cent Iowa sales tax which applies to admissions has been extended for two years under a bill passed by its legislature prior to its recent adjournment. A measure prohibiting the use of public buildings for entertainment purposes in competition with theatres was also enacted.

A legislative record of some sort was established during the recent session of the Ohio state legislature which saw the introduction of only 21 different measures directly or indirectly affecting the industry. Of the 21 measures, 18 were defeated, two were passed and one was left tabled. The two which were passed were a civil rights measure prohibiting racial discrimination and a bill extending Ohio's three per cent admission tax to March, 1938.

As Pennsylvania exhibitors were heartened this week with the report that the amendment to include theatres in the chain store tax bill would run into a snag in the lower house at Harrisburg, Philadelphia theatre operators were preparing to oppose the measure calling for a tax on each 25 cents of admission to places of amusement being considered by the city council. The measure will replace the state tax which will expire June 1, if it is passed. Another measure pending in Harrisburg would require theatre employers to enter into collective bargaining with their employes.

Music Hall and Center Theatre Loss $4,521,592

The Music Hall and the Center theatres in New York had a net loss of $4,521,592 for the four and one-quarter-year period beginning February 1, 1933, and ended April 30, last, John E. Hansen, comptroller of Rockefeller Center, told Special Master George W. Alger at a hearing on the RKO reorganization plan proposed by the Atlas Corporation this week.

Rockefeller Center has a $9,100,000 claim against RKO for default on leases for the theatres and Radio City office space, which the RKO reorganization plan proposes to settle for 500,000 shares of new RKO common stock.

Of the loss reported for the period, $1,663,778 was on the Music Hall and $2,857,814 for the Center. It was disclosed, however, that if certain items of real estate taxes, ground rents, interest on fee, investment, depreciation and amortization were eliminated, the Music Hall's loss would be transformed into a profit of $2,823,261 for the period, while the Center's aggregate loss would be reduced to approximately $27,000.

Periodic reports on the Music Hall showed a gross of $2,146,018 and expenses and charges of $2,461,301 for the period beginning Feb. 1, 1933, and ending Aug. 31, 1933; gross of $3,910,746 and expenses and charges of $4,331,123 for the period from Sept. 1, 1933, to Aug. 31, 1934; gross of $3,932,911 and expenses and charges of $4,284,768 for the period from Sept. 1, 1934, to Aug. 31, 1935; gross of $3,918,295 and expenses and charges of $4,284,768 for the period from Sept. 1, 1935, to Aug. 31, 1936, and gross of $2,628,154, with expenses and charges of $2,907,346 for the period from Sept. 1, 1936, to April 30, 1937.

A breakdown of Music Hall expenses and charges for the final eight-month period, given by Russell Downing, treasurer, disclosed that the stage show and orchestra cost $450,000 more than the Music Hall's film rental. Cost of the stage show and orchestra during the period was given as $973,736; film rental, $526,054; advertising and publicity, $249,959; real estate taxes, $136,720, and depreciation and amortization, $192,248.

During the same five periods cited, the Center reported a gross of $551,571 and expenses and charges of $936,521 in the first period; gross of $449,604 and expenses and charges of $1,088,299 in the second; gross of $73,655 and expenses and charges of $780,474 in the third; gross of $447,454 and expenses and charges of $1,216,855 in the fourth, and gross of $106,538 with expenses of $464,488 in the final period ended April 30 last.

Jenssen Decision Upheld

The court of appeals at Sacramento, Cal., this week upheld the decision of a lower Los Angeles court which refused to grant damages to Carla Jenssen in her suit against RKO Studios in which she charged plagiarism of a story submitted, and refused by the studio, in 1934. Miss Jenssen claimed that her manuscript was copied, then returned to her, and that the story later appeared in motion picture form.

STAGE READY TO CALL ON FILMS FOR HELP IN RESTORATION MOVE

American Theatre Council Will Open First "Convention" Monday in New York with All Interests Represented

The legitimate theatre is about to undertake its most formidable attempt to restore the stage to the profitable and prominent position it once held, a ranking which it has lost, down through the years, to motion pictures and radio.

With that objective the American Theatre Council on Monday will open, at the Hotel Astor in New York, the first "convention" ever held by the stage as a unit and embracing all interests—producers, managers, playwrights, players, press, and the crafts.

The motion picture is directly involved, for the convention aims to arrive at some means by which the film industry can be induced to contribute to the rehabilitation move.

The stage feels that the motion picture is morally obligated to participate, its leaders frequently asserting that the stage is drying up as a source of talent and story material, and, therefore, those sources are closing to Hollywood.

At the seventh general session, on Thursday morning, the convention will concentrate exclusively on the relationship between the motion picture and the theatre. The principal subjects to be discussed are: (1) Uniform motion picture contracts for stage players; (2) Time off for the actor and the dramatist from Hollywood work to enable them to engage in stage work; (3) Improving mutual relationships, and, (4) The opening of motion picture theatres to legitimate plays.

Helen Hayes To Open Convention

The convention will open shortly after noon on Monday with an address of welcome by Helen Hayes and five-minute speeches by Frank Gillmore, president of Actors Equity Association; Sidney Howard, president of the Dramatists Guild; Marcus Heiman, president of the League of New York Theatres, and James J. Brennan, president of Theatrical Protective Union Local 1.

The first discussion meeting will follow at 2:30 p.m. on "The Producer and the Theatre," with Brock Pemberton as chairman and Worthington Miner and Morris Gest as speakers. The second general discussion session, at 10:30 a.m. on Tuesday, will concern "The Dramatist and the Theatre." Mr. Howard will preside, and Marc Connelly, Arthur Kober, Paul Green, Philip Dunning, Barrett H. Clark and others will speak.

Delegates from theatre crafts, producers, owners, magazines, papers and individual players have been registering for the convention, with Equity's 25 delegates heading the list. Besides Mr. Gillmore, the speakers representing Equity will be Kenneth MacKenna, Robert T. Haines, Edward Fielding, Florence Reed, Blanche Yurka, Charles Coburn and Augustin Duncan.

The convention will close on Thursday, May 27, with a midnight supper, for the convenience of theatre and radio performers.

Equity said that the whole theatre world will be represented by delegates or observers at the convention, including the League of New York Theatres; the United Scenic Artists, Theatrical Protective Union No. 1 of the IATSE; the Dramatists' Guild of the Authors' League of America; the American Federation of Actors; two organizations of press representatives; the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers Union; the Theatre Authority; a number of amateur groups, theatrical publications, and others interested in the theatre.

Gardner Harding, convention manager, said that a period of public discussion will follow each general session.

Warners Victors in Action Against Loew

The federal court in Boston this week awarded Warner Brothers $2,000 damages in its copyright suit against the Hutcheson Amusement Company, and E. M. Loew Theatres' subsidiary, as a result of a complaint brought against the exhibitor for bicycling eight Vitaphone short subjects. In addition, the respondent was assessed $1,000 attorneys' fees.

The complainant said that E. M. Loew Theatres had purchased the shorts for the Casco, Portland, Me., and switched them without consent of the distributors to the New Portland, same city. Edward A. Sargoy of the Copyright Protection Bureau assisted in presenting the cast for Warners.

Court Orders Loew's Examination by Brandt

The New York supreme court this week ordered that an executive of Loew's, Inc., submit to an examination before trial in the suit brought by the Brandt Circuit and other independent exhibitors for a permanent injunction against the new split week policy of the Loew circuit. The examination was set for May 24.

Mr. Brandt maintains that the recent change in Loew policy for its circuit from playing pictures on a four day-three day split week to a five day-two day split was a violation of the state anti-trust law.

Settle Brooklyn Claim

The Continental Bank and Trust Company of New York, trustees in the receivership of Flatbush Nevins Corporation, owners of the Fox Brooklyn, has been granted permission by the federal court in Manhattan to settle the $10,000 claim of Jack Nadell for $750. Mr. Nadell, an acrobat, was injured during a stage show performance at the theatre on February 3, 1933.

Denied Shubert Writ

Federal Judge Robert T. Patterson in New York has denied a temporary injunction to Richard W. Fitch against Jacob and Lee Shubert, Shubert Theatres Corporation and the Select Theatres Corporation to restrain them from further alleged infringement of "Barbara Frietchie, the Frederick Girl" in the Shubert play, "My Maryland."

Amended Complaint Filed

F. Fay Kaplan has filed an amended complaint in the federal court at New York in her suit against the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation. Miss Kaplan is the assignee of the cover design of the Theatre Magazine dated August, 1929, which she claims was infringed in a scenic effect in "George White's Scandals of 1935."

Gets Writ on "Horizon"

The Saenger circuit and affiliates in New Orleans has secured a temporary injunction against Columbia to prevent the company from releasing "Lost Horizon" to unaffiliated theatres. Hearings will probably be held late this week.

Industry Attends Carl Levi Rites

More than 1,000 friends, relatives and industry representatives attended the funeral services Sunday for Carl Levi, Loew division manager, at Riverside Memorial Chapel in New York. Interment was at Mount Hope Cemetery, Cypress Hills, N. Y.

Following an eulogy by Rabbi L. Mortimer Bloom, services were conducted by Prodence Lodge of the F. and A. M., and Projection Square Club 784.

Among those attending were Nicholas M. Schenck, David Bernstein, C. C. Moskowitz, Leopold Friedman, Isidore Frey and Joseph Vogel heading a large delegation of Loew's organization members, as well as Louis Frisch, Sam Rinzler, Captain Walter Singer of the public assembly division of the New York Fire Department; Chief Inspector Seery of the Police Department, and all Loew managers in the metropolitan area, and a large group of actors and actresses, headed by Nils T. Granlund.

Mr. Levi had been associated with Loew's for the past 30 years, having started as a doorman and gradually being promoted to his present post, which he had occupied during the past 10 years. There were 14 theatres under his supervision.

Mr. Levi, who was born in Germany 57 years ago, is survived by his widow, Rachel H., and a daughter, Mrs. Jennie Goodman, as well as by two sisters and two brothers.

Agree in Ziegfeld Suit

Surrogate William J. Shiels in White Plains, N. Y., will be asked to approve a $17,500 settlement of the injunction suit brought against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to prevent the showing of "The Great Ziegfeld" until a share of the profits has been turned over to the estate of the late Florenz Ziegfeld. The producing company was sued on the contention that the name "Ziegfeld" denoted a "unique form of entertainment" and was the estate's sole asset.

Redmond Wins Action

Jack Redmond, golfer, has been granted a permanent injunction and a six-cent verdict against Columbia Pictures by Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora in New York after a two-day trial. Mr. Redmond charged a violation of the civil rights law because a series of shots for which he posed for the Fox Movietone News was included in the short, "Golfing Rhythm," produced by Columbia.

Court Permits Borrowing

The International Mutoscope Reel Company, now in reorganization, was given permission this week by the federal court in New York to borrow $7,000 from the Linde Factors Corporation for the purpose of paying a 10 per cent dividend due their creditors. A chattel mortgage on machinery and fixtures is to be given to the factors as security.

"Shall We Dance" played 350 simultaneous first run engagements in large towns and cities during the past three weeks, according to Radio Pictures, with a 100 per cent holdover in the first 50 dates.

OBITUARIES

Steedle's Death To Delay Fox Hearings

The death last week of Federal Referee Robert E. Steedle in Atlantic City, N. J., will cause a temporary halt in the William Fox bankruptcy litigation. Mr. Steedle had been working under the supervision of Federal Judge John B. Avis of Camden, and his death leaves Judge Avis in charge. The understanding is, however, that under customary procedure a successor will be appointed jointly by the four federal judges of the New Jersey district.

Meanwhile, in New York, trial of the $1,250,000 damage suit of the Lexington Avenue and 59th St. Corporation against Mr. Fox has been postponed to October 4 to allow the plaintiff to adjust its claim with Mr. Fox's receiver in bankruptcy. The action charges Mr. Fox with breach of contract to build a theatre on premises owned by the plaintiff.

Al Friedlander Funeral

Funeral services were held Sunday night in Brooklyn at the Flatbush Memorial Chapel for Al Friedlander, former president of Fortune Films, who died last Wednesday of a heart attack. He is survived by his widow, Yvonne, and a sister, Gertrude Waterfall.

W. E. Dickson

Funeral services were held this week at Lemmon, S. D., for W. E. Dickson, owner of the Grand and Aristo theatres, who died last Wednesday at the Lemmon Hospital. Born at Dallas in 1872, Mr. Dickson first worked as a railroad telegrapher and then went into exhibition.

William Cattell

William Cattell, retired actor who was prominent in traveling companies of 50 years ago, died at Bloomfield, N. J., last week at the age of 80. He had retired 10 years ago.

Reginald Ford

Reginald Ford, prominent exhibitor in England and France and president of the Cineac Circuit of News theatres in France, Belgium and Holland, died suddenly in Amsterdam last Wednesday. He was credited with introducing American exhibition methods in England and France.

Jack McGann

Jack McGann, assistant branch manager for Warners in Boston, suffered a heart attack and died at the Waldorf Astoria in New York last Saturday morning where he had been attending the Warner sales convention. He had been with the company many years.

George H. Thorpe

George H. Thorpe, theatre owner of Crosby, Minn., was killed Monday in an attempted robbery. The slayer was believed to have escaped in a car taken from five University of Minnesota students. Mr. Thorpe was 65 years old.

Bach Predicts Quality Clause for England

London opinion holds that the new British quota legislation will contain a "quality" clause, W. A. Bach, managing director for Western Electric in London, said in New York this week upon his arrival for the annual series of conferences with home office officials of Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc.

On leaving New York, Mr. Bach will visit Canada and California, where he will study the latest advances in production technique in Hollywood.

Commenting on conditions in Europe, Mr. Bach was most optimistic, saying that advancing trends are continuing in every phase of the industry.

Referring to Parliament's contemplated revision of existing quota laws, Mr. Bach said, "The sincerity of the British authorities relative to the maintenance and development of the industry cannot be doubted and it seems evident that any re-enactment of quota legislation will contain a 'quality' provision aimed at the elimination of unsatisfactory financial conditions surrounding production."

Commerce Chambers Fraternize

Louis B. Mayer was host at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Hollywood to a delegation of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce arriving on the first run of the new and streamlined Super-Chief. Byron C. Hanna, president of the Los Angeles Chamber, said in a welcoming speech, "The three factors in the growth of Los Angeles were railroads, oil and motion pictures, and today we pay tribute to two. The Santa Fe's first trans-continental line started our growth in 1885. At the turn of the century came motion pictures, carrying our attractions to all parts of the world, as well as the theme of American goods and customs."

Maxwell Joyce to RKO

J. Maxwell Joyce, former chief supervisor of amusements of the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago, has been added to the public relations staff of Radio Pictures under Leon J. Bamberger. He will handle the mid-west territory, which includes Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines and Sioux Falls.

Hold First Orphan Show

The first of a series of semi-weekly free motion picture shows for shut-ins provided by the Cleveland Variety Club with the cooperation of distributors and projectionists, took place this week at St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum. This was the first time films were shown in the institution and the first time that many of the inmates had ever seen a motion picture.

Elliott, Tapley Sailing

Clyde E. Elliott and Colin Tapley, Paramount contract player were to leave Los Angeles for Singapore Thursday with a camera crew on a six-month trek to film "Booloo" in the Orient. The story is by Walter Post.

Julius Reubenson is in New York seeking product for distribution in Europe.

"Duosonic" Sound Is Introduced by GB

"Duosonic" sound mechanism was introduced by Gaumont British as the latest development of its experimental laboratories this week and according to the company is being installed in theatres throughout the United Kingdom replacing old equipment.

It is claimed that with the new system a greater realism, clarity and tone for both speech and music are obtained. The new equipment enables the actor to "spray" sound to every part of the theatre, thus eliminating blind spots, according to GB.

Jean Dalrymple, former secretary to Jose Iturbi, pianist, is now in Hollywood as assistant to Grace Moore.

Warner "Cool Campaign" Launched in Chicago

In preparation for the summer season Warner Bros. theatres in the Chicago territory are trying out a new advertising campaign.

A "Cool Campaign" is being launched in all 19 Warner theatres in the area. Theatre entrances are being covered with specially built fronts that advertise the cooling systems. A 24 sheet advertising campaign will be a part of the activity. Lobby posters, special valances, increased advertising in newspapers, trailers, handbills and huge "blowups" of photographs of the various cooling plant units in the Chicago theatres of the circuit are all being used in the campaigns.

QUOTA PROBLEM SETTLING INTO ISSUE OF BRITISH VS AMERICAN INTERESTS

Six British Distributors Allied with Film Group (Producers); KRS as a Body Speaks for American Importers

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

The controversy regarding the Quota suggestions of the so-called Moyne Report on amendment of the Films Act is settling down on a clear basis of British versus American interests.

Nominally the recent joint trade discussions have been between the Kinematograph Renters Society, representing British and American distributors, the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries, speaking for producers, and the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, for theatre men.

In fact, however, the division of interests is somewhat different. The KRS, in these discussions, is no longer a homogeneous body. The six British companies represented on the Council have dissociated themselves from the official KRS policy and are to be found allied with the Film Group. The KRS is left as a body representing, and speaking for, the interests of American importers.

The important feature of this development is that the Film Group and the KRS stand for fundamentally different policies. The former are urging a Reciprocity Policy, already outlined, the essence of which is that American companies in England shall give British companies guarantees of an American release, in return for a remission of Quota obligations in England. The KRS wants a new Quota basis, under which American companies will be free to make a few good pictures in place of a number of bad ones.

Tri-Part Discussions Suspended

The essential difference between these policies is underlined by the fact that the tri-part discussions by the trade bodies, designed to evolve an agreed trade policy, anticipating and rendering unnecessary Government action, have been suspended. On April 29th the CEA was in conference with the KRS in the morning and with the Film Group in the afternoon. The KRS and the Film Group did not meet. The CEA issued a statement that "all sections are considering the various points under consideration, with a view to reporting to their respective Councils." Later it was reported the CEA would adhere to its demand for a quality clause in the quota.

Insiders freely interpreted this statement as an indication that deadlock again had been reached as between American distributors and British producers, supported by British distributors. A general anticipation was that the three trade bodies again might find it necessary to make separate representations to the Board of Trade, in face of the declaration of Dr. Leslie Burgin, Parliamentary Secretary, that the choice before the industry was: "Organize yourselves or be organized from without."

It appears a possibility at this moment that the Government may be called upon to make its own decision on the vital point raised by the Film Group's demand for reciprocity and the American distributors' objection to a system which they describe as one of forced exports.

Vexed questions of international law and of trade treaties between the United Artists and England may well be invoked if, in the last resort, the Government is left to make its own decision on this point.

The possibility, even if remote, of a trade agreement, making practicable submission of a universally agreed alternative to the "Moyne" suggestions, appears to rest largely with the CEA which has played the part of intermediary and spectator in recent discussions of the Quota problem, in which it is not directly or vitally concerned.

CEA Wants Concessions

The CEA is out to make the best bargain possible for theatre men. It wants concessions from the KRS before it will support the distributors against the Film Group. In more precise terms, it wants concessions, in regard to trading conditions and contract terms, from American distributors, and over and above all the key concession of a Government Arbitration Board.

There will be many informal discussions, behind locked doors, before it is finally decided whether the Films Act controversy will develop into a larger controversy covering the general problem of Anglo-American trade relations, but the present view is that trade differences are irreconcilable and that the Cabinet will have to frame its own revision of the Films Act.

Odeon's Control of County Cinemas Makes Circuit Third Largest, with Possibility of Being Foremost by 1939

Odeon-County Third Circuit

Establishment of an Odeon-County circuit, by acquisition of control by Odeon Theatres, Ltd. in Entertainments and General Investments Corporation, Ltd., controlling County Cinemas, Ltd., sets up a British theatre group inferior in numbers only to those controlled by the Gaumont-British Corporation and by Associated British Pictures Corporation.

The Gaumont-British circuit includes more than 300 theatres; the ABP circuit just under 300; Odeon-County will start with 250. Most of these theatres are recent constructions. They are being added to very rapidly. The extension of the Odeon group has been an outstanding feature of the recent two years and has been very largely responsible for the agitation of the CEA against overbuilding.

Early Capital Issue Seen

Immediate results of the agreement reached between Oscar Deutsch of Odeon and Charles J. Donada of County are likely to be an early issue of new capital in the form of £4,000,000 five per cent debentures, and a definite campaign, in association with United Artists, for reduction of the release period in England from six months. It was announced some time ago that experiments in immediate release would be made in certain Odeon theatres by UA and it is now probable that it will become a regular policy in the whole circuit. A key factor will be the opening, in the late summer, of the Odeon-Alhambra, new de luxe theatre under construction in Leicester Square, London, as Odeon's first "West End" house. Premiere runs of UA features at the Alhambra are likely to be followed by immediate current release.

This practice will assist, financially, the British producers associated with United Artists.

There is a distinct possibility that by 1939 the Odeon-County group may be the biggest single combination in the British field. It is a general belief that Murray Silverstone of United Artists, now in New York on his annual visit, has been a prime mover in completion of the present agreement.

A Holding Company

Odeon Theatres, Ltd. is a holding company, with an issued capital of £100,000 of which Mr. Deutsch holds all but £100. Each theatre is owned by a separate company. County Cinemas, Ltd., has an issued capital of £108,707, of which £79,175 is held by the Entertainments and General Investments Corporation. The last-named company has an issued capital of £167,215 preference shares and 163,255 one-shilling ordinaries. It is obvious from these figures that most of the extension of both companies has been financed by loan capital, privately raised. Either in the form of the debenture issue already mentioned, or in some other, a big market operation is a certain sequel to the deal. It will be handled by Phillip Hill and Partners.

Mr. Deutsch, apart from his theatre interests, controls the BTH sound system, which in numbers of British theatres wired is second only to Western Electric. He began to acquire theatres in 1925, starting in his home town, Birmingham. Mr. Donada, who will continue to control the County circuit, inside the new group, was a Paramount executive in London from 1913 until 1932.

The "Dixey Scheme"

On the same day the Deutsch-Donada agreement was announced, the "Dixey Scheme,"

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by BRUCE ALLAN

Colour Feature

London Films has started on an all-Technicolor version of the A. E. W. Mason story, "The Drum," the locale of which is the northwest frontier of India. Over there already is Geoffrey Boothby, the unit production manager, supervising background and atmosphere shots. The India Office is cooperating. Studio sequences are being shot concurrently at Denham, where Zoltan Korda is directing.

"The Drum" is a follow-up of "Elephant Boy," and will star the boy hero, Sabu. Oliver Garrett, who has been writing the script of "Four Feathers" for London, is doing the adaptation.

Though many of the stories about the British production slump are painfully true, it is worth noting that "The Drum" makes the fifth film in current production at Denham. The others are "The Squeaker," with Edmund Lowe and Ann Todd, directed by William K. Howard for London Films; "Action for Slander," Victor Saville Production directed by Tim Whelan with Clive Brook, Margaretta Scott and Ann Todd; "Victoria the Great," Herbert Wilcox—Imperator production; "The First and the Last," Basil Dean production for London, with Vivien Leigh, Leslie Banks, and Laurence Olivier.

A sixth picture to occupy Denham space in the immediate future will be "South Riding," for which the signing of Robert Donat is announced. This also is a Saville-London film.

Tim Whelan has finished "Action for Slander" with scenes for Clive Brook and Arthur Margetson on location at Stanmore.

Tamara Desni, who made a success in "Fire Over England," has been added to the cast of "The Squeaker."

Coronation at Denham

Getting ahead of the Westminster event by more than a week, Herbert Wilcox staged a Coronation at Denham in an interior of the Abbey which the studio staff erected in less than seven days but which was an exact reproduction of the setting of Queen Victoria's crowning, exactly one hundred years ago. Of course the scene was for "Victoria the Great," the Anna Neagle-Anton Walbrook special, for Radio release.

Mr. Wilcox's flair for showmanship will provide the public, in this episode of the film, with a picture of a traditional British ceremony which in most of its details will serve to show exactly what happened on May 12, but will have an advantage, by close-up, tining, and repetition, over newsreels of a Coronation.

The big moment of the Denham ceremony came when, with the organ peeling, the Peers and Peeresses of England, carrying their coronets, rose to greet the young Queen as, preceded by the Archbishop of Canterbury, she walked to the altar rail for the crown to be placed upon her head.

H. B. Warner (Lord Melbourne), Mary Morris (the Duchess of Kent), C. V. France (Archbishop of Canterbury), James Dale (Duke of Wellington), Paul Leyssac (Baron Stockmar) and Hubert Harben (Lord Conyngham) are leading figures in this spectacular sequence.

Another sequence for "Victoria the Great" has pictured the arrival in England, for his first visit as suitor of the young Queen, of Prince Albert, later to be known as the Prince Consort. With his brother Ernest, the young German is seen on a channel packet-boat which, due to a gale, actually took five hours to cross from Calais.

Stafford Colour Picture

Premier-Stafford Productions plans to make "Dick Turpin Rides Again" in colour. John Stafford, the director, made a Turpin film in 1932, and Victor McLaglen played the title role.

A new Turpin theory,—that the famous highwayman was a "gentleman-adventurer," but that an underworld thug impersonated him on occasion,—has been adopted, in order to meet the demand of the public for a romantic figure while recognizing the established fact that the historical Turpin was a somewhat sordid rogue. Colour is thought by the studio to offer exceptional opportunities for the most effective presentation of the famous "ride to York" by Turpin on his mare Black Bess. The process to be used has not been decided.

Jack Buchanan Starts

"Smash and Grab," first feature of Jack Buchanan Productions, is on the floor at Pinewood under the direction of Tim Whelan, with Buchanan himself and Elsie Randolph in the leads and Anthony Holles, Edmund Willard, David Burns and Lawrence Grossmith in the company. Roy Clark is at the camera.

Tim Whelan later will direct "The Sky's the Limit" in conjunction with Lee Garmes, as the second Buchanan production, and the third will be "Sweet Devil," with Bobby Howes and Jean Gillie. Planned as a fourth feature is a Rene Clair production, with Adele Astaire opposite Buchanan.

QUOTA BECOMING NATIONAL ISSUE

under its official title of British Independent Exhibitors (Distribution) Co., Ltd., issued its full prospectus and details of an offer of 1,100,000 ordinary shares, of two-shilling value, for public subscription. Full absorption of these shares would provide £110,000, to which would be added £10,000 from the issue of exhibitors' franchise shares (representing 100,000 at present applied for out of 400,000 authorized), but it was stated that the directors would go to allotment on a total of £50,000 which already was secured. The "Dixey Scheme" is therefore in active being, as an exhibitors' cooperative distribution plan with many resemblances to the original First National Circuit of America, but with some important differences from that body.

Formed by Independents

Chief of these differences is that whereas First National was a combination of key-theatres, the BIEDC is very largely a group of theatres of moderate capacity, owned by independent exhibitors. It is understood to have obtained the support of over 300 theatres; several minor circuits have taken franchises for districts where they are up against product difficulties. If these circuits ultimately franchise all their theatres, the BIEDC "circuit" will grow to 800. A current claim is that the 300 already lined up offer an average seating capacity of 800-900.

The prospectus, with Capt. A. C. N. Dixey listed as chairman of a board of directors in which other figures are J. H. Iles, controller of Beele Vue, Manchester and Dreamland, Margate and A. George Smith, independent producer and onetime Goldwyn chief in London, gives details of a number of interesting contracts, two of the most important of which concern Rock Studios, Ltd., in which Mr. Iles is the leading financial figure.

By one of these contracts, Rock Studios, Ltd., subscribes for 350,000 ordinary shares (value £35,000) in BIEDC; while the other BIEDC leases space in the Rock studios at Elstree at a minimum rental in the first year of £16,250, rising to £32,500 a year in four years, and agrees to use the Rock studios exclusively.

The first film to be handled by BIEDC is "Cotton Queen," a Joe Rock production.

Promising fifteen pictures in the first year, BIEDC announces for early trade show, in addition to "Cotton Queen": "Widow's Island," directed by Maurice Elvey, "Mr. Stringfellow Says No," with Neil Hamilton, "Rhythm Racketeer," with Harry Roy and his Band, and "The Edge of the World," the Rock production staged on the remote Scottish island, Foula.

Lou Morris has announced plans for a new theatre circuit to be known as British Empire Cinemas. The individual houses of the chain will be named after the various British possessions.

Ask Quota on Shorts

The British Film Institute has sent a resolution endorsing a separate British quota on shorts, as recommended by the Moyne committee, to the Board of Trade and the Board of Education. The group expressed the opinion that the production of British documentary and educational films thus would be stimulated.

Postpone Fox-Sentry Trial

The New York supreme court this week postponed to May 26 trial of the actions of the Sentry Safety Control Corporation and Joseph E. Cohen against William Fox and the Fox Film Corporation to permit Mr. Fox to apply for discharge of the claim in his New Jersey bankruptcy proceedings. Sentry asks $1,300,000 damages and Mr. Cohen seeks $300,000 for an alleged breach of contract made several years ago, when Mr. Fox agreed to place Sentry safety control devices on all Fox projectors. Mr. Fox is charged with falsely representing his authority to bind the Fox Film Corporation.

Frohman Renamed Actors Fund Head

Daniel Frohman, veteran legitimate theatre producer, was re-elected president of the Actors Fund of America in New York this week at the organization's 55th annual meeting. The organization provides funds for needy stage performers.

In a short address after his re-election, Mr. Frohman asserted that the opportunities for a successful theatre in New York were "rapidly improving." He held that present-day theatre audiences have become "more sophisticated" and are becoming "more theatre-conscious" than ever before.

In addition to Mr. Frohman other officers of the fund who were re-elected were Walter Vincent, first vice-president; Bernard A. Reinold, second vice-president; Sam A. Scribner, treasurer, and Robert Campbell, secretary. George M. Cohan, Charles Dow Clark and J. Herbert Mack were re-elected to the board of trustees for a three-year term. Vinton Freedley, Warren P. Munsell and Richard Sterling were elected to the board.

Increase of Common Shares In Paramount Proposed

The stockholders of Paramount Pictures, Inc., will be asked at their annual meeting on June 15th to vote in favor of increasing the authorized common stock of the company from 4,500,000 shares to 6,000,000 shares, and also to reduce the first and second preferred stock by the number of shares which will have been converted into common stock prior to the meeting. The corporation on Wednesday sent to its stockholders notice of the annual meeting.

Commenting upon the proposed increase of authorized common stock, Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, said that Paramount has no plans for issuing additional common shares, is planning no new financing and has had no negotiations concerning such additional stock.

"The reason for asking the stockholders to increase the authorized common stock at this time," said Mr. Griffis, "is to place the corporation in a position to issue such stock in the future for any corporate purpose which the board of directors deems to be for the benefit of the corporation."

The stockholders will also take action upon the contract which the board of directors has recommended be made with Adolph Zukor as head of the production activities of the corporation.

Norwegian Houses And Receipts for 1936 Show Gains

The number of Norwegian motion picture theatres in operation at the close of 1936 was approximately 260, as compared with 240 of the year before, Consul General William H. Beck of Oslo reported to the Department of Commerce in Washington. Although many of these houses are located in the country towns with small populations and have a seating capacity of only 200, or less, they are all wired for sound.

Oslo, the country's capitol, has 13 modern theatres and although there has long been a need for more houses only recently have steps been taken to remedy this situation. Present plans indicate that at least six new houses will be erected in the near future, two of which will be in the downtown district. This will increase the seating capacity of the town from 10,000 to more than 13,000, which is a small enough number for a city with a population of 270,000 inhabitants.

Theatre receipts in Norway also showed an increase in 1936 and totaled approximately Kr. 13,000,000 as compared to Kr. 11,480,372 in 1935.

During 1936 there were 740 pictures reviewed by the board of censors, of which 480 were reviewed during the last half of the year. Ten pictures were refused licenses.

Only one Norwegian picture was produced during 1936, and this was released during last December to favorable comments by the press. It is expected that four new Norwegian films will be made in 1937, two of which are already completed.

Panama Approves Film

After seeing a private showing of the picture, "Swing High, Swing Low," President Juan Demostenes Arosemena of Panama and his cabinet this week withdrew objections to the film, agreeing it contained nothing offensive to the country. The Foreign Office banned the picture a fortnight ago.

Columbia Office Players

A dramatic group, "The Columbian Players," has been organized at the Columbia home office in New York under Morton Goldstein to study legitimate production. A tentative schedule of the group calls for the staging of a full-length play and several of one act next fall.

Gildemeyer to Cuba

F. H. Gildemeyer, formerly in the Detroit office of Electrical Research Products, Inc., has left New York for Porto Rico where he will be stationed as branch manager of the Western Electric Company of Cuba.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

COME CLOSER, FOLKS: James Dunn, Marian Marsh—Jimmie Dunn very good. Continuity poor. Story ends up like they ran out of film. O. K. for double bill but will not stand up alone. Too many of these, as we call them, $10,000 productions. No draw. Just a picture.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HEIR TO TROUBLE: Ken Maynard, Joan Perry—Played this old but it carried a surprise for all who saw it. Double feature with it on Sunday.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

MORE THAN A SECRETARY: Jean Arthur, George Brent—A good comedy drama. Cast is good. Played April 3.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PENNIES FROM HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Madge Evans—At last Bing Crosby has a role that gives him a chance to be something more than a mawkish, moon eyed crooner captain of a moron ship in a choppy sea of melody. He is a real human being in "Pennies," likable and worthy of respect. His comedy sense is fine and his voice is lovely. Good attendance and new friends for Bing.—Mary Hayes Davis, Dixie Crystal and La Belle Theatres, Clewiston and La Belle, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

THEODORA GOES WILD: Irene Dunne, Melvyn Douglas—Play this three days. Brother, it's a natural. Everybody was plenty happy over this picture. Don't pass this up. If they don't come the first night, they will the second.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

UNKNOWN RANGER, THE: Robert Allen, Martha Tibbetts—A very good western. Not as good a draw as Buck Jones. Well enjoyed by those who saw it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilburv. Ontario, Can. General patronage.

First National

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1937: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell, Victor Moore—A very disappointing picture. Dick Powell has always been popular here, but he is the whole show in this one, with the exception of the dance ensemble. Joan Blondell is all right for a program picture, but very poor as a lead. Victor Moore steals the show. This one did not draw and did not please. Running time, 101 minutes. Played April 23-25.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

GUNS OF THE PECOS: Dick Foran, Anne Nagel—Average western. Foran's singing good. Played March 30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MARKED WOMAN: Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart—Warner's best next to "God's Country and the Woman." We are waiting for Humphrey Bogart again.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

MARKED WOMAN: Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart, Isabel Jewell—Good business the first day, but failed to hold up the second. Nevertheless, I considered it a fine picture, delivering a punch-laden lesson that should be on the must list for adolescents. Played May 3-4.—H. A. Griswold, Sewanee Union Theatre, Sewanee, Tenn. University patronage.

MARKED WOMAN: Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart, Lola Lane—Nice; everyone liked it; a drawing card in any spot. Running time, 95 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DEVIL IS A SISSY, THE: Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper, Mickey Rooney—An excellent feature; good story and fine cast. Pleased. Played April 21-22.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

LOVE ON THE RUN: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable—Ran this one too late to make expenses. Seemed to please those who came. Personally, I thought it the poorest picture these two stars ever made. Good acting, but very poor plot. My patrons do not generally care for this type of picture, but the stars are popular. Played April 30-May 2.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

ROMEO AND JULIET: Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard, John Barrymore—Metro must have thought this would flop in the small towns, for they placed it in their group of "14," but for me it outgrossed "The Great Ziegfeld," "Waikiki Wedding" and other co-called big pictures. With 80 per cent of my trade college prep and high school students, this was a natural. Played April 27-28.—H. R. Griswold, Sewanee Union Theatre, Sewanee, Tenn. University patronage.

Paramount

ALONG CAME LOVE: Irene Hervey, Charles Starrett—A disappointment. We should have left it on the shelf. Don't understand why so many said it was okay. The story is too weak to mention. And it's a bit silly, anyway. Played May 6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND ESCAPES: Ray Milland, Heather Angel—O. K. for weekend or double bill. Lots of action and mystery and some comedy. Chapter out of the old serial style. Patrons satisfied. Running time, 66 minutes. Played May 7-8.—J. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

CLARENCE: Roscoe Karns, Charlotte Wynters—Played on Bank Night. Well received. Got plenty of laughs and good deep ones, too. Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 5-6.—A. E. Eliosen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

GO WEST, YOUNG MAN: Mae West, Randolph Scott—Unfortunately, I showed this during Lent. What a terrible shame for a brilliant woman like Mae West to write and act such a reeking play. Sophisticates as well as adolescent boys and girls certainly saw the technique, the psychology of rampant sex, the modus operandi of an evil woman's work in luring a man to forget honor, duty, everything for physical debasement.—Mary Hayes Davis, Dixie Crystal and La Belle Theatres, Clewiston and La Belle, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

INTERNES CAN'T TAKE MONEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—This story is a trifle grim for children, but for adults is good entertainment, with a well-acted story and careful direction. Locale: clinic of a huge hospital, and gangland haunt. Some swift action and flashes of comedy break the sternness of the drama. Played May 2-3.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

INTERNES CAN'T TAKE MONEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—Everyone liked this one; excellent in any spot. Running time, 75 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS: Charles Ruggles, Alice Brady—Amusing antics of Charlie, who is rescued by a real Boy Scout Troop. The scouting angle makes it adaptable for a tie-up in some way with your local scouts. Played April 10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PLAINSMAN, THE: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—Splendid cast in this epic of the early west, clean and big as a Kansas horizon. A bit of history, a film that should be preserved. Even the highbrow who doesn't like blood and thunder-shoot 'em up films can almost pray that American producers will make at least one a year of such national dramas. Good attendance Friday. Rained Saturday.—Mary Hayes Davis, Dixie Crystal and La Belle Theatres, Clewiston and La Belle, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER: Ralph Bellamy, Katherine Locke—This was well liked by the majority. Can't say it drew much though. Played March 27.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

VALIANT IS THE WORD FOR CARRIE: Gladys George, Arline Judge—Pleased, but failed to draw as it should, although blame title for it. Very good picture.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Shirley Ross, Martha Raye, Bob Burns—Paramount has made a lot of pictures just as good as this one. But somehow the name and stars got before the people and those who only come to the theatre twice a year picked this one for their Spring show and how they came in an all day and night steady rain. Some one remarked if we had had good weather we might have had a crowd. We have just as good or better Paramount pictures with a small crowd.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

Republic

BIG SHOW, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—These words are inadequate for this feature. It might be termed the masterpiece of Gene Autry and his supporters. Would suggest you little theatres hire a big ballyhoo, get out and give it as much publicity for two days' play as you would a no-account road show. You will make money by it and, best of all, your patrons will find all they are looking for. Without question this fills you up as no other picture has ever done.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

HEARTS IN BONDAGE: James Dunn, Charlotte Henry—This one will enable you to meet your patrons face to face as they leave the theatre. James Dunn got near to the hearts of the people in this one. Play it on Sunday.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

OLD CORRAL, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—We have just finished playing "The Old Corral" with Gene Autry. This one "clicked" at the box-office, and the Autry pictures are becoming more popular with each release.—E. E. Harris, Park Theatre, Butte, Mont. General patronage.

RKO Radio

DON'T TELL THE WIFE: Guy Kibbee, Una Merkel—Pretty good comedy drama of the gold mine slickers who, in the end, are the only ones who make nothing out of the mine, which turns out to be "real." Lynne Overman nearly steals the picture, or at least, so thought our patrons. Played April 28-29.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

EX-MRS. BRADFORD, THE: William Powell, Jean Arthur, James Gleason, Eric Blore—First-class entertainment; enjoyed by all my patrons. Running time, 81 minutes. Played April 19.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

LET'S SING AGAIN: Bobby Breen, Henry Armetta—Enjoyed by all, but only good for a double bill, as it is very short. Too bad; this could have been made a good feature. Running time, 8 reels. Played April 8.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

PARK AVENUE LOGGER: George O'Brien, Beatrice Roberts—Good action and comedy. Son is in reality a he-man, but father believes him a sissy and sends him to his lumber camps for "seasoning." George more than holds his own. Played April 30.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

PLOUGH AND THE STARS, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—An Irish picture in a French town that didn't pay its way. A perfect dud that the exhibitor wished he had never played. Pass it up.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can.. General patronage.

WALKING ON AIR: Gene Raymond, Ann Sothern—A fair program picture that we double billed on a week-end. Worth playing. Business below average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WE'RE ON THE JURY: Helen Broderick, Victor Moore—Nice programer for the favorite radio stars and everyone liked it. Running time, 70 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

WINTERSET: Burgess Meredith, Margo—A fine drama. Splendid acting with an appeal to cultured groups of thoughtful people whose percentage is small among pioneer ruralites. Box office not good.—Mary Hayes Davis, Dixie Crystal and La Balle Theatres, Clewiston and La Belle, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

WINTERSET: Burgess Meredith, Margo—All the good acting and artistic endeavor attempted in this grim photoplay could not atone for the distaste it left with our folks. They were strong in their criticism, expressing complete disgust with the whole thing. One scene in particular offended the ladies, that when the supposedly dead man reappears. Played April 7.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WOMAN I LOVE, THE: Miriam Hopkins, Paul Muni—Did not see this but the help reported many favorable comments from all classes. Locale: Paris and the Air Squadron at the front. Picture was first entitled "Escadrille." Running time, 88 minutes. Played May 5-6.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BANJO ON MY KNEE: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—I never saw "life among the lowly" portrayed with such appealing charm to both highbrow and lowbrow. Romantic swains and adolescents who want their heroine to be a lovely princess were held by it.—Mary Hayes Davis, Dixie Crystal and La Belle Theatres, Clewiston and La Belle, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

DOCTOR BULL: Will Rogers, Marian Nixon—Will Rogers the only star we could ever bring back with success to ourselves and pleasure to patrons. "Doctor Bull" not quite as good as "Ambassador Bill" or "State Fair" and the print given us had poor recording. Running time, 77 minutes. Played May 9-10.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

FIFTY ROADS TO TOWN: Don Ameche, Ann Sothern—Patrons thought this a good programer. Running time, 73 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED: Robert Kent, Rosalind Keith—Good subject; good business. Pleased.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

LADIES IN LOVE: Janet Gaynor, Loretta Young, Constance Bennett, Simone Simon—Good stars. Bad picture. Plot (if any) not easily discovered by John and Mrs. Doe. Very little appeal second night.—Mary Hayes Davis, Clewiston and La Belle Theatres, Clewiston and La Belle, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

ONE IN A MILLION: Sonja Henie, Adolphe Menjou, Borrah Minnevitch—A fine cast, a thing of beauty and that rascal Minnevitch a joy forever. Wait until people know him and Sonja better and they'll draw big houses. All who came went away pleased.—Mary Hayes Davis, Dixie Crystal and La Belle Theatres, Clewiston and La Belle, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

ONE IN A MILLION: Sonja Henie, Adolphe Menjou, Don Ameche, Ned Sparks—Excellent picture and enjoyed a very good business. Pleased all.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

ON THE AVENUE: Dick Powell, Madeleine Carroll, Alice Faye—Quite satisfactory light entertainment. Played March 28-29.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets—Personally, I thought this better than "The Country Doctor." Good story and good cast. Seemed to please. Played April 28-29.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SEVENTH HEAVEN: Simone Simon, James Stewart—An excellent picture. Good story, good acting, good cast. Well produced.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SING, BABY, SING: Alice Faye, Adolphe Menjou, Gregory Ratoff, Ted Healy—Due to a mild epidemic of influenza we were forced to cancel this picture back in March, but made arrangements to show it as our last feature of the 1936-37 season, and we are certainly glad that we did. Alice Faye, that luscious feminine bit of loveliness, was a treat to sore eyes and her singing, as always, cast a spell over us. Adolphe Menjou was a bit miscast but came through with flying colors. The comedy team of Patsy Kelly and Ted Healy are always good. It was the men's first glimpse of the Ritz Brothers and they want more of them. They were surely silly enough to please our audience. It's a swell musical and though some reports we read were inclined to pan it, we still think it should be rated as one of the best in 1936. Great tunes, beautiful girls, good comedy, so what more can you ask? Running time, 90 minutes. Played May 1, 1937.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

UNDER YOUR SPELL: Lawrence Tibbett, Wendy Barrie—I could have wept when Lawrence Tibbett's glorious voice rang out to thrill a mere handful of people. Ruralites must have their grand opera pill well sugar coated with comedy plus a good cast. Funny how they swallow grand opera in some of our cartoons. Hope this will help improve our national taste "a la Italia."—Mary Hayes Davis, Dixie Crystal and La Belle Theatres, Clewiston and La Belle, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

WAKE UP AND LIVE: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie and Orchestra, Alice Faye, Patsy Kelly—A fast-moving musical with never a let-down. Entertainment for any audience. Played April 24-26.—H. A. Griswold, Sewanee Union Theatre, Sewanee, Tenn. University patronage.

WOMAN-WISE: Rochelle Hudson, Michael Whalen—Pretty good programmer. Played March 30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

United Artists

BELOVED ENEMY: Merle Oberon, Brian Aherne—A regrettable box office flop inasmuch as the picture is good entertainment. Played April 1-2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GARDEN OF ALLAH, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Charles Boyer—Splendid technicolor plus intelligent acting plus fair story added up to nearly zero attendance. Just why we can't say. Our staff and those who came seemed to enjoy it. Played April 8-9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Universal

SEA SPOILERS: John Wayne, Nan Grey—Good action feature. Played April 3.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SILVER SPURS: Buck Jones, Muriel Evans—Buck never lets you down. If your people like westerns you can always depend on Buck. Running time, six reels. Played April 30-May 1.—Ruff Brothers, Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS: Deanna Durbin, Ray Milland—Pleased everyone and many said so enthusiastically. Reasonably good drawing card, too. Deanna is an expert entertainer. Played April 4-5.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

YELLOWSTONE: Henry Hunter, Judith Barrett—This picture will do. Not too good for children. Our audience seemed to enjoy the show. Some good laughs in this one. Also good mystery. Running time, seven reels. Played May 7-8.—Ruff Brothers, Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.

CALL IT A DAY: Olivia de Havilland, Ian Hunter, Anita Louise, Alice Brady—One of those unexplainable sleepers, billed for one day, that outgrossed many of my so-called two day specials. Where exhibitors have audiences that like sophisticated drawing room comedies, this should bring them in. Played May 5.—H. A. Griswold, Sewanee Union Theatre, Sewanee, Tenn. University patronage.

KING AND THE CHORUS GIRL: Fernand Gravet, Joan Blondell—Failed to draw as expected. Was very amusing; Gravet was well liked and should be a good bet for one or two more pictures. Received poor support from Blondell. My patrons seemed to miss parts I considered amusing. Running time, 95 minutes. Played May 2-3.—A. E. Eliosen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

KNEE ACTION: Broadway Comedies—Gets a few laughs, although we don't go for Clyde comedies and wouldn't have used this one except that it was sent us in substitution.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LOONEY BALLOONISTS: Scrappy Cartoons—An average cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MAKE BELIEVE REVUE: Color Rhapsodies—A very good color short. Worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

OH, DUCHESS: Polly Moran—Lots of laughs in this one. It's O. K. Play it, you'll have no regrets.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SKELETON FROLIC: Color Rhapsodies—A very clever colored cartoon. But a cartoon is shown to please the children as well as the grownups. We question if a cartoon of this type is good for small children. They can be just as clever and not so horrible.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

THREE DUMB CLUCKS: Broadway Comedies—The best of the slapstick comedies. Our audience likes these.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Educational

BUG CARNIVAL: Terry-Toons—Very clever. Seemed to amuse all. We considered it fairly good. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. E. Eliosen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

DENTAL FOLLIES: Song and Comedy Hits—Amusing. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DENTAL FOLLIES: Song and Comedy Hits—A dandy single reel with two knockout vaudeville acts in it. Good any place.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DIAMONDS IN THE ROUGH: Two-Reel Comedies—Fair comedy featuring the "Three Diamonds" and the "Three Reasons." Just a filler-inner. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

HIGH-C HONEYMOON: Two-Reel Comedies—Poor, as usual.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KIKO THE KANGAROO IS SKUNKED AGAIN: Terry-Toons—A fair cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PARKED IN PAREE: Two-Reel Comedies—What's wrong with these shorts? They are getting worse and worse. Lots complaints.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

PINK LEMONADE: Cabin Kids—These popular entertainers again pleased our folks.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RAH RAH RHYTHM: Two-Reel Comedies—Extremely tiresome.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

SPOOKS: Cabin Kids—Great little comedy featuring the "Cabin Kids." They sing several numbers in a haunted house, and it's spooky alright. Running time, 8½ minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

TRANSATLANTIC LOVE: Two-Reel Comedies—And still they go—discouragingly poor entertainment. This is no exception.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AT SEA ASHORE: Patsy Kelly Comedies—An excellent comedy. Patsy Kelly is a scream, as usual. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?: M-G-M Miniatures—Rather spooky, but the ladies thought it good. Heard many discuss it after the showing. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliosen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

EVERY SUNDAY: Deanna Durbin, Judy Garland—Very clever musical that pleased. Running time, 10 minues.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

ORIENTAL PARADISE: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Very good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PUPS' CHRISTMAS: Harman-Ising—Just about perfect. Excellent animated fun.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PUPS' PICNIC: Harman-Ising—Very amusing cartoon of the pups. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE OF DIGESTION: M-G-M Miniatures—For something different, yes. For amusement for the masses, no.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Paramount

HOUSE CLEANING BLUES: Betty Boop Cartoons—A good cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KNOCK, KNOCK, WHO'S THERE?: Vincent Lopez and His Orchestra—A good band act. It is a particularly happy choice for closing your show due to the way they finish their parody of "Knock Knock." It closed our show and everyone went out grinning. Try it!—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MY ARTISTICAL TEMPERATURE: Popeye the Sailor—Just a fair Popeye. Below average.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

NOBODY HOME: Paragraphics—Shorty the monk in antics that please young and old.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PICTORIAL, NO. 10—One of the best of this series. —C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR MEETS SINBAD THE SAILOR: Popeye the Sailor in Technicolor—Coloring was interesting. Subject matter about average Popeye material. Pleased okay and may account for a few extra kiddies. Hardly worth the rental asked, though. —L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STRAIGHT AS AN ARROW: Paragraphics—Excellent and entertaining. Archery is its subject.—L. A. Irwin Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BAD HOUSEKEEPING: Edgar Kennedy Comedies —An excellent comedy. Should please anywhere.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BAD HOUSEKEEPING: Edgar Kennedy Comedies —One of the best of the Kennedys. These comedies have improved greatly. Keep up the good work.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

BED MEDICINE: Headliners Series—Poor entertainment. Running time, 2 reels.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

FOOL YOUR FRIENDS: Easy Aces—Card tricks; only fair. Running time, 1 reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

GRANDMA'S BUOYS: Smart Set—As bad as they come. Instead of comments, got razzberries.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 6—"Time Marches On" and so do most of our patrons when this comes. If they've seen the feature they invariably walk out on it.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 7—There's no reason evident why these subjects should cost a cent extra. They certainly don't draw in any extras at all. In fact, we find it best to keep them a secret and hope for the best.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MOLLY MOO COW AND ROBINSON CRUSOE: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—Funny color cartoon pleased generally.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PATHE TOPIC: No. 6—Will get by O. K.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PROMINENT PERSONALITIES: World on Parade Series—Very good and interesting.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

UPPERCUTLETS: Superba Comedies—Put it back in the box after playing it once; print so bad, frightened to run it again.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WORM BURNS, THE: Radio Flash Comedies—I've seen a lot better. No complaint.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

DOGGING IT AROUND THE WORLD: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Good. Shows many breeds of dogs.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Universal

MARINE FOLLIES: Mentone Musical Comedies—Another good two-reel vaudeville show except for the lady that sings. She should be eliminated as the audience reaction to her two songs was especially bad.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

VAUD-O-MAT, THE: Mentone Musical Comedies—This last season's Mentone two-reel short is far and ahead of any they've produced this year. The new single-reel Mentones are awfully flat.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

CAN'T THINK OF IT: Broadway Brevities—A very fine comedy deserves best playing time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FELLA WITH THE FIDDLE, THE: Merrie Melodies—Another good colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HOLLANDERS, THE: Colortour Adventure—Very good travel talk in color. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

I'M MUCH OBLIGED: Vera Van, George Dobbs—A fair musical subject.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PETER VAN STEEDEN AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A very good band act.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PORKY'S DUCK HUNT: Looney Tunes—A very good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ROGER WOLFE KAHN AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Another excellent band act. C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

UNDER SOUTHERN STARS: Fred Lawrence—Very beautiful. Should be stressed as a short well worth advertising for school children. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. E. Eliosen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

VAUDE-VILLIANS: Marty May—Good Vaudeville Reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

WESTWARD WHOA: Looney Tunes—A good cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHALE HO: Vitaphone Novelties—Very interesting. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliosen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

FILM LEADERS TURN ATTENTION TO DUALS AS INDUSTRY POLICY

Producers, Exhibitors and Public Express Conflicting Views on Value or Necessity of Two Feature Pictures on Program

Chicago Women's Clubs, Better Films Group Attack Practice; Circuit Operators Experimenting with Single Bills

Elimination or continuance of double bills will eventully and finally be decided by the ultimate consumer, the public, in the opinion of production and exhibition executives who now are turning increasing attention to the problem.

Producers have advanced the argument that pictures aimed at the second half of double bills are invaluable as proving grounds for new talent and ideas, and in addition are a comfortable source of income. Exhibitors, many of whom have tried to test public opinion through ballots or by experimenting with single bills, are divided in opinion.

The subject has attracted wide attention in Chicago. Allied States of Illinois leaders recently met to discuss plans for the elimination of duals and are reported to have decided on a plan of procedure, although details were not divulged. The Balaban and Katz circuit is committed to a double bill policy, but neighborhood exhibitors, in many instances, have tried single feature programs with success. The Better Films Council of Chicagoland, in a statement issued by its president, Mrs. Richard M. McClure, attacked the double feature practice and demanded its abandonment.

Tests of single feature programs have been and are being conducted with varying results by the Brandt and Skouras circuits in New York, Fox West Coast in California, Tri-States in the Omaha territory, and by other exhibitors in Des Moines, Ia.; Lincoln, Neb.; New Brunswick, N. J.; St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo.; Milwaukee, Wis., and Vancouver, B. C.

Public approval of double features at the box office will have to be withdrawn before the policy will be discontinued in any great degree throughout the country, William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, said in a recent interview. Other distribution and production executives concur in this opinion.

Nicholas M. Schenck, agreeing with his sales manager, said that any cessation of the practice depended on the public's absolute refusal to attend theatres pursuing it. He added he expected to see double bills become an important issue this summer.

Joseph Bernhard, executive of the Warner Brothers circuit, recently said he was giving serious attention to constructive proposals for the elimination of double bills. In discussing the problem he gave as his decided opinion that the double feature can never advance the industry but only retard it, on the ground that the practice is merely the substitution of quantity for quality.

DUAL BILLS BARRED BY PERUVIAN LAW

Lima, Peru, has found a way to eliminate double bills, whether the public, or the exhibitors, want them or not. A municipal law sets a time limit of two hours for any individual performance, according to a United States Department of Commerce report. This time limit includes the feature and whatever shorts may be shown. The law is rigidly enforced, and special police are designated by the authorities to check the time. Fines are provided for in cases of violation.

Circuit and independent theatre operators in Chicago, thoroughly aroused to the problem, were reported last week to be contacting various civic and social groups to determine what percentage of the public want, and would patronize steadily, double features. Sentiment against the plan in the city has been reported strong since it was introduced last year and the practice has been said to be the cause of a marked drop in receipts.

One of the most influential groups which have expressed opposition to double features is the Better Films Council of Chicagoland. The president of the organization announced last week that of 200 women present at a meeting of the Council only five had voted for the double feature. She added that many other groups including the Women's Division of the Chicago Church Federation, Parent-Teacher organizations, and the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, in contact with 80,000 women club members in the state are in active opposition to twin bills.

"The double feature policy, if continued," Mrs. McClure said, "will defeat all attempts to build family audiences and will destroy all efforts to endorse the week end programs for children. We believe that the demand on the part of the exhibitor for two features will result in a poorer product in Hollywood.

"We plan to take part in a national campaign which would eliminate this policy for all time."

Tests Conducted

In the New York suburban area tests were conducted this spring to determine the public's reaction to a change from double to single bills.

Discussing such a test at the Bayside theatre, Bayside, L. I., William Brandt, executive of Brandt Theatres, said, "Our experience has been that whenever we have a good picture we can run it alone, the public preferring a diversified program instead of double features. But when you make up a show consisting of a news weekly, cartoon comedy, education subject or novelty, two reel comedy and then you lead up to the play of the evening with your feature picture, it must be good or your whole program lays by the wayside.

"If we could get a consistent flow of good pictures the double feature policy wouldn't last longer than it would take to dispose of it, but unfortunately every studio puts out product upon which it is impossible to bill an entire evening's entertainment."

Skouras Theatres reinstated single features at the Bronxville, Bronxville, and the Scarsdale, Scarsdale, after trying a double bill policy for several weeks.

The circuit has been experimenting with single features at the Manhasset, Manhasset, L. I., a new theatre, and it has been decided to continue the plan indefinitely.

Tri-States Reports Success

Reversion to single features for at least a part of each week in Tri-States circuit houses in four cities of the Omaha territory has been successful, according to Evert R. Cummings, district manager.

At the circuit's houses in Fairbury, Hastings and Grand Island, Neb., single features are played the first three and the last two days of each week. At the Orpheum, Sioux City, single features are used the first four days and duals the last three.

Because of an unsuccessful attempt to inaugurate a similar policy in Omaha Mr. Cummings said it was his belief that more success would be found in returning to single features in the smaller cities.

After a seven weeks test of single features in about ten Fox West Coast houses in the San Francisco area, it was decided to return to double features recently because of lack of response by the public, according to circuit officials.

A more extensive test has been devised in Des Moines. A single feature is shown at the Roosevelt theatre, a suburban house, and the same feature is shown at the Des Moines, downtown house, accompanied by "an acknowledged superior picture but one which does not have the natural drawing power of the first feature." Exhibitors in the area are watching the experiment with interest.

An increased number of calls to the box-office protesting double features prompted Milton Overman, city manager for Westland Theatres in Lincoln, Neb., to change the Varsity to single features as an experiment.

"Because the majority of people want double features," the New Brunswick, N. J., RKO State theatre has abandoned its single feature policy.

Tentative single bill policies to determine public reaction have been inaugurated by National Theatres in Milwaukee in a neighborhood house; in Kansas City by W. D. Fulton's Mutual Theatres in a suburban house, and in three houses in Vancouver, B. C., by Famous Players Canadian.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of theatre receipts for the calendar week ended May 15, 1937, from 106 theatres in 18 major cities of the country was $1,154,486, an increase of $55,784 over the total for the preceding week ended May 8, 1937, when 107 theatres in 18 large cities aggregated $1,098,702.

BRITISH COMPLAIN U.S. SEES MORE CORONATION NEWSREELS THAN U.K.

London Press Complains of Censorship and Agreement Limiting First Reels to 1,000 Feet, Half as Much as Americans'

The story of the newsreels' recording of the Coronation of George the Sixth and Queen Elizabeth, last week in London, is still being written.

The English public this week raised a concerted complaint against the comparatively small Coronation footage reaching their screens from the British newsreels, and there were many mutterings over the action of the Archbishop of Canterbury in making further deletions, of the scenes showing the Dowager Queen Mary in tears at the crowning. Meanwhile, the American newsreels were only beginning to receive their prints, which arrived Tuesday morning in New York aboard the SS Normandie, after elaborate plans to use a trans-Atlantic plane had been rejected because of excessive costs.

The reported censorship of the British newsreels by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and a British newsreel agreement to limit the first reels released to 1,000 feet, were targets for severe newspaper criticism throughout the British Isles. The London Evening Star, leading the attack, said British film companies had agreed to cut the film to 1,000 feet, lasting only nine minutes on the screen, or "the same length as Mickey Mouse", while those in the United States would see 2,000 feet, twice as much.

Particularly irate were newspapers at the fact that the Archbishop—who played quite a leading part in the fight against former King Edward VIII—had ordered deleted a closeup of the Royal Family plainly showing the Dowager Queen Mary in tears and overcome by emotion.

The Archbishop and his co-censor, the Duke of Norfolk, who was Earl Marshal of the Coronation, also eliminated much of the military procession.

The best scenes allowed in the English reels were those taken in Westminster Abbey, and theatre audiences according to the dispatches, snickered when the Archbishop was shown minutely examining the crown.

"A film which might have rendered great service to the country and the Empire has been slaughtered to fit into programs of the regulation kind," the Star declared.

Royalty Sees Full Edition

The Royal Family, meanwhile, sat for two hours Monday night at historic Windsor Castle and watched a special, full edition of the controversial newsreels.

The King and Queen, according to cabled reports to the New York Times, were especially pleased by scenes inside Westminster Abbey and shots of the Royal Family as they appeared on a balcony of Buckingham Palace. The little princesses were reported to have "laughed and applauded' when they saw themselves moving across the screen in their crowns and trains.

The censored newsreels were available to all theatres in the eastern section of the United States Tuesday night. Owing to the weight of the shipment to the various companies, the film was not taken off the liner by plane as it approached New York in the early dawn but was removed on the French Line pier some hours later. This move in most instances prevented delivery until time for evening performances.

MRS. JOHNSON PLANS AFRICAN EXPEDITION

Mrs. Osa Johnson, widow of the late explorer, Martin Johnson, will leave on June 10th for Africa to film a story for Twentieth Century-Fox. The picture will be titled "Stanley and Livingstone" and will deal with the rescue in Africa of the famous English adventurer. The party will include Otto Brower, director; ten cameramen and five technicians.

Towns within a few hundred miles of Manhattan were serviced by fast plane.

How They Operated

Typical of the treatment accorded the newsreels on arrival was that given by Movietone News. There were two duplicate negatives and three duplicating prints in the shipment rushed from the French Line pier to the office on West 54th Street. One of the duplicating prints—"lavenders"—was rushed to Montreal. Another was despatched to Newark to catch a west bound plane for the west coast for transfer to the fastest available transport to Tokyo. Duplicate negatives will be stripped from these prints at both points and black and white prints struck form them for general distribution.

The duplicate negatives meanwhile were put on the printing machines at the De Luxe Laboratory and theatre prints taken. The remaining lavender print was used to make further duplicating negatives.

By nightfall prints were available for all theatres in the Metropolitan area and others were on the way west and south to catch late shows.

700 Feet Inside Abbey

The Movietone News special was exactly 1,560 feet, including 700 feet inside Westminster Abbey showing the actual Coronation.

Approximately 30,000 feet of negative was exposed by Movietone. Producer Truman Talley personally directed the cutting, editing and scoring as well as the actual making of the picture. The New York office received its negatives and prints all ready for printing and duping. Even the commentary was affixed in London by Lowell Thomas. The only problems in New York were those of expeditious printing and distribution. Edmund Reek, general manager, had perfected flawless schedules with William Clarke, 20th Century-Fox short subject distributing chief, and Alan Freedman, head of the De Luxe Laboratory.

All the rest of the world was serviced from London. Walter Hutchinson, general foreign sales manager, supervised this work, assisted by Leslie Whalen, of the New York office, European Director Ben Miggins, British Managing Director Francis L. Harley and Stanley Crick, in charge of distribution in Australia and New Zealand.

Dispatch of Newsreels by Plane Turned Down When Price Kept Mounting to $50,000; Censorship Protested

When Henry T. (Dick) Merrill and Jack Lambie finally reached Floyd Bennett Field outside of Brooklyn last Friday after a five-day round trip to London for still photographs of the Coronation for International News (Photos), newsreel editors admitted that there had been a gentlemen's agreement that the Merrill plane would not be contracted to return with newsreel prints, and the reason finally revealed was that the price demanded was much too steep.

Months ago it had been announced that Movietonews had made a deal with Captain Henry Mollison to fly the film to America. Then Ben Smith, Wall Street broker, came on the scene with the statement that he had Pilots Merrill and Lambie under contract to fly a twin-motored Lockhead Electra plane with space enough for film. He named $30,000 as the figure for the flight.

The newsreel executives conferred, then engaged space on the Hindenburg to get the film back. After the disaster to the airship, Mr. Smith came forward again, but his price was now $35,000. The newsreel editors shook their heads; besides, it would be unwise to have the industry saddled with the responsibility for the loss of a pilot's life should the flight prove unsuccessful.

When Pilots Merrill and Lambie safely set their ship down at Croydon Airport, there was a third conference but now the price was raised $2,000 a newsreel, or a total of $50,000. The Normandie got the assignment.

The idea for the Coronation picture flight was first discussed three months ago in the International News Photos offices in New York. Mr. Smith then purchased the Lockheed-Electra plane for $40,000. At an additional cost of $6,000 the luxurious interior of the plane, which can carry 10 passengers and two pilots as well as baggage, was ripped out and gas tanks installed instead.

The picture-snapping staff of the Daily Express, London newspaper after which the plane was also named, worked hand in glove with the London agents of INP, and Merrill and Lambie were handed 51 pictures "for delivery in New York."

Color Reels Lauded

Bruce Allan, cabled from the Quigley Publications offices in London on Monday that "the color reels of the Coronation produced by Movietonews and Pathe, the former in Technicolor and the latter in Dufaycolor, are brilliantly successful."

According to Mr. Allan, "the Movietonews reel includes preliminary color shots of the regalia of the peers, closeup details of the royal coach and the like.

"The picturing of the activity in Westminster Abbey, in the black and white reels, takes in the full ceremony and provides a wonderful record of the complete event. Both sound and photography are excellent considering the difficulties."

Audio Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of Audio Productions, subsidiary of Electrical Research Products, Inc., was to be held in New York Friday when the reelection of Frank K. Speidell as president and all the other officers was to take place. Audio had the best year of its existence to date in 1936 and has a good backlog of production orders for summer and early fall, Mr. Speidell said.

In Which Some Queries Are Posed

As the story is told, in the early days of his career when the late Marcus Loew was solicited for a pass, he would answer with the offer of a shiny new quarter to the applicant instead of the ducat. Mr. Loew was in the business of selling theatre seats. And by offering the actual admission price to the pass-asker out of his own pocket, the founder of the far-flung Loew circuit was not seeking to be known as a philanthropist. No, indeed. The emphatic gesture was made to signify that Loew theatre seats were to be sold as other worthwhile merchandise with a distinct cash value. And secondly, Mr. Loew figured wisely that once a patron became addicted to the pass habit, it wasn't the easiest job to get that customer back on a paying basis.

There is little reason today to change these opinions. A seat is still merchandise to be sold and giving it away certainly does not enhance its monetary value.

The spotlighting of the birthday-pass weakness in these columns and your Chairman's views on the subject were not expected to be accepted as gospel by all our readers. The giving of the once-a-year natal-day pass was variously defended by theatremen who honestly feel this free offering of definite aid in bringing extra business that otherwise might not be forthcoming.

Well and good, sez we, but can any well-intentioned showman truthfully say that the same basic reasoning for giving away his merchandise on one occasion cannot be applied as well to other occasions? And that, folks, is the root and substance of all evils of the pass system. It's not the giving away of a single pass that is questioned so much as any necessity of giving away passes so generally.

Three years ago, in the issue of May 5, 1934, to be exact, your Round Table published a very intelligent analysis on pass weaknesses by Fred Larkin, manager of the Paramount Theatre, St. Cloud, Minn. A re-reading of Mr. Larkin's article today finds little to question in his arguments. Theatremen who go back in their files to study the Minnesotan's findings should discover plenty of meat in what he has to say. No extended quotes from the articles are necessary at this time outside of the first reason the theatreman gives for the discouragement of the practice.

"The majority of the people," writes Mr. Larkin, "do not appreciate something for nothing or where an effort is made to attain it. This lowers the appraisal of the business institution which can afford to give away its merchandise. It weakens the buying patrons' faith in such an institution. They do not enjoy hearing others boast about receiving merchandise for nothing; hence we drive away business."

Granted that through long usage the pass has become a medium of exchange in promoting newspaper and other contests which might not be as successfully effected without these offerings; that the pass pays for window card and poster locations, for other services, including the proper stand-in "downtown" and with others strategically-placed. But cogitating further, the following queries discussed recently over the lunch table are posed for the purpose of inviting other opinion; not offered as any sure cure-all for what the industry recognizes as a not inconsiderable evil.

If every theatre stopped giving passes in exchange for window cards, poster locations, etc., and instead gave actual cash to the value of the passes for these services, would it not be within reason to suppose that those who previously received the passes and used them regularly would spend a goodly part of the monies received in buying theatre admissions?

If every theatre stopped giving passes as prizes in newspaper and other contests and instead gave money prizes equal to the amount of the passes, would it not be within reason to suppose a goodly number of the winners initially interested in the contest to participate, would display further interest in seeing the picture on which the contest was based by paying their way with their prize money?

If theatre passes in payment for services and prizes were discontinued and the equivalent in cash given instead, how much if any would grosses fall off in the long run?

Would or would not any losses incurred from giving money instead of passes be made up by the general discontinuance of the pass list and all its attendant evils, financial and otherwise?

We pause for further replies.

Herman Weinberg Says Czech and Double-Check

Maxwell Weinberg, manager and publicity director for the Little Theatre, Baltimore, Md., inaugurated far-reaching campaign for the first Czechoslovakian film to play his city. Picture was "Janosik" with English titles and Weinberg contacted local Czech societies to have them underwrite sale of a large block of tickets. Societies also advertised widely with posters, window cards, circulars in Czech papers and spots on radio during Czech hour.

Campaign's piece-de-resistance was speech and announcement of the film made at dinner held at down-town hotel at which the Czechoslovakian Consul to the United States was guest of honor, and prominent Czechoslovakian citizens were present. Dinner fortunately coincided with opening of film, coming one day before playdate.

Opening night was designated as Czech Night with consul, officers of Czech societies and civic officials attending premiere showing as guests of management. Theatre was draped with native flags and native music was heard.

MAY DEADLINE MIDNIGHT, JUNE 5

From date of this issue, exactly two weeks remain for entries in the Quigley Awards for the month of May. Deadline has been set for midnight of Saturday, June 5, at which time all campaigns must be at Committee Headquarters.

The following have been asked to serve as judges: Hy Daab, Columbia Pictures; Paul Gulick, Universal Pictures, and Phil Reisman, RKO Export Corp.

Spring Is in the Air In Indianapolis

L. Ward Farrar, Loew's Theatre, Indianapolis, reports that he has officially opened his spring season by creating a slogan "Springtime is hit time at Loew's." Slogan appears prominently in all ads, lobby, trailers and all forms of advertising. The insignia for his campaign is a spring bird gayly colored, especially displayed in an elaborate lobby setpiece plugging a half dozen spring hits.

Newspaper cooperated, running special stories and art layouts on the six hits, refuse cans bear the slogan and arrangements were made for the distribution of cough drops and chewing gum in envelopes bearing springtime copy. Through tieup with leading stores, a life size blowup of star wearing some fashionable clothes was center of attraction of each merchant's window.

Mothers Feted By Long for "Star"

Sponsored by the Cleveland Plain Dealer and Loew Theatres division manager Colonel Harry Long, Cleveland's oldest mothers, who were young when stereopticon slides were the vogue, were guested by the management of Loew's State Theatre at a Mother's Day matinee performance of "A Star Is Born."

Paper carried stories and art work for five days in advance with more than 200 of the oldest mothers entering their names and age for the party. From these were chosen seventeen mothers, ranging in age from 85 to 97, who, wearing fresh gardenia corsages promoted from local florist, were greeted in the lobby by Manager Everett Steinbuch, who read a Mother's Day telegram greeting from Janet Gaynor addressed to the ladies.

Topping the whole stunt, as reported by Publicist Milt Harris, was further promotion of dinner at local restaurant for each mother and escort. Plain Dealer carried story of the party, together with photo of the oldest mother and account of her reaction which was that she "felt as fine as a girl of 16 and enjoyed seeing romantic pictures as much."

Ballrooms Cooperate On "Top of Town"

Tieups with St. Louis music-makers helped put over the "Top of the Town" campaign staged by Charles Kurtzman and Homer Harman, of the Fox Theatre. They contacted the Show Boat and Casa Loma ballrooms and arranged to have the film's hit numbers played daily. A streamer with theatre credits was placed over the orchestra ten days in advance of opening.

Popular band leader played the numbers daily with each engagement, and local dance place plugged the music for nearly two weeks straight. The boys secured display windows in 35 music stores, three of which used window streamers. As a novelty in banners, two 60-foot long, 2-foot wide streamers with "Top of the Town" copy reading down were dropped from the top of the Fox down to the marquee.

Casino Dedicates Revue To "Top of the Town"

Eddie Miller, manager Hippodrome Theatre, Cleveland, with the assistance of publicity chief Sid Dannenberg, Mort Goodman and Manny Pearstein, sold "Top of the Town" to Cleveland movie-goers with an all-around tie-up campaign. Announcement cards appeared in all Sinclair Oil gas stations in Greater Cleveland starting three days in advance of playdate. Cards were placed in 150 Waite taxicabs also for three days in advance and during showing.

Generous use of 24-sheets, trailers, lobby banners and displays, backed by an intensive tie-up campaign netting window displays, newspaper ads, music plugs and radio time, plus a revue at the Mayfair Casino dedicated to "Town" helped the date.

Burglar Alarm Exhibit Staged With "Night Key" Premiere

The very newest in burglar alarm equipment, capable of detecting even faint air vibrations and the touch of fingers, was on display in the lobby of the Central Theatre, New York City, for one week. This modern equipment, lent by the Holmes Electric Protective Company, illustrated graphically the system and operations of the protective agency shown in "Night Key," starring Boris Karloff, which had its world premiere at the Central.

Among the interesting exhibits was an invisible photo-cell electric eye which sounds a buzzer signal when passed, a safe which sets off an alarm when touched, a giant burglar alarm switchboard, and a contrasting display of burglar alarms as they worked in 1858 with the modern burglar alarms.

Tracy Campaign Put On by Siegal

As part of his Dick Tracy serial campaign at the Jerome Theatre, Bronx, N. Y., Ed Siegal issued booklets plugging the attraction and playdates. Entire cost of printing was offset by cooperating merchants' ads. Book had to be presented at theatre each week for punching and to those kids who hadn't missed a week, tickets were given.

Promoted candy and pennants were distributed to the children opening hour and Siegal cracked local paper with story on his visit to public library to study up on the methods used by criminologists in solving crimes. Accompanying photo shows lobby setpiece, window was secured in five and ten tying in with the Dick Tracy books, toy store featured the handcuffs and cigar store the Tracy flashlights.

KID POOCH CONTEST CLICKS FOR TUCKER

Newspapers and Stores Co-operate with April Bronze Winner on Ace "Great Guy" Stunt

Contests highlighted Manager John Tucker's "Great Guy" campaign at the second run Park Theatre, Roselle Park, N. J., with the Home News tying in on a "cleverest dressed dog" stunt in which any kind of a pooch stood the same chance of winning as the finest blue ribbon aristocrat. Little ones, big ones, fat and skinny purps were entered by their masters and mistresses, accompanying photo showing some of the entrants. Paper ran stories together with entry blanks, and judging took place on the Park stage with promoted gifts and passes awarded winners.

Second contest also planted in paper was series of photos of J. Edgar Hoover, Babe Ruth, etc., etc. Entrants were requested to cut out the pictures, identify them and write a brief paragraph stating why they thought them "great guys." Third contest for which tickets were awarded were best letters received on what entrants considered the funniest article ever seen fastened to a newlyweds' car. Funniest entries were run in paper with request that author go to the theatres to pick up his ticket.

Official preview was held opening morning with town officials, school teachers and prominent citizens attending. Orphans of Memorial Home were invited with transportation furnished by public service with no charge to the theatre. Still further newspaper publicity was secured with Tucker offering to guest all fathers over sixty.

Street ballys were varied and numerous with bannered Ford car parade three days in advance, sidewalk stencils of Cagney's shoes with playdate copy was used and two hired boys were planted in lobby on a sit-down strike.

Different use was made of the "Great Guy" pressbook, when Tucker sent boys out on streets walking along reading open copies of the book with theatre name pasted across top. For school tieup, "great guy" contest was arranged with students choosing most popular classmate. Boys paraded through city with winner carrying banner with copy that he had been so elected.

Street photographer snapped passersby and then passed out cards reading, "We really didn't take your picture, but how about seeing a real picture; it's James Cagney in," etc., etc. Park benches were bannered with playdates and accompanying photo shows bannered telescope planted in Roselle Park with picture copy.

Tucker sent one of his boys out on a house to house canvass with large book in which housewives were asked to sign pledge that they would see the picture. Another street bally consisted of man with oversized compo board alarm clock hanging from shoulders with "Now is the time to see," printed across face of clock. For further gag street bally, lad sat at curb with fishing pole and line in wash tub before him, printed card attached to chair read "If you're fishing for good entertainment," etc.

Special lobby display consisted of large easel marked "Lucky boys with the girl habit." Below was listed the telephone numbers of eight girls (no names). Boys were asked to scan list to see if their girl's number appeared and if so they were to call her up, invite her to attend "Great Guy," as guest of the management, the boy friend being "stuck" for the price of his admission.

Van Meter's Marquee Band

Dwight Van Meter, Astor Theatre, Reading, Pa., plugged the music from "Top of the Town" on opening night by putting his theatre band on his marquee. Advance publicity brought fans downtown to enjoy the music and be sold on the picture. Van Meter's campaign plans also included the placing of giant cutout letters spelling out title on a hill a mile distant from and overlooking Reading's business district.

Tracy Campaign Put On By Wise in Dayton

Ushering in his Dick Tracy serial at the State Theatre, Dayton, Nathan Wise contacted the Dayton Journal-Herald, which carries the cartoon strip and sponsors a birthday club for kids. Arrangements were made for all children whose birthdays fell during the current month to be hosted at a theatre party at the State.

Second stunt with same paper was classified contest in the manner of a bargain hunt. Cuts of Tracy were spotted in various merchants' ads, tickets going to those correctly listing spots where they appeared. Nathan also planted a 30 by 40 blowup in color in lobby of the Journal-Herald building.

Encyclopedias Distributed By Curly for "History"

Jules Curley, publicity director of the Strand, Albany, tied in with the Hearst Times-Union for "History Is Made at Night." Paper started an intensive circulation campaign, giving away complete sets of fifteen encyclopedias with advance publicity building up the giveaway.

Curley bought seven sets and distributed them to the seven longest and most accurate lists of historical events that happened at night. The contest ran for seven days with art and story in each issue. The Times-Union gave the stunt a nice break in its Sunday edition.

The Knickerbocker Press also featured art and fashion angles. Cooperative ads were secured from practically all the leading merchants. An effective deal was made with the New York Telephone Company wherein printed cards bearing the night rates and strong selling copy for the picture were placed in every pay station in the city where they attracted the anticipated attention.

RADIO STATION AIDS McBRIDE ON "MAYTIME"

Radio Street Broadcast Quiz and Organ Recital Feature Syracuse Award Campaign

Through cooperation of Station WSYR, affiliated with Syracuse University and NBC, Manager Ed McBride, Loew's State Theatre in that city for his advance on "Maytime" used the theatre lines for a street quiz broadcast, with passersby questioned on the forthcoming attraction. Stunt was used for full week ahead with daily mention on radio station, which also gave out autographed colored photos of Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy together with the "Down Memory Lane" poems dedicated to the songstress.

During playdate week, promoted organ was placed on mezzanine floor of theatre on raised platform, surrounded by flowers, potted plants and palms which covered two amplifiers. Con Maffie (see photo), theatre organist for his organlogue week, featured hit tunes from "Rose Marie," "Naughty Marietta" and "Maytime." Music store further cooperated by window display of replica of organ used at theatre together with scene stills and playdate copy.

While the musical clubs do not usually give out their mailing list, an exception was made in this instance and permission was granted for the addressing of envelopes at the theatre, carrying picture message to music lovers. Local music company also permitted the distribution of heralds to their mailing list. Taxi fleet carried auto radiator signs with playdates; these were inserted in openings on hood tops of cars (see photo). Blotters with cuts of MacDonald and Eddy were distributed by young ladies in offices, hotels, secretarial schools and downtown Syracuse.

Roofing paper doormats with cast were placed in front of department stores, busy corners, hotels and popular eateries. "Maytime" sundae streamers were used at soda fountains through the city, regulation window cards carrying copy "Now at Loew's" were used by students at Syracuse University on their tire covers, these covers had cellophane sewed on them, thus making slot to insert card. Streamers carrying tieup copy on Domino sugar were planted in stores by local representatives of cooperating company, streamers 14 by 24 printed black on yellow carried cut of MacDonald and Eddy heads breaking through a sheet of music.

For lobby display, large oblong setpiece containing 50 stills from the picture were used week in advance of opening. Across center of display were openwork cutout title letters done in flitter. Four-foot Neon title letters in scroll were used on attraction board over exit doors and atop marquee playdate week with shadow box under marquee carrying copy and painted heads of the stars. 40 by 60 reviews from trade papers were mounted and used in lobby and placed in store windows about town and announcements were made over Station WFBL, local Columbia outlet.

Part of McBride's newspaper coverage included five-column photos of MacDonald and Eddy in the "Will You Remember" scene which were planted in the rotogravure section of the Post Standard, co-op ad was secured from local beauty salon featuring latest coiffures and tying in with picture while various other merchants came through with ads.

"Salem" Film Presented To Historical Institute

Some neat publicity was garnered by James A. Field, Paramount Theatre, Salem, Mass., for "Maid of Salem" when a case of film containing the reel was presented to Howard Corning, secretary of the Essex Institute. The film will be preserved in the archives of the Institute as a historical reminder of the film industry's interpretation of the witchcraft era in Salem village in the year 1692. It was also planned to have the costumes of Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray presented to the Institute for their wide collection of colonial attire.

Accompanying photo shows staff dressed in authentic puritanical attire, leading department store devoted window to display background of which was painted by Leo Auger, theatre artist, and empty store windows were utilized for planting photos of puritan styles of dress, abode and habits. Invitations were issued to all local dignitaries and others who assisted director Frank Lloyd in his quest for historical data.

National Tieups Used In Boston on "Town"

Manager George French, assisted by Publicity Manager Jack Granara, Keith Memorial Theatre, Boston, Mass., displayed lively showmanship with a "Top of the Town" campaign. The title was splashed around town with 24-sheets.

The theatre cashed in heavily on national tieups. Newspaper ads, window displays and store promotion sold "Top of the Town" through Hudnut Cosmetics, Bond Bread, Lux Toilet Soap, "Top of the Town" game, and Bigelow-Sanford Rug Co. Well-known Boston stores giving window space and promotion included Jordan-Marsh and R. H. White.

Among local tieups were newspaper ads run by beauty parlor on Gertrude Niesen and Doris Nolan, and a window display of "Top of the Town" dresses in a leading women's shop. A local radio station played recordings of the film's hit numbers each morning, using the full set of records supplied them by French.

Sharrock's "Plainsman" Date

For his "Plainsman" date at the Rialto, Morrilton, Ark, before leaving for the Centenary in Shreveport, La., Raleigh Sharrock highlighted his campaign with various contests, one of which was planted in local daily with tickets going to kids coloring Indians most perfectly. Another stunt was bottle of Indian head pennies, tickets going to those correctly guessing number contained.

Cooling Campaign Reported by Laby

With the refrigeration season fast approaching, George Laby, Paramount Theatre, Springfield, Mass., reports his campaign put over last year. Centering on the slogan "cool as a pool," that line was used in all advertisements, valances, displays and every other means where it could be applied. Accompanying photo shows lobby setpiece which shall be taken out of the moth balls and used again this year.

Another stunt that Laby used was the issuance of checks made out on the "Paramount Cool and Comfortable Guarantee Co.," payable to the order of "any person, at any performance, during any hot spell in the amount of $75,000 worth of coolness." Check was signed by "the coolest person in Springfield, the manager."

Girl in Window Reads "Green Light" for Crites

Getting aboard the recent sit-down strike publicity, Arlie Crites, Washita Theatre, Chickasha, Okla., for "Green Light" planted girl from Oklahoma College for Women in local furniture store window (see photo) reading copy of the book. Card next to girl bore copy on picture, playdates, etc.

Regulation street signal was hung in front of theatre and also used in lobby display, signs were attached to light posts at intersections ten days ahead and novelty prescription cards were distributed, copy advising recipients to blow on the green spot and if it turned color consult physician.

Special screen was held for merchants, teachers, newspapermen and leading club women who were asked to write their comment on the picture, these were later incorporated in newspaper ads. Window displays were also planted with setpiece of the written comments of patrons, and teaser ads run with copy reading "This ad is too small to tell you just how big a picture," etc., etc.

Novel Contest Highlights Cohen's "History" Date

A contest based on the "Jean Arthur of San Francisco" was used by Herman Cohen for "History Is Made at Night" at the United Artists Theatre, San Francisco. Applicants tried on one of Miss Arthur's gowns, winner given a course in modeling and featured in a fashion show. The press gave the stunt a big boost with plenty of art and column space.

Cohen secured a full-page cooperative ad linking Carrillo in chef's garb with refrigerator and also planted a recipes competition with the News, guest tickets being given as prizes. Night clubs contributed another full-page co-op ad.

Radio plugs played a big part in the campaign with the dramatic critic of the Examiner giving the picture advance build-up over KYO and other stations using the transcription. Fashion page breaks, elaborate window displays including miniatures of the production sets, a ballyhoo truck, and liberal posting rounded out the campaign.

"Town" Tieups Aid Collins

Hitting heavily on the tieup angle of his "Top of the Town" campaign, Ken Collins, Apollo Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind., spread the stars' names and faces around town in store windows, hotels, cafes, libraries, counter displays and soda fountains. Red and green streamers plugged the picture, theatre, stars and "Top of the Town" sundae at 50 fountains of a local drug chain. Collins also netted plenty of window space on Hudnut, Packard Razor, and Dictograph Silent Radio national tieups.

Hollywood Called Household Word in the South American Republic

by N. BRUNSKI
in Buenos Aires

Though this current article of your Round Table's Showman's Travelogue series treats of all the Argentine Republic, emphasis, as to be expected, is laid on the state of the showbusiness in Buenos Aires, the federal capital, where patrons are reported to pay as much as two and three dollars for admission. News of Hollywood and general picture publicity are much in demand and supplied generously by the Buenos Aires newspapers which no doubt accounts for the heavy advertising campaigns sponsored by the local exhibitors.

The Travelogue series continues in an early issue.

BUENOS AIRES, Federal Capital of the Argentina Republic (12,000,000 inhabitants) situated on the right bank of the River Plate, is a highly commercial city and has numerous factories. It has a spacious and convenient port, classified by its importance and movement as 10th in the world. The population is around 2,350,000 and if the inhabitants of the surrounding towns, such as: Avellaneda, Lanus Banfield, Lomas de Zamorra, Temperley, Adrogue, San Vicente, Bernal, Quilmes, Florencio Varela, Berazategui, Ciudadela, San Justo, Ramos Mejia, 6 de Septiembre, Merlo, Moreno, Vicente Lopez, Florida, Olivos, San Isidro, San Fernando, Tigre, San Martin, Villa Ballester, Bella Vista, San Miguel, Hurlingham and a few others in between are taken into account this figure increases to 3,800,000. In some of these towns, such as Avellaneda, on the border of the capital, there are important factories and works.

The motion picture business is subject to uniform customhouse duties on the importation of all foreign films, national licenses and municipal taxes for picture palaces. The customhouse duties amount to $200 U. S. on each film of approximately 2,500 feet. The national licenses for distributors are anything from $500 to $10,000 local currency and $300 to $3,000 for exhibitors per annum. There is a municipal tax on box office tickets applied to cinemas which represent three percent of a full house at each function regardless of the number of seats occupied. As full houses are not very frequent, this percentage, apparently low, is really quite high with respect to the actual box office takings.

Two-Dollar Admission at First-Runs

The specialized Argentine worker, constituting 50 percent of the industrial population, earns from $6 to $12 daily and the non-specialized worker does not get more than $6. The average monthly wage of workers and office or shop employees is $180. For comparative purposes and with respect to the standard of living in U. S. A. the Argentine peso should be considered of equal value to the dollar.

The first release cinemas usually charge $2 for a seat. In the case of important films some few cinemas put up their prices to $2.50 and $3.00. The second release cinemas charge $1.50 and third release houses $1.00. Other prices range from $0.80 to $0.30 per function whether night or day performance. In third release districts or cinemas it is also customary to charge $1.00 two or three times a week (Thursdays, Saturdays and holidays). The cinema zone in the centre of the city which embraces about 80 blocks (squares of 150 yds.) contains around 30 picture palaces with a capacity for seating about 35,000 people. This figure represents the sixth part of the total amount of cinemas in the city.

Transportation facilities in the city are varied and relatively cheap. The city, topographically, resembles an open fan, from whose base, the centrical zone, all lines of communication radiate to the different points of the city, which in all covers a surface of 15,000 blocks. On all streets, collective locomotion is to be found. The city is crossed by railways, both steam and electric, electric street cars (a constant circulation of more than 2,000), subways, omnibuses, micro-omnibuses (colectivos), taxis, hacks and no less than 30,000 private automobiles. In less than 30 minutes it is possible to travel from one end of the town to the other at a cost of 10 to 30 cents, depending upon the collective transportation employed. The traffic of vehicles, especially during the day and within the central zone is rather heavy, but not to the extent of inconveniencing the public, and plenty of parking places are provided. In different neighborhoods and at strategic points within easy reach, there are numerous modern cinemas, large and comfortable, where excellent films are shown and which owing to their proximity naturally take a good deal of business from the central cinemas, especially at night.

The picture palaces are generally administered by their owners. Only those who own several theatres engage the services of managers or caretakers, in which case their activities are limited to maintaining internal order and keeping an eye on the show and the personnel. Business dealings regarding the films themselves are carried on directly between the owners and the managers of distributing houses.

Only one social club exists, the Motion Picture House, to which anybody connected with the motion picture business may belong, regardless of category. However, its precarious existence threatens to end.

The service given the public in the picture palaces is generally good. The houses are well conditioned and have good projection equipment and acoustics. Cleanliness is maintained and care is taken that the show meet with approval. Severe municipal rules, controlled daily, ensure the comfort and safety of the audience, thus serious accidents or disasters are indeed exceptional occurrences in Argentine cinemas. There are very few firms owning cinemas enough to form circuits.

Cinema shows are controlled in the Capital and other large cities by Control Committees who determine whether a film is fit for exhibition, and in the event it is not in good taste and immoral prohibit its exhibition. These Committees act with great fairness and do not constitute an obstacle to the business, which in any case, and specially as far as morals are concerned is guided by sound principles that no man connected with pictures wishes to demerit.

The cinema owners invest quite a lot of money in publicity, the most favored being the newspaper form. Releases are announced by the cinemas in cooperation with the distributors by means of large advertisements in the leading newspapers. If the film is worth it sometimes the entrance halls are decorated and fancy posters are placed at the front. The practice of advertising the titles of films in the illuminated signs which all cinemas display has become generalized.

ARGENTINE THEATRES

Publicity is an expensive item in Buenos Aires, this being the reason it is used with caution, as it is not always productive.

The Argentine newspapers, very modern and of a large circulation, dedicate a lot of space daily to motion picture information by publishing news items and pictures, and the slightest detail concerning stars who are as well known here as they can be in their own land. Hollywood is a household word in the Argentine. On every release the newspapers immediately publish reports and reviews prepared by expert and impartial writers. The big newspapers do not cooperate with distributors or exhibitors in matters of publicity. The announcements are printed according to rates and their publication does not in the least affect reviews or space allotted to comments on the films concerned. The motion picture press represented by several publications, successfully performs its duty of supplying information, reviews, classification of releases, etc.

The cinema's chief competitor is the theatre, then follow horse races—very popular among the Argentines, and sport in general, especially football, which attracts thousands of spectators on Saturdays and Sundays. Bathing and other open air amusements affect business only during the summer months provided weather conditions do not interfere, however, during January and February this form of recreation is quite intense.

The chief towns which might be an attraction as far as the cinema business is concerned outside of Buenos Aires (which absorbs 60 percent of it) are first, Rosario, 500,000 inhabitants; Mendoza, 100,000; Santa Fe, 150,000; Cordoba, 120,000; Bahia Blanca, 80,000; La Plata, 160,000; etc. There are about 50 odd towns in the Argentine with a population of from 10,000 to 50,000 inhabitants which complete the chain of the motion picture business but are nevertheless of little consequence from a profitable point of view.

Locally Produced Films Increase

The cinemas here do not put on variety shows as a good class show is beyond their budget and there is no interest for the cheaper type which as a rule figure on radio programs where there is a big demand for them. The Argentine audience is very exacting in the matter of shows but owing to business conditions it is impossible, except on rare occasions, to offer them at normal prices. Smart picture palaces are appreciated greatly by the Argentine people. Outside of U. S. A., Argentine possibly possesses the largest number of good cinemas in the world. The comfort and splendor loving public prefers a good cinema to a good theatre provided an interesting program is offered.

Motion picture attendance is normal and is estimated at about 30,000 persons in the capital and perhaps not quite double that figure in the interior. However, enthusiasm is not increasing as it should, and this is due to the great percentage of talkies in foreign languages, which, of course, render them difficult to understand. This factor may be overcome with the progress which national production appears to be making. The increasing number of local films, extremely well received by the public are a proof of this fact. It is perhaps necessary to stimulate the interest of the public by means of intelligent advertising. Common forms of publicity in U. S. A., such as serial advertising simultaneously in several newspapers of the country cannot be applied here as there are no concerns owning several newspapers appearing in different localities inasmuch as nearly all the newspapers like the cinemas are owned by private individuals or small firms who may perhaps own a daily and perhaps one or two other periodicals of a different type, all of which appear in the same locality and not as in the case of American or English editorial houses who control several newspapers appearing in different places. Owing to this reason and reviews on films in the newspapers being absolutely independent, the public gets contradictory accounts, and therefore is little impressed by press opinion on the question unless the review happens to be pessimistic, in which case it might serve to confirm the reader's suspicions.

New Theatres Now Building

The construction of new picture palaces has lately taken great strides and by March 1937 there will be 9,000 more seats available. The Gran Teatro Opera, opened lately, has 2500 seats and there are already three other cinemas under construction: the Metropolitan, the Plaza and another as yet unnamed which will have seating capacity for 1800, 1100 and 3600 people respectively.

The logical outcome of this construction fever in a zone already overfilled with cinemas will be the elimination of the old ones through their inability to compete with the comfort and programs provided by the new ones.

Animated Display Sells "Top of Town" for Dearth

From Lloyd Dearth, manager of the Pantages Theatre, Hollywood comes accompanying photo of his "Top of the Town" lobby setpiece, created and constructed by artist J. E. Humphreys. Display measured 15 feet in height by 12 feet wide. Portraits are air brush, bordered with flitter; side panels were built out with orange-amber lights behind. The base was red flitter and title revolved with dancing girls all around the cylinder. Small spotlight set in bottom of base shone on cutout girls with entire display "spotted."

Exploitation Aids Offered On "Horizon" Roadshows

To insure as much publicity as possible on all road show engagements of "Lost Horizon," Hy Daab's department has made available a number of aids for local dates. These include 84-sheet circus-type "bull" snipes, de luxe book with story of the production for information of all newspaper picture reviewers and editors, miniature models of the Shangri La set for display and exhibition purposes as well as art exhibits of water-color scenes, costumes, etc.

Four national tieups are listed and further recommended is telephone stunt which has battery of girls calling women at random, names selected from local phone directories, girls working via plan as outlined by the Columbia home office forces. Latter is working with New York offices of out of town department store buyers to arrange displays, fashion and coiffure tieups for their clients on local dates of the picture. Civic approach is also being utilized strongly by the home office exploiteers wherein important local organizations are being contacted to cooperate on premiere performances.

Barritt Boosts "Town" Dresses

Woody Barritt of the Palace Theatre, Wichita, Kan., staged a tie-up with a large dress shop on "Top of the Town" dresses. The store took a whole page ad, plugging the film's stars and the garments, and mailed 2,000 heralds to office girls in the downtown district. Tie-up rated two full windows, prominently located. Soda fountains in Wichita featured the "Top of the Town" sundae and five and ten played up the sundae at fountain and on menus.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

CHARLES A. RYSWICK

manages the Arena Theatre, New York City, for Consolidated Amusement Ent., and since he is close enough to club headquarters to stop in and get personally acquainted, we'll be expecting him on one of his days off soon. We shall also expect to have reports of your activities at the Arena, Charlie, so you'd better keep in touch.

NICHOLAS H. FEENAN

manages the Regent Theatre for M & P in Norfolk Downs, Mass., starting in showbusiness in 1926 as usher in the Washington Street Olympia, Boston. Two years later he was promoted to assistant manager of the Field Corner Theatre in Dorchester, then transferred to Central Square Theatre and later to Paramount in Newton. From there Feenan went to the Morton in Dorchester, Codman Square there, then the Strand, from which house he was promoted to his present position.

is the assistant manager of the State Theatre in Austin, Texas, working for Al Reynolds, old time Round Tabler. Since Alton is another member to join from the Interstate Circuit we are expecting to hear often from the State. Remember your duty to the Club just begins when you sign the application blank. We expect to hear from you at not too infrequent intervals, so get busy and drop us a line.

is in Philadelphia, as assistant manager of the Logan Theatre, a Warner house. Sig started as student manager at the State and did everything around the house from operating the machine to engineering the heat and air conditioning. After completing his training there Harrison went to the Sedgwick as assistant and thence to his present job.

is out in Kempsey, New South Wales, Australia, acting as manager and director of publicity for the Mayfair Theatre, and from what he tells us in his original correspondence about all the exploitation he can do there, we are awaiting with keen interest accounts of his activities there. Just as you say, Webb, that you are keen on what we do here, the boys here would like a look at what you are putting on at the Mayfair, so let's hear from you.

KARL F. KEYZER

joins the club from Miami, Florida. where he is managing the Lyric Theatre for Wometco, a job just recently taken over. Karl says he has held practically every job the theatre offers and that he owes a lot to the various articles appearing in our section. How about showing your reciprocity, Karl, by contributing something yourself? Yau are probably aware of the number of Wometco boys who are members, so start a little lively competition and send along your latest stunt.

On Tuesday, May 18th, Mort Goodman, to Dorothy Goodman, Cleveland, Ohio. The groom has just been transferred from Warners' Cleveland publicity office to the same post in Los Angeles.

On Sunday, April 11th, Joseph Rinzler, to Miss Syd Steinhaus, Brooklyn, N. Y. The groom is manager of the Riviera Theatre there.

HENRY G. HALL

manages the Jefferson in Charlottesville, Va., a Dominion Theatres house. Henry started in showbusiness at the Jefferson as projectionist, then went to the Lafayette as manager and returned to his present house, where he has been holding forth for the past four years.

JOHN LOMAC

up in Bath, Maine, acts as assistant manager of the Columbia Theatre for M & P Theatres Corp. Johnnie started ushering at the State in Portland, Harry Botwick's house, at the age of sixteen, and worked there for four years until he was transferred and promoted to his present assignment, from which spot we expect to hear from him.

There were so many excellent replies to Section A that it was not possible to select any one as best. I therefore placed twenty of the best in a pile and selected one at random. It was from J. R. Prater, who says:

"Projectionists must be possessed at least of the following information if maximum results are produced with safety to the equipments.

(1) Switches: Must know location of every switch and what circuit or circuits it controls, what the effect of opening or closing each is, in what order they should be opened or closed, and why. For switches having more than one contact, exactly what each contact does and whether it is necessary for a period of time to elapse after making one contact before making a second one, and why. Must know that all switches are in good order and suitable for use with the available voltage and amperage.

(2) Meters: Must be able to read all meters attached to the equipment correctly, know what abnormal readings indicate and what procedure is necessary to return the meter to normal reading. Must know that meter readings are at all times normal.

(3) Lubrication: Must know every point that requires lubrication and exactly what type of lubricant is best suited for use in each place, as well as how much and how often to use it.

(4) Controls: Must know the location, purpose and normal setting of each resistor, volume control, changeover switch or fader. Must also know approximately what monitor volume corresponds with normal auditorium volume when house is empty, half filled and full. (This can be only approximate, however, and rather widely so because atmospheric conditions affect volume requirements very considerably.—F. H. R.)

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 76

There have been those who have insisted that coating the back of a screen with opaque color to stop light from passing through to the air beyond increased screen brightness. What is your idea of a proposition of that sort? Of course few modern screens pass light because of their heavy and usually more or less opaque backing, but what is your own view of the stunt as above set forth?

To join the Bluebook School merely send in answers. Place name and question number upon first sheet. Address F. H. Richardson, No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

(5) Threading: Must know correct Standard Release Print threading, which includes motor pickup time. Must know that track of film through projector (including soundhead) is perfectly clean and all sprocket idlers in correct adjustment with relation to the sprocket at each end, and that they have correct tension. Must know that aperture tension is set at its lowest permissible value in pressure. Must know that the take-up reel tension is correctly adjusted, as well as the upper reel breaking friction. Must know that the exciter lamp filament is straight and otherwise in good condition, and that the exciter lamp optical system is clean and in perfect adjustment with relation to the sound gate aperture. Must know that the P. E. cell is functioning perfectly. Must know that all film loops are of correct size, and so on through a long list. I have included some items (aperture tension, for example) that might be considered immaterial to the sound system. This is done on the theory that a system cannot function at its best except all parts thereof are as they should be, and certainly visual and sound are, in this case, so intimately connected that that holds 100 per cent true.

(6) Combinations and arrangements of equipments vary so widely that it is impractical to include every point necessary to perfection in results, but in general every projectionist must understand all parts of the equipment he is handling and give it and all its various items meticulous care. If he be a real projectionist—one worthy of that title—he will be possessed of full knowledge of fundamentals, and thus equipped will be able to go into any projection room and make good, though it is only fair, just and right that, regardless of his ability, he be provided with all possible detailed information of the installation and its peculiarities if it be strange to him."

I have taken some liberties with Brother Prater's answer, mostly in amplification in the matter of details, for which I trust he will forgive me.

(B) G. E. Doe replies, "The projectionist should understand all details of projection room wiring for several reasons, the chief one of which is that when something electrical goes haywire, fast action is very necessary. The show must go on! And common sense tells us that the man who knows his equipment connections thoroughly, including circuits, is going to be able to hand Old Man Trouble a sock in the eye much more quickly than can the one who is lacking in knowledge."

T. F. Bochert added the matter of temperature rises in his answer to Section A, which is important; then he answered Section B as follows:

"Details of projection room wiring must be known thoroughly, or some minor trouble (burnt out fuse, for example) may stop the show for quite some time. The projectionist should know every fuse in the room and what it protects before he opens his first show in that room. It is also very essential that he know where every transmission line starts, where it goes, what it controls and where it terminates. Such information is absolutely essential to locating trouble quickly. Naturally the time to collect the information is before trouble comes, not while an audience is 'enjoying' a stoppage of the show!"

(C) C. Champney says, "The various circuits should be charted and proper tags attached to the controlling switches. Such a chart, properly prepared, may be of no great assistance to the regular man on the job, but certainly an up-to-date chart of wire circuits, with informative tags on their switches will be of great assistance to the extra man who, it may be assumed, will be called in at least occasionally. The projectionist should supply all the information to a new or a relief man that he would himself appreciate, were he called upon to take over a strange room and its installation."

I add that exhibitors should require that all wire circuits in their projection room be charted, the chart kept up to date and be and remain upon the projection room wall. Also, they should require that an explanatory tag be affixed to all switches, the use of which is not plainly evident, and upon all fuse blocks. That is only right and proper. It may be necessary to call in a projectionist to whom the whole layout is unfamiliar, and there are the theatre patrons to consider. The real honest capable projectionist will have no objection to showing the "other fellow" everything possible. In the long run, trying to put the said "other fellow" in dutch never gets one anywhere.

New Camera Equipment

The installation of speed graphic cameras with range-finders to permit quick focus was started last week at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios by John Arnold, camera chief.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

York, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

While in Omaha the past week we had the pleasure of renewing acquaintance with a lot of friends along Film Row. These boys all had a way of treating us just as well as they did when we were out on parole that time.

We were delighted to meet Mrs. Walter Green and she told us of clipping what we once said of her in this colyum. What it was we are unable to remember, but the fact that she pasted it in her scrapbook would indicate that it was nothing bad. We hope it wasn't, anyway.

Walter Green, as you may recall, is the chief Barker for the Fepco Advertising Co., which advertising, like the Herald, covers the field like an April shower, and it covers a large field, too, even going into foreign countries.

Glen Rogers is still delivering film to the boys of western Iowa and eastern Nebraska, and if Glen fails to get them there on time (which he never does) the boys are apt to conclude that he is out playing golf. But speaking of playing golf reminds us that he and Sherm Fitch of Sioux Falls, S. D., have trimmed us up so many times that we got disgusted and tore up the score sheets (with appropriate remarks).

You never met Mr. Avery of the R. K. O. office here in Omaha, did you? Well, that's just too bad. You have missed something. And you have missed something, too, if you have never met Mr. McLucas of United Artists. It was he who invited us to a screening of "A Star Is Born" and we are going to take the liberty of inviting all of you boys to see this picture, strictly on our own responsibility, and when you see it you will owe United Artists a unanimous vote of thanks.

Then, too, Mr. Avery screened "Shall We Dance," with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers and Edward Everett Horton and Eric Blore, and if your audience likes this dancing team they will like this one.

When you see it be sure to pay attention to Edward Everett Horton and Eric Blore. These two Hoosiers put the picture over with a bang with their comedy.

There is no use of mentioning Ted Mendenhall, the Barker for the Variety Club, for when he starts barking for Paramount you will all know that he has the coon up a tree.

We met Miss Alice Neil, the booker for Warner-First National, and she said she had to stay on the job and keep things going while the rest of the force were at the convention. We'll betcha she said, "Doggone the doggone luck anyhow," but then maybe she doesn't use such strong language.

We also met a number of film boys (all sober as usual) and among them was Carl Rees, Izzy Wineberg, Eddie Rostermund, Bill Barker and Elmer Hunke, et al. When the companies are passing around the lolly pops these boys should each get one.

For the past three days we have been traveling southeast Nebraska, and, among other things, taking an invoice of crop conditions, and if we know anything about crop prospects we would say that the wheat in this territory indicates that the largest crop of wheat in the history of the state will be gathered, provided the country gets a few good rains. We saw wheat in every direction, and it looks like that when harvest time comes it will absorb a lot of the unemployed, that is, provided they want to be absorbed. We know a lot of fellows who wouldn't accept a job because, they say, if they do take a job they can't get back on relief. It is funny that when a man gets hold of public support once he never wants to let go. A lot of 'em are a good deal like a calf that Zeb Jones had back in Indiana. He tried to wean it but couldn't do it until he put a muzzle on it so it couldn't get hold, and that darned calf bawled day and night for two weeks, and its mother did a lot of bawling, too. Well, anyhow, we saw a lot of wheat, and if the farmers can get help to harvest it this country will come out all right.

Nebraska City can be proud that she has Wes Booth, and Wes Booth can be proud he has the Booth theatre, and any town that wouldn't be proud of a theatre like the Booth ought to go back to the Indians, and we judge that Nebraska City isn't going back.

Then we saw the owner of the opposition theatre, and we would say that he is a mighty swell fellow if he hadn't come up to our town and grabbed off one of our girls. It's doggone funny why these "furiners" don't leave our girls alone. Doggone the doggone luck anyhow.

Our two very good friends, Mr. and Mrs. Baily, still operate the theatre at Pawnee City. We never go there that we don't receive a royal welcome. Mr. Baily reports that business could be better, and we report that it certainly will be better if this wheat crop matures. We hope it does and we hope that Mr. Baily will have to add another usher or two.

H. E. Brookings of the Chief theatre at Weeping Water is of the opinion that it would be next to useless to try and operate a theatre without the Herald. We will go for that opinion ourself. He is planning to do a lot of decorating, especially around the front, and when it is completed he will issue a standing invitation to the world to come and see it. We want to go if we can, for we'll bet it will be a good one.

We wish that Wally and Eddie would hurry up and get married and get off the front page. They have been on there for a long time now, and when they do it will give the weatherman a chance to give us some reliable weather reports and give Uncle Leazer a chance to plant his Early Rose potatoes. Who cares whether they are married or not anyhow?

Ernest Grundman operates the Cook theatre at Cook. He also operates a chicken hatchery, and between the two Ernest is kept pretty busy. He recently came over here from Germany and he can talk United States better than some Americans we know. Ernest has it in him and he is going to get it out if they will give him room. He is now on the Herald rolls and that is going to help him a whole lot.

Ray Small of the Cozy theatre at Wymore knew us before he got within three rods of us. It beats all what memories some of these boys have. We hadn't seen Roy for several years. The theatre he was operating burned down last fall and he has built a new one and is now ready to furnish the people of Wymore some entertainment that they can't get without driving a long ways for it, and the roads around Wymore are not all paved, but he expects they will be before long.

Roy can readily see the importance of having the Herald and every theatreman ought to have this same vision.

Tonight is Harry Shiller's grand opening of his new theatre at Grand Island and we'll betcha there will be a lot of the boys there, and if it wasn't forty five miles over there and it wasn't raining we'd be there, too, for when Harry does anything he does it right, and our guess is that Grand Island will be pretty doggone proud of Harry's theatre.

Under Fire

Congress gets second proposal for sweeping investigation of motion pictures, the latest placing the federal microscope on independents as well as majors, in search of monopolies, "cut-throat" competition, unfair wages or working hours for film employees, legislative lobbying, monies spent for such lobbying—including salaries of lobbyists, effect of producer-distributor circuit operations, withholding of product from independents, unreasonable clearance and zoning, compulsory block booking and blind selling, forcing of independents out of business, "cut-rate" admission prices, producer-distributor relationships with sound equipment manufacturers, with music-publishing houses and film trailer producers; independent film-buying combinations—and, recommendations for corrective legislation.

Kansas City Chamber of Commerce appeals directly to Congress for legislative relief for independents from distributors' "discriminatory" practices.

"Chain store" taxation becomes an additional threat to status quo of circuit operation, which already is facing interruption by Allied States' "divorce bill" attack.

New York presents distributors with a sales tax bill for $1,650,000.

Independent owners in four states file complaints on trade practices.

PEARLY PROMISES

THE stage, which means the New York stage, has announced the formation of the "Association Against Censorship in the Legitimate Theatre, Inc." defining its purposes in its title.

After much declaration of defensive policies, about the fourth paragraph of the association's constitution avers that it will endeavour: "To foster and encourage in the legitimate theatre plays of high moral calibre to the end that attempts at censorship in the legitimate theatre may not be motivated or encouraged by others."

This has a musty, reminiscent flavour, bringing memories of ardent declaration and promising in the world of the screen through nearly two decades of evasive sparring with the forces of decency—which merely postponed the final compelling pressures.

When this young stage association announces processes by which it will not only "foster" the good, the true and the beautiful, but will also inhibit the destructive and malodorous, its importance will be largely enhanced.

LAST week Motion Picture Herald on this page observed that the stage "might well take a lesson from the younger screen." That can be said again, with emphasis on the fact that protection against censorship has ultimately proved to require something more than organized alibi and pearly promises.

There came a time for the screen when it had to do something.

It is not enough that producers of public entertainment shall be against censorship—so that they may do as they damned please.

It is also required of responsible makers of entertainment that they also be pleased to be for the common decencies of civilization.

ENOUGH!

MR. PAUL MUNI, famous and honored by Academy award for his acting, is hereby nominated for another medal, this time for a manifestation of common sense, so uncommon in this fevered world as to be astonishing. Mr. Muni has announced his retirement from the screen on the ground that he is tired of "confinement to sound stages" and because "there is no object in working for the mere sake of making money when I already have financial security."

Precisely now, Mr. Muni is at the crest of his success in his art. He can "quit winner" with good grace and content.

The annals of the stage and screen are littered with the mishaps, tragedies and unhappy declines of once famous and successful persons who never knew exactly what they were seeking, after they had it. Actors enslaved by their extravagance and vanity, executives wealthy and past their prime still lusting for authority and power, are to be observed cluttering the scene, laboring not for their art and industry but for their own gilded futilities.

It is too commonly to be observed that generally in the American scene, and across all industries, men lose the capacity to enjoy success by reason of the habit forming nature of the struggle to win it.

THE man who has not enough imagination and not enough general culture to know what to do for fun besides work at his trade is much less intelligent than he generally fancies himself to be. It was also probably somewhere in the same cargo with the Puritan tradition that this land acquired a theory of special virtue in work. For a pioneer people made up of social, religious and economic fugitives, hewing into a savage coast, that was the simple and obvious process of making a virtue of a necessity.

We have been hearing for several years about plans for a more "abundant life" for the many. Prospects of attainment of that Utopian picture would be better if there were more evidence that even the privileged few who have attained success knew how to do something denoting intelligence besides add to their abundance.

HERE and there in our art of the motion picture there have been demonstrations of intelligence. In an earlier day the late Jeremiah J. Kennedy, iron boss of the Patents Company, knew when he had enough and went home to Brooklyn, maintaining an office principally as a place to read a book in inaccessible quietude. Up Long Island Sound lives Edwin Thanhouser enjoying a long contentment. Frank Marion cashed Kalem and went fishing so long ago we do not know his address. Watterson Rothacker, who has just now and then reassured himself by taking an assignment, appears to be bearing up manfully under un-employment. Winfield Sheehan stepped from a hectic highpowered career into Viennese romance and would seem entirely comfortable at ringside rather in the arena. And there is Mr. Charles Chaplin who irised out of the front line scene so softly that no one can say when he did it. He still makes pictures just often enough to prove that he can take it or let it alone. Probably he is still in Hollywood because he likes the climate.

MR. MUNI, it appears, has somewhat the same outlook on his art. "If I grow bored," he says, "perhaps there will be something for me to do again as an actor, but it will be for a particular film or stage play."

That is success.

An autopsy on the horse that dies in harness is likely to show that his brains were all in the britching.

TODAY'S mail brings a message from our neighbor, the Rainbow Room on top the radio butte just across the the Fiftieth street canyon, where they are trying to introduce a cocktail which includes Drambuie. They have the temerity to describe it as "a British liqueur." It is, is it? And to think that it dates from the return of Bonnie Prince Charlie to Scotland, when it was made of good Scottish pot-still whiskey and heather scented honey, and that the formula was the Prince's reward to the MacKinnons for helping him escape the British army! That makes it British, does it? Then so is a claymore.

Progress note: The W.P.A. Federal Writers' Project, New York City, has just issued a release to the press entitled: "Let's Learn Something About Monkeys." We already know something about monkeys.

This Week

WASHINGTON was abroil with legislative proposals impinging directly or indirectly, via one branch or another, upon the motion picture industry. Hollywood cameras ground steadily as an aging studio strike veered now this way now that toward an end predicted by all and known or knowable to none. Stage producers, directors, actors, even grips, convened in New York and decided to forego habitual excoriation of motion picture policies in favor of emulating them. Exhibitors assembled in Milwaukee and technicians in Los Angeles to ponder past, present and prospective developments peculiarly pertinent to their respective interests. A homing executive told of contented customers in South America and a company was formed to make pictures at cost for groups sponsoring what it may choose to interpret as progressive themes. Exhibitors broke out the bunting for Memorial Day.

United Artists Product

The proposed new British Quota Act was discussed in detail at the United Artists stockholders' and partners' meetings in Hollywood which concluded Tuesday, Dr. A. H. Giannini, president, said. Plans are being prepared with a view to meeting the new requirements and giving United Artists producers maximum protection. Arrangements for exchange of talent between the coast studios and Alexander Korda, in England, were developed at the meeting. Mr. Korda, who attended the session, arrived in New York by plane on Wednesday. George J. Schaefer announced that United Artists would release 20 American pictures in addition to the London Films product.

Peace—It's Wonderful

That a time has come to stop calling Hollywood names and begin emulating some of the more profitable policies of the motion picture industry appeared to be the practically unanimous opinion of speakers addressing the hundred official delegates and hundreds of daily listeners attending the first national convention of the stage held under the auspices of the new American Theatre Council.

A thorough reporting of the deliberations is offered on page 29.

RKO Litigation

Developments in the matter of the RKO reorganization plan proposed by the Atlas corporation were highlighted by an estimate of net profits for 1937 made by Bernard Bercu, public accountant. The hearings are being conducted by Special Master George W. Alger.

ASCAP in Michigan

A bill which would tend to prohibit the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers from operating in Michigan was introduced in the state legislature at Lansing Tuesday and referred to a Senate committee. The measure is understood to be similar to the one recently enacted in Montana, prohibiting an agent for more than one copyright owner from licensing music users within the state, which has been contested by ASCAP in an injunction action before a federal statutory court. Decision in this action is pending.

The Studio Strike

Settlement of the Hollywood studio strike appeared to have been delayed by disputes over union jurisdiction arising out of a declaration by George Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, that his organization would call a nationwide studio and theatre strike if the producers recognized Federated Crafts without his approval. Charles Lessing, strike committee chairman, asserted that this declaration by Mr. Browne prevented conclusion of negotiations for a satisfactory peace and submitted charges of proselyting and strikebreaking on the part of the IATSE to the executive board of the American Federation of Labor with threat to seek support of the Committee for Industrial Organization if favorable action were not forthcoming. Mr. Browne countered with a long statement attacking Mr. Lessing and "communist agitators."

The story is on page 28.

Britons Ask Inquiry

The Provisional Shareholders' Committee of Gaumont-British in London has dipped another ladle into the troubled waters with a proposal to ask the Board of Trade to make an investigation of the company's affairs. It was this committee which caused adjournment of the corporation's annual meeting over the protests of the directors and then sought, though unsuccessfully, to restrain payment of the preference dividend.

Bruce Allan's report on the committee's proposal appears on page 56.

Warner Story Reservoir

Jacob Wilk, home office story editor of Warner Brothers, said the company has in its library the largest supply of production material in the history of the company, having spent $5,000,000 in building up this store. Championing the policy of financing Broadway plays, Mr. Wilk announced that his company will be interested in four Gilbert Miller productions scheduled for next season.

To Film Don Juan

Production in Mexico is moving forward. Two features starting in June will have a peculiar interest to Mexicans. One will be based upon the life and exploits of the original Don Juan, Sixteenth Century Spanish blue blood. The other, "La Paloma" ("The Dove") is of the old Mexican song that has become a near classic.

James Lockhart, writing from Mexico City, covers this and other trade developments comprehensively on page 52.

Plan Labor Board

Following conferences in New York which resulted in agreements with Boston and Philadelphia exchange unions, major distributing companies were reported planning appointment of a negotiating committee to meet with union representatives in various parts of the country. Unions have been formed or are forming in about half of the 32 principal exchange cities.

The story of expanding unionization in the exchange branch of the industry will be found on page 34.

Roxy Hearing Deferred

The hearing on a motion to confirm the report of Special Master Addison S. Pratt, which recommended approval of the amended plan of reorganization of the Roxy Theatre corporation with minor modifications, was adjourned to June 4 by Federal Judge William Bondy with objectors instructed to file briefs by May 27. The adjournment is expected to delay confirmation beyond July 1.

The details are on page 36.

Mexico Raises Ante

Following the imposition of a 25 per cent tariff in January, the Mexican government decreed last week that 35 per cent of the gross sales of any foreign country selling in Mexico City but not maintaining a branch sales office in Mexico is assumed to be profit and subject to additional levy. American companies have said that profits from Mexican service average not more than 10 per cent. More or less gradual withdrawal from the territory is foreseen as a probable result of the increased cost of doing business there.

The matter is covered on page 36.

Japanese Trade War

Japanese exhibitors were caught between battle lines drawn up by four companies against the powerful Toho affiliation and faced a dire shortage of product when notified that theatres exhibiting Toho productions would not be serviced by its competitors.

Background and ramifications are scanned on page 64.

Depinet Heads Newsreel

Ned E. Depinet, RKO-Radio vice-president in charge of production, became president of Pathe News, Inc., and Frederick Ullman, formerly manager of the commercial department of Pathe, became vice-president and general manager in an executive reorganization expected to bring the editorial and operating policies of the newsreel into closer alignment with those of the parent company.

47 in Production

Eight productions were placed before Hollywood cameras and 9 were taken to cutting rooms, 47 pictures holding the stages at close of a seasonably normal week. Product of the caliber considered major appeared on both starting and finishing lists.

Gus McCarthy's faithful documentation of the studio situation appears on page 39.

Ruby Keeler Quits

Following Al Jolson's example, Ruby Keeler (Mrs. Jolson) obtained a release from her Warner Brothers contract, which had two pictures to go, and opened negotiations with RKO-Radio, Universal and Twentieth Century-Fox for another. Report had it that no financial consideration was given by either party.

Seats of the Satisfied

John Day, Jr., general manager of Paramount affairs in South America, brought to New York the observation that South American audiences must like the current crop of pictures better than those that preceded it because temperamental Latins accustomed to whittling the seats when less than enthralled by the picture on the screen are doing less of it. Another quaint custom, leaving lighted cigarettes where they will do the most damage when disgustedly departing the premises, is also tapering off.

Mr. Day's comments on these and other aspects of the industry in South America are made available on page 55.

The April Champions

Box Office Champions for April were found to be "Maytime," "Marked Woman," "Wake Up and Live," "Waikiki Wedding," "Internes Can't Take Money," "A Star Is Born," "History is Made at Night" and "The King and the Chorus Girl."

Production credits and stills from the pictures are published on pages 16-17.

LEGISLATIVE THREATS REACH NEW HIGH TIDE

Sweeping Inquiry Into Every Phase of Motion Picture Activity, with Federal Supervision, Is Asked of Congress

Serious threats of legislative interference with and investigation of motion picture management and operation are facing the industry:

A fantastically sweeping investigation of every conceivable phase of motion pictures, virtually placing the business under government supervision, management and control, with the independents involved as well as majors, was proposed in Congress this week by Martin Dies, Representative from Texas, who is a member of the House Rules Committee, to which the resolution was referred, and where a limitedly similar investigation proposal by Congressman Hobbs is pending.

The Kansas City, Kansas, Chamber of Commerce, at the continued instigation of the community and press, appealed directly to Congress for relief for independent owners from "discriminatory" distributor practices.

"Chain store" taxation is becoming an additional threat to the status quo of circuit operation, which is already facing interruption by Allied States' "divorce bill" attack.

New York City has presented film distributors with a sales tax bill for $1,650,000, and new tax bills threaten elsewhere.

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

The investigation of the motion picture industry proposed by Martin Dies, Democratic Congressman from the Second District in Texas, differs in two important respects from any other film investigation heretofore proposed to Congress. It calls, for one thing, for a study of the practices of the independents as well as of the integrated companies, and, for another, it provides for a survey to determine whether the present methods of the producer-distributors constitute a stabilizing or a disorganizing influence upon the industry as a whole.

The probe would be conducted by a special House of Representatives committee of seven members to be appointed by the House Speaker, which would be authorized to enlist the cooperation of the Department of Justice, with access to the department's files, or any other Federal agency. The committee would be authorized to hold hearings during the recess of Congress and to conduct them at any points throughout the country that might seem advisable.

Thirteen specific subjects for investigation are listed in the resolution, as follows:

1. Whether or not monopolies exist in the business and, if so, the individuals, concerns or corporations guilty of such monopoly, and what steps, if any, should be taken to break up such monopoly and restore competitive conditions.

2. Whether or not unfair trade practices exist in the industry and, if so, what group, corporation, trade association or individuals are guilty.

3. Whether or not "cut-throat" competition exists and, if so, what individuals, corporations or groups are guilty.

4. Whether employees in the industry are receiving fair wages for reasonable hours of work and whether or not the conditions of work are fair and satisfactory.

Monopoly and Propaganda

5. The activities of members of various organizations and associations of exhibitors, or distributors, or producers, "to monopolize business to prevent competition, to promote legislation"; the total membership of such organizations, the amount of money raised by each, the amount of salary paid to officers, and the amounts expended, if any, for propaganda purposes to bring about discriminatory legislation.

6. Whether or not the ownership by a producer of stock or other interest in exhibiting corporations or concerns tends to create monopoly and results in unfair competition, and whether or not the producers should be prohibited from engaging in exhibition and should be entirely divorced from exhibition or distribution.

7. Whether any of the producers and distributors "have adopted such devices as uniform exhibition contracts, withholding of product from independent theatres, allocation of product to controlled theatres, unfair and unreasonable zoning and protection, compulsory block booking and blind selling, forcing out of business and acquisition of independent theatres, and other unfair practices and, if so, the appropriate steps that should be taken to correct this condition and prevent a continuation of such unfair trade practices."

Cut-throat Admission Prices

8. The efforts, if any, "of certain theatres to cut the price of admission below what is reasonable and fair in order to deprive their competitors of profits and drive them out of business, and whether or not such "cut-throat" competition, if any, results in inferior quality of pictures and in lower wages paid to employees."

9. The efforts of the theatre-owning producers, if any, to regulate the admission prices of independent theatres by limitation in exhibition contracts and by withholding films for unreasonable periods from low-admission houses.

10. The relations—corporate, contractual and otherwise—"between the producers and distributors of motion pictures, on the one hand, and the manufacturers of electrical equipment for reproducing sound in theatres, the principal music-publishing houses, and the manufacturers of so-called screen trail-

Owners in Four States File Complaints On Trade Practices; MPTOA Progresses

Protests against trade practices of one kind or another were filed this week by organized independent exhibitors in California, New England, New York and Ohio.

Four distributors, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Columbia, United Artists and Universal, who agreed to discontinue the levying of a separate score charge will fulfill that promise during the new selling season.

The Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California adopted a resolution terming "unfair, unethical, unjust and contrary to the implied promises" Paramount's recent announcement that it would not deliver some of the features on its current work sheet.

Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of Boston attacked national expansion moves by major affiliated circuits as dangerous to the small exhibitor.

Charles C. Moskowitz, Loew executive, was to be examined this week in injunctive proceedings brought by the Brandt circuit in protest against the split week booking policy recently adopted by the Loew circuit.

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio in a bulletin to members cited Loew financial gains for the first part of 1937 and asked reports from members who have been informed by Loew branch managers that adjustments on their contention of being oversold on the 1936-37 product would have to be made in New York.

Attorneys for both sides in an anti-trust suit brought by George Fuller of New Orleans against seven large distributors went into conference this week with the possibility that the case might be settled out of court. Both favor it, it was said.

HOBBS' INQUIRY PROPOSAL ADVANCED

ers, on the other hand, and the effect of such relations on the independent theatre owners and the public.

11. The effect on the independent exhibitor and the public of percentage playing, compulsory designation of play dates, and other terms and conditions imposed by the producer-distributors; the special favors granted to the producer-distributor owned, controlled and affiliated theatres and discriminations practiced against independent theatres, if any, in the matter of such terms and conditions; and "the activities, if any, of independent theatres through their associations and organizations to monopolize the business of exhibition so as to be able to dictate to the producers the terms and conditions under which their product shall be run, and to produce discriminatory legislation, if any."

Outlet for Producers

12. "The question as to whether or not producers must have some dependable outlet for their product in order to insure continuous production on a high-grade basis and whether or not the present practices of producers tend to stabilize the entire industry and to insure to the independents better pictures, a more dependable supply, and fairer admission prices.

13. "What legislation, if any, is needed to correct the abuses in the motion-picture industry and to restore fair-competition conditions if it is found that such conditions do not exist."

Authorization is given the committee to have the Speaker of the House issue subpoenas, to be served by the House Sergeant at Arms, and to require witnesses to give their testimony under oath.

It is also provided that "every person who, having been summoned as a witness by authority of said committee, or any subcommittee thereof, wilfully makes default, or who, having appeared, refuses to answer any question pertinent to the investigation heretofore authorized, or who, having been required to produce records, books, papers, and documents pertinent to the investigation heretofore authorized, fails or refuses to produce such required records, books papers, and documents, shall be held to the penalties provided by section 102 of the Revised Statutes of the United States as amended."

Hobbs Proposal Advanced

The investigation of the industry proposed by Samuel Hobbs, Representative from Alabama, already has made progress in Congress, the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives submitting a favorable report, three weeks ago, on the investigation.

Representative Hobbs, a member of the Judiciary Committee, admittedly aims his bill primarily at the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, theatre-owning producers, manufacturers of sound reproducing equipment, music publishing houses and producers of trailers.

BROADWAY RECEIPTS INCREASE $76,000

Federal admission tax receipts from the Third New York District (Broadway and Times Square) increased from $511,185 in March to $587,878 in April, the Bureau of Internal Revenue reported. Box office collections, including season tickets, accounted for $496,035, compared with $448,549 the preceding month.

Other receipts, as reported by the bureau, were $11,385 from free or reduced rate admissions, against $2,939 in March; $27,202 from tickets sold by brokers, against $13,922; $10.56 from tickets sold by proprietors in excess of the established price, against $2,458; nothing from permanent use or lease of boxes and seats, against $29, and $53,246 from admissions to roof gardens and cabarets, against $43,287.

In recommending that the House rules committee, which must pass upon all measures proposing investigations, give favorable consideration to the Hobbs resolution, the judiciary committee set in motion what would be an exhaustive study of the industry by Congress.

Five Aims Cited

In introducing his resolution, Representative Hobbs, who heretofore has been in the news chiefly for his drives against "mail order" insurance companies, outlined five objectives for the investigations, as follows:

1. The organization, functions and financing of the MPPDA, its purposes and accomplishments, and the extent to which its members have cooperated to suppress competition and restrain trade.

2. The activities of the members of the MPPDA to monopolize or control the industry by such devices as uniform exhibition contracts, withholding of product from independent theatres, allocation of product to controlled theatres, unfair and unreasonable zoning and protection, compulsory block booking and blind selling, forcing out of business and acquisition of independent theatres, and other unfair practices.

3. The efforts of theatre-owning producers to regulate the admission prices of independent theatres by limitations in exhibition contracts and by withholding films for unreasonable periods from low-admission houses.

4. The relations, corporate, contractual and otherwise, between the producers and distributors of motion pictures, on the one hand, and the manufacturers of electrical equipment for reproducing sound in theatres, the principal music publishing houses, and the manufacturers of screen trailers, on the other hand, and the effect of such relations on the independent exhibitors and the public.

5. The effect on the independent exhibitors and on the public of percentage playing, compulsory designation of play dates and other terms and conditions imposed by the producer-distributors on the independent theatre owners, and the special favors granted to the producer-distributors' owned, controlled and affiliated theatres, and discrimination practiced against independent theatres in such terms and conditions.

Following its investigation, the judiciary committee would be instructed to report to the House as to "any changes in the antitrust laws, the copyright laws, the laws against using the mails to defraud, and any new measures which may be necessary or desirable to cure any abuses which may be found to exist in the organization, financing and practices of the motion picture industry."

Kansas Business Men Appeal to Congress

by KENNETH FORCE

in Kansas City

Probably the first instance on record where a community has made a direct appeal to Congress on motion picture matters came last week with the unexpected move in that direction by the Chamber of Commerce of Kansas City, Kansas, where business men, the press and various civic and social organizations for months have been conducting a campaign to force distributors to grant independent exhibitors better clearance on feature product.

The Chamber of Commerce asked Congress for laws to prevent what the Chamber describes as "discriminatory" practices by exchanges which allegedly prevent Kansas City independents from securing first run pictures.

Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas replied to a brief prepared by the Chamber, "There can be no doubt that there is discrimination against the picture houses in Kansas City, Kansas, and I certainly hope we can bring about passage of some legislation that will protect the rights of your motion picture operators."

The Mayor of Kansas City has figured prominently in the fight, which was started to satisfy "city pride" and eliminate conditions whereby the town is reputedly compelled to show "stale" pictures, whereas the city's rival, Kansas City, Missouri, runs "fresh" first runs.

"Restrictions on K. C. K. by Movie Barons Not for Profit It Seems," loudly proclaims a two-column front page headline in the Kansas City, Kansan.

"Apparently it is not a monetary motive that causes the movie barons to deprive Kansas City, Kansas, of first-run films," the story says.

"If it were a sheer desire to skim the profits from first-run screenings, the theatre world would have to establish more than five first-run houses in Kansas City, Mo., to rob Kansas City, Kansas, of such patronage," the Kansan asserts.

"In other words, five first-run theatres cannot and do not handle the full quota of new films released each week throughout the year in a smooth fashion.

"The truth is that there are enough good pictures released continually to provide more than five first-run theatres if Kansas City, Kansas, bows in shame to movie barons and grants that the 130,000 residents of this community are a part of the metropolitan area of Kansas City, Mo.

"But Kansas City, Kansas, wants and demands more than merely a chance to spend its own money in its own theatres. It wants recognition of itself as the largest city in Kansas and not as a suburb of Kansas City, Mo.

"Thus the showing of a film in a theatre in nearby Lawrence a week ahead of its opening in Kansas City, Mo., is not merely an incident, for the casual observer might not know that Kansas City, Kansas, cannot have that same film for another six weeks at the earliest. That is, this city cannot have it until four weeks after it has closed at the Mainstreet, which will be approximately six weeks after Lawrence has seen it!

"The Theatre Owners association of Kansas City, Kansas, has agreed with the aroused public here that the system whereby first-run movie contracts are made is unjust and unfair to the 40,000 weekly movie patrons in this city."

Proposes Court Action

Terming the situation "ignominious," the Kansan thinks "it might help a lot if the courts would finally determine uniformly throughout the United States exactly what the procedure should be with regard to film priority rights—clearance privileges, as film row calls it.

"In the old days the 'block booking' system was used, largely to route pictures into favored theatres. The independent theatres complained loudly enough so that in 1930 the government stepped in, carried the problem to the courts, and obtained a ruling whereby block booking was abandoned.

"During the next two years there was developed the socalled 'price zoning and clearance' system. Again the independent theatre owners complained, asserting that this was as bad as block booking, that it operated as a monopoly in restraint of trade.

Cites Los Angeles Decree

"Again the federal government stepped into the picture and on November 16, 1932, obtained the famed consent decree in the Los Angeles federal court that presumably established for all the country a 'new deal' in picture distribution. Under this plan the war between film distributors and theatres was to end with the understanding that one theatre could have clearance over another on a price basis only. That is, in each and every zone, usually a city plus its immediate suburban area, the top price theatres became first-run houses, and for every 5-cent drop in the admission rate the lesser theatres had to wait two weeks before they could show the same films.

"This price clearance system became the vogue throughout the country until in the season 1935-36 a new type of contract came into use. The ramifications of that contract were such that a group of small theatre owners in Kansas City, Mo., brought suit in the United States district court for the western division of Missouri in an attempt to compel alterations in the contract form. In this the plaintiffs failed, but they announced last week they had not given up their fight. This particular lawsuit came to trial before Judge Merrill E. Otis of Kansas City, Mo., last July. It was the case of Emanuel Rolsky, et al., vs. Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., et al.

"The plaintiffs included a small group of Kansas City, Mo., theatre owners. Rolsky owns the National.

"This is the famous case wherein Judge Otis ruled that since films are copyrighted, distributors 'owning a copyright upon a given picture may sell to an exhibitor in a given area the exclusive right to exhibit that picture, either for a short period or for a long period, provided it is not longer than the life of the copyright. . . ."

Says Companies Have Authority

The Kansan concludes that "since a copyright is initially granted for 28 years, and since copyrights are renewable for an equal additional period of 28 years, it would appear that motion picture companies have ample authority to make any or all theatres in Kansas City, Kansas, wait a long, long time for films.

"Rolsky informed The Kansan last week that he and his fellow plaintiffs were having Boatright (William G. Boatright, attorney for the plaintiffs) perfect the transcript in the case for early filing in an effort to obtain a review of this ruling by the appeal court.

"We naturally hope for a reversal, as the present ruling is decidedly disadvantageous to us exhibitors," Rolsky said.

"Attorneys in Kansas City, Kansas, said that whichever way the decision goes the case would not directly apply in this state, but that as a general trend such decisions serve as precedent in lieu of actual decisions in other districts."

FILM LABOR PLOT SEEN BY VALENTINE

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine in New York charged this week that a "great labor organization" was seeking to block the extradition of four men now under arrest in Fort Wayne, Ind., charged with the stench bombing of Brooklyn motion picture theatres. The men have been indicted by the Kings County grand jury.

The commissioner revealed that evidence was secretly taken out of Indiana to New York by detectives to insure its not being destroyed after the men had been seized. "All we need now," said Mr. Valentine, "is the consent of the Governor of Indiana for extradition and I wonder if we will be able to get it. Why? Because a great labor organization appears to be moving to try to block it."

Florida and Wisconsin Get "Chain Store" Bills

Establishment of the constitutionality of the socalled "chain store" tax by the United States Supreme Court—in the Louisiana case—apparently has started what already appears to be a formidable move to enact such legislation in states throughout the country. The motion picture theatre "chain" is involved, particularly the properties of the producer-distributors.

With Louisiana's tax declared valid, Pennsylvania enacting a chain store levy two weeks ago, and now Florida and Wisconsin receiving similar bills, Allied States Association frankly announced last week it will back such legislation elsewhere in the states for the purpose of "combating chain competition."

"This attack," says Allied, "will be even more effective than the divorcement law, which is now being sponsored" by Allied.

"The new measures will have these advantages: Their validity will be beyond question and their operation can not be delayed by protracted litigation; they will produce revenue for the States and hence will appeal to legislatures now seeking new forms of taxation," Allied's statement said. Too, the laws "can be made to include certain socalled depredations comparable with those of the affiliated chains," continued Allied.

Allied admitted that the recent decisions by the courts declaring the chain store tax valid prompted the organization to present to exhibitors this "new and revised campaign" of attack against major circuits. The presentation was scheduled to take place this week at Allied's national convention, in Milwaukee.

Meanwhile, the new Florida chain store tax bill was aimed directly at motion picture theatres, providing the following levies:

Only one theatre—a flat sum of $25.00.
Class 2—
A chain of more than one but not more than three—a flat sum of $75.00.
Class 3—
More than three theatres but not more than six—a flat sum of $125.00 for each theatre.
Class 4—
Chains of more than six but not more than ten—a flat sum of $200.00 for each theatre.
Class 5—
Ten theatres but no more than 20—a flat sum of $350.00 each.
Class 6—
Not more than 20—a flat sum of $500.00 for each theatre.

The bill, known as House Bill No. 1177, has been referred to the Committee on Finance and Taxation of Public Amusement.

John Grobschmidt, Milwaukee assemblyman, has introduced in the Wisconsin legislature a chain store tax bill to conform with the Louisiana law.

The new bill would levy a tax ranging from $10 on "stores" in chains of from one to 10, to $600 on "stores" in chains of more than 500 outlets, no matter where the stores are located.

Allied Continuing with "Divorce Bill" Campaign

Allied States, in announcing its new strategy against major interests, to be undertaken through the sponsorship of the chain store taxation, also asserted that the new move "does not mean that it is proposed to abandon the divorcement bill in states where it has been passed or where it is still under consideration or in territories where due to local conditions it might be preferred to the new (chain store tax) measure now being devised."

Allied's progress in the divorcement campaign—legislation forcing producer-distributor divestment of theatre holdings—was outlined last week by Allied on the eve of its national convention at Milwaukee (see page 41, May 22d issue of Motion Picture Herald), and again was taken up this week at the actual convention sessions.

Meanwhile, in Wisconsin, an amendment has been adopted to the Hall divorce bill which would give circuit operators until January 1, 1939, to dispose of their stock in Wisconsin theatres. Under the original bill, the act became effective 12 months after passage.

Since the passage of the measure by the Wisconsin assembly, it is possible that the senate, which has not as yet acted upon its bill, will consider both measures when the Hall bill has a hearing before the committee on state and local government in the senate May 27th.

Before the assembly voted on the bill, proponents of the measure declared that in order to preserve the independent in the picture business, it was important that something must be done to control circuit operation in Wisconsin.

Legislation Creates New Tax Worries for Films

While distributors in New York City this week were preparing to pay at least $1,650,000 in accruals on the two per cent municipal sales tax, not including penalties and interest, which, it was indicated, will not be cancelled, unusually long state legislative sessions opened the door for additional taxation measures against the industry.

Sales tax or direct admission tax measures were introduced in Michigan and Florida and passed in Kansas. Four of seven new taxes proposed to the city legislators of Philadelphia affect the motion picture industry. In Wisconsin a "chain store" tax, modeled on one recently ruled valid in Louisiana, was introduced.

NEW TAX PROBLEMS ARE FACED

Congress, still in session in Washington, received favorably a proposal to extend the federal admission tax for another two years. Internal Revenue Bureau records showed that receipts from the tax for the first ten months of the current fiscal year were well over $16,000,000, running $2,000,000 ahead of the revenue a year ago.

The industry in Michigan was preparing to protest a proposal for a state censorship board to be supported by a levy on distributors.

New ramifications in the sales tax problem in New York City were added when the comptroller's office ruled that film contracts closed with national circuits in New York are subject to the levy regardless of how much of the revenue from the contract may be derived from the circuit's theatres located outside of the city.

The court of appeals decision in the United Artists test case on the applicability of the sales tax to film rentals held that the tax applied only to rentals derived from theatres located within the city limits. A major distributor, however, was informally advised that the comptroller regarded the entire revenue from a contract, closed in the city, as taxable. The ruling will be contested, it was said.

The total of $1,650,000 due the city is for the two years ended January 1, 1937, and is based on completed audits of the books of half of the major distributors in the city and does not include interest and penalties for nonpayment of the tax while it was being litigated. A city official said that distributors had conferred with the comptroller's office on a waiver of penalties but that two such applications had been refused and there was "only a very slim chance" that the decision would be changed. It was said that the court of appeals decision included a judgment for penalties.

In another ruling, involving the shelving of pictures bought on a selective contract, the comptroller's office also informally advised a distributor that payments by a theatre made as damages on a rejected picture are regarded as taxable. Distributors have not regarded such payments as clear rental or revenue, and will contest the point. Such payments usually represent the difference between the contract price and what the distributor is able to get for the picture's first run in another theatre.

Federal Tax To Be Extended

The Administration's proposal for continuance of the admission tax, the three cent postage rate for first class mail for other than local delivery and other existing "nuisance" taxes was covered in a resolution introduced in the House of Representatives May 20th by Robert L. Doughton, congressman from North Carolina and chairman of the ways and means committee. The levies would be continued until 1939.

The suggestion was not a surprise. Hopes had been held out by members of Congress that it might be eliminated this June, but it was generally conceded that the revenue from this source was too important to be foregone.

Steadily increasing theatre attendance brought admission tax receipts to $1,589,682 in April, the highest figure recorded for any month so far, according to the monthly report of the Internal Revenue Bureau, issued May 21st.

The April collections, it was shown, were nearly $50,000 over the Mach total of $1,539,408 and $323,000 above the April, 1936, receipts of $1,266,425. Receipts for the first four months of the current calendar year aggregated $6,108,119, an increase of $721,769 over the $5,386,350 collected in the corresponding period last year. Collections for the first ten months of the fiscal year which began July 1, 1936, were up $2,067,076, totalling $16,328,297 against $14,261,221 a year ago.

LABOR DIFFICULTIES SPREAD TO ENGLAND

Motion picture labor difficulties have spread to England this week where laboratory companies will meet a delegation of the Association of Cine-Technicians shortly to discuss wages and working conditions. The conference was arranged in London by M. Neville Kearney, secretary of the Film Group of the Federated British Industries, after a strike threat had been made by the A. C. T. on the question of recognition.

States Get Measures

A proposal for a ten per cent admission tax on all amusements, except boxing, with the minimum taxable admission ten cents was introduced in the Michigan legislature by M. Clyde Stout, chairman of the ways and means committee of the lower house. Religious, benevolent, municipal, police and veterans' affairs would be exempted. The tax would raise from six to eight millions annually and chances for its approval were considered good.

Two bills affecting the amusement industry were introduced in Florida. S. C. Smith, senator from Lake City, presented a sales tax bill in the upper house providing for a straight levy of three per cent on all sales of real or personal property, on all classes of amusements and on all sales of businesses in the state. In the lower house a measure was proposed placing a tax of one and one-half cents on each ten cents or fraction of the admission prices to theatres, night clubs and other places of amusement. Revenue was to be applied to old age pensions.

Four of seven taxes recommended by the finance committee of the Philadelphia City Council would affect the industry. They are: a tax of one cent on each 25 cents of admissions; a tax on films; a levy on advertising billboard space, a tax of $5 on each vending machine.

The Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association proposed a method by which Kansas exhibitors could collect the two per cent sales tax, which becomes effective June 1st, without the trouble involved in handling mills.

Exhibitors, as are other retailers, are required to pass on the tax to the public. The Association suggested that exhibitors charge 9.8 cents admission. The tax would bring this to ten cents. On the 15 cent, 20 cent, 25 cent, 30 cent and 35 cent admissions it was suggested that the exhibitor change his prices to 15.6 cents, 20.6 cents and so on. Addition of the tax would bring the total to an even amount. It was recommended that the 40 cent admission be changed to 39.2 cents.

John Grobschmidt, assemblyman from Milwaukee, introduced a "chain store" tax bill in the Wisconsin legislature, modeled on the Louisiana law, recently declared constitutional by the United States supreme court. The Wisconsin bill would levy a tax ranging from $10 on stores in chains of from one to ten to $600 on stores in chains of more than 500 outlets no matter where the stores are located.

Four measures which would have cost the industry more than $650,000 annually in Nebraska if passed were defeated or left to die in committee with the adjournment of the state unicameral legislature. Two outstanding measures were those which would have levied ten per cent of the box office gross and ten per cent of the gross film rental for relief. Other proposals were for a $1,000 annual license fee for distributors and for two men in projection booths.

Censorship Bill Attacked

A proposal in the Michigan legislature for a state censorship board of three members to be appointed by the governor, their salaries to be paid out of a charge against distributors, was attacked by Allied States Association of Michigan and other exhiibtor bodies. Other measures being considered by the legislature were to close all theatres which, by September 1, 1937, do not have concrete floors, wall bases, entrances and stairways; to bar all advertising reels except trailers; to provide for dog-racing, and to provide for a 40 hour week for women workers.

The Pennsylvania legislature this week paved the way for any municipality in the state which has voted down Sunday shows under the terms of the Local Option Act of 1935 to vote again on the question at the 1937 primaries next September.

The New Hampshire Senate received a measure which would permit theatres in the state to open at 4 P. M. on Sundays except during the period from May to September. The bill replaced a similar proposal recently killed in the House.

A court test of the ban on Sunday shows in Thomasville, Ga., was expected to follow the opening of his house by Nat Williams last Sunday. A recent referendum resulted in a vote of 358 for Sunday shows out of 399 cast but opponents declared that the rest of 2,300 registered voters who refrained from balloting at the request of local church organizations should be considered to have opposed the measure.

National Decency Legion Classifies 23 Productions

Of 23 new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week 13 were approved for general patronage, eight were listed as unobjectionable for adults and two were classed as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Angel's Holliday," "Behind the Headlines," "The Go Getter," "Die Grobe Adele," "Gun Lords of Stirrup Basin," "Hotel Haywire," "Kirschen in Nachbars Garten," "League of Frightened Men," "Marry the Girl," "Slim," "Speed to Spare," "Think Fast, Mr. Moto," "Venus Makes Trouble." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Damaged Goods," "Doctor Knock," "Episode," "Forever Yours," "I Met Him in Paris," "The Man in the Mirror," "Woman Chases Man," "The World's in Love." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Dreaming Lips," "Golem."

William Goetz, vice-president of Twentieth Century-Fox, will leave Hollywood for New York June 10, from where he will sail for England a week later to make a six-week production survey.

THEIR LOVE STORY is not a scenario writer's dream. It is based on true life, that's why it's so powerful. Parnell said, "They can't deny me the right of every man to have the woman he loves beside him." And today's headlines echo this brave sentiment throughout the world!

ALLIED MAKES ANTI-CIRCUIT LAWS CHIEF WEAPON AGAINST MAJORS

Divorcement of Producers from Theatres and Chain Tax Against Circuit Houses Emphasized at Milwaukee Convention

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Milwaukee

Protesting that the independent motion picture theatre owner stands today at the mercy of the large producer-distributor-circuit, and warning that anti-circuit "divorcement" bills and "chain-store" taxation "are absolutely necessary in the independents' struggle for existence," national leaders on Wednesday noon sounded the keynote of the annual convention of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, at the Pfister hotel, in Milwaukee.

The convention was not more than a few hours in discussion when it became quite evident that Allied intends to push its drive with even more vigor to drive the producer-distributors out of exhibition.

The convention attacked distributors for their "unfair trade practices"—principally for the widespread raising of film rentals reported by 80 per cent of independent owners, and lost no time in concluding that the organization definitely intends to pursue its campaign of sponsoring additional "divorce" and "chain-store" tax bills, and, also, to use its influence on the independent to delay his film buying for the new season until distributors grant relief.

There were strong indications at convention-opening that Allied is inclining toward exhibition unionization via John L. Lewis's Committee for Industrial Organization.

Convention procedure and determination of organization policy to follow adjournment —at Friday noon—continued in the hands of Abram F. Myers, general counsel and board chairman, of Washington, D. C.; W. A. (Fighting Al) Steffes, chairman of the anti-major legislative campaign; Nathan Yamins, Allied president, from Fall River, Mass., and Henderson M. Richey, secretary, of Detroit.

Richey Urges Delay of Buying

A meeting of the national directors actually started the meeting Wednesday noon. Reports were made by various officers and with the convention program completed, the directors decided to move discussion of Allied's 1937-38 sales survey among exhibitors up to Wednesday afternoon and to hold an additional executive conference on Thursday to discuss the labor situation.

H. M. Richey, national secretary, in making his sales survey report Wednesday, said the study of exhibitors' buying for the new season covered all distribution centers except Chicago, where a special situation exists.

Mr. Richey said that "this convention is a buyers' convention," and he appealed to the exhibitors to delay buying. He charged that "there is no such thing as a national sales policy. Every deal is different. Eighty per cent of the exhibitors report increased rentals being asked this year."

"The greatest single factor in the sale of pictures is the exhibitor, his weakness, mainly in a competitive situation, and his lack of bargaining skill," he continued. "The effects of double features make him more dependent upon the distributors. The distributors have increased their revenue by percentage playing and by increasing flat rentals. The return of prosperity has been diverted to the distributors and increased grosses are offset by the increased rentals."

"Mounting rentals, increased percentages, compulsory block booking, admission price control, designation of play dates are the real menace to exhibitors and complete monopolization of business by the 'Big Eight' will result if this continues," he added.

Aim to "Break Distributor Control"

Mr. Myers declared that the "buyers' reports" from exhibitors constituted one of the outstanding pieces of convention business, representing, as he said, a tangible indication of the material Allied had to work with to "break down the present control of the theatre business by distributors."

Preliminary tabulation of 375 questionnaire forms covering more than 400 theatres in 29 exchange centers were said by Allied on the eve of the convention to bear out its prediction that "exhibitors will go slow with their buying this year and await reports to and action taken at the convention."

Allied claims that the survey shows whether block booking is more prevalent in one territory than in another: whether "the other fellow" has to take all the short subjects of a distributor; whether one exhibitor is being "soaked" with more percentage pictures than the exhibitors in other territories; whether a national policy exists on designated playdates; and whether film rental contract terms are "tougher" where there is no effective exhibitor organization than where there is.

Calls Legislation Necessary

"Divorce" bills and chain tax bills are absolutely necessary in the battle of the independent theatre operators to survive, Abram F. Myers, general counsel and board chairman, said Wednesday at the convention. "Chain theatre operation and theatre grabbing constitute visible manifestation of the monopoly at which Allied can strike. Even if the 'Big Eight' get rid of the theatres the situation will be still in the hands of the distributors when pictures are played on a percentage basis. Selling policies must be reformed.

"Exhibitors could strike back through the Hobbs resolution for Congressional investigation, through the Pettengill Bill and through cooperation," he concluded.

Mr. Myers also declared that the labor situation now was very important and was one of the main interests of the meeting.

Mr. Myers said that suggestions have been made that the exhibitors seriously consider the advisability of having all independent theatres sign up with John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, as against the A.F.L., if unionization is necessary. Arguments for such a plan, said Mr. Myers are that (1) "unionization is the order of the day; (2) the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes is tied up with the producers and is opposing all efforts by independent exhibitors to secure remedial legislation; and (3) that by dealing with the CIO the support of vast manpower could be secured." The meeting on labor was in charge of Fred J. Herrington.

Convention Attacks Rental Increases Reported by 80% of Independent Owners; Leaning to CIO Unionizing Indicated

Al Steffes, Allied director, spoke Thursday on the "chain tax" situation and presented a draft of a bill which, "with proper changes," could be submitted in state legislatures after the local tax laws had been looked into.

Wood Protests Withheld Films

On Wednesday, Peter J. Wood, convention chairman, spoke on the extent of pictures that the companies had been withholding from exhibitors in "attempts to get deals they want." Paramount was cited for holding back a number of films and Columbia for "Lost Horizon."

The turnout for the convention and the registrations at the hotel along with the overflow at the Milwaukee Athletic Club indicated the largest meeting in the history of the organization.

Mr. Steffes' bill is said to be patterned after the Louisiana chain store tax measure which was upheld by the United States supreme court last week. The Louisiana measure establishes a graduated tax schedule on chain store units within the state. The tax scale is based upon the total number of units of the chain nationally. Thus, if applied to theatres, a circuit which operated only one theatre in a state in which the law was in effect, would pay the highest tax rate on the single theatre if its national operations came within the maximum numerical brackets. The supreme court held that the amount of the tax imposed was discretionary with state legislatures.

Will Push "Divorce" Fight

Allied emphasizes that the organization's efforts to obtain enactment of theatre "divorce" bills would not be ended or interrupted by its new efforts on behalf of chain tax legislation, and that the "divorce" laws "might be preferred to the new (tax) measures in some territories because of local conditions."

The Allied leaders declared that the taxation measures will have vital advantages not shared by the theatre divorce legislation. They number among these advantages the fact that the chain tax legislation has been upheld by the nation's highest tribunal and its operation after enactment

"cannot be delayed by protracted litigation." In addition, is is pointed out that enactment of the measures by state legislatures should offer fewer difficulties as their revenue producing provisions "will appeal to legislatures which are now seeking new forms of taxation."

The Allied leaders also said that the new tax measures "can be made to include certain socalled independent chains now committing depredations comparable with those of the affiliated chains."

Richey Drops Resignation Talk

Early in the convention it became apparent that Mr. Richey had reconsidered his intention of some weeks ago and would not resign as general manager of his own Allied States of Michigan, to engage in other pursuits, a move which might weaken the executive governing and strategy boards of the national board by the withdrawal from those duties which would have been expected simultaneously with his resignation from Michigan.

Governors of four states accepted Allied's invitation to address the Allied banquet on Thursday, including Elmer Benson, Minnesota; William Langer, North Dakota; Philip W. LaFollette, Wisconsin—all in Al Steffes' "stronghold," and Governor M. C. Townsend, of Indiana.

P. J. Wood, of Ohio, convention chairman at Milwaukee, invited Neil Agnew, Paramount general sales manager, to attend the convention and explain his reported recent announcement that his company is planning to deliver in the now closing 1936-37 season only 52 of the 60 features announced at the beginning of the year.

The largest delegations came from Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Indiana, Maryland, District of Columbia and New Jersey, with Texas, California and Montana and others also sending delegates.

Besides Mr. Yamins, the opening session's speakers included E. R. Geib, National Carbon Company, and Richard T. Turner, of Dictograph Products. Mr. Myers discussed Allied's case on the law and the facts on Thursday afternoon, followed by Mr. Steffes, who spoke on divorcement legislation. E. T. Gomersall, Universal's western sales manager, talked on Thursday on the producers' side of selling, and Niles Trammel, vice-president of the National Broadcasting Company, discussed the potential effects of television upon theatres.

Studio Payrolls Up $250,000; 30 Per Cent More Than 1936

The talent weekly payroll at the motion picture studios in Hollywood has increased to $1,750,000, from $1,500,000 weekly at this time last year, according to Edwin Schallert, in the Los Angeles Times. "Increases in pay for bigger stars partly account for this," he said, "but the advent of many new people is responsible for a very large balance."

With the article, its writer appended a 10*-year chart, tracing the curve of contracted talent:*

Year	Actors	Directors	Writers	Total
1928	206	95	143	444
1929	270	152	166	588
1930	301	124	196	621
1931	267	120	230	617
1932	221	118	196	535
1933	267	107	266	640
1934	378	132	273	783
1935	447	119	317	883
1937	665	174	357	1196

Actors, directors and writers under contract total 1,196, Mr. Schallert added, speculating at the same time if the peak has been reached. The current figure, according to this source, is "twice as large as at the beginning of the talkies and a 30 per cent increase over 1936 at the same time. It is also more than double the aggregate in the depths of the depression."

Paramount and Blank Signatures Again Delayed

Legal details of the new operating agreement between Paramount and A. H. Blank for operation of the Tri-States Circuit will not be completed for another two weeks, and possibly longer, thus preventing closing of the agreement prior to that time, it was said at the Paramount home office on Broadway this week. The current agreement was recently extended to July 6. The new pact will eliminate Paramount's option to repurchase Mr. Blank's half interest in Tri-States and will give Paramount a half interest in Mr. Blank's Central States circuit.

Reade Denied Permit For New Theatre

Walter Reade was denied permission this week by the Dover, N. J., Township Committee for permission to operate the new theatre he is now building there. Attorneys for the theatre interests, however, are said to be seeking a writ of mandamus from the courts. The committee's denial is based on a local ordinance passed after the theatre site had been purchased and barring theatres of more than 200 seats within 300 feet of a school.

Brazilian Industry Conducts Festival

The annual May motion picture festival is under way in Brazil with activities in connection with the program centered in Rio de Janeiro. The Distribuidora de Films Brasileiros and the Associacao de Productores Brasileiros supervise the celebration, arranging for special shows, children's matinees and radio addresses by prominent personalities. A prize is offered for the best short produced in Brazil during the fete.

SMPE STUDIES FILM'S PROGRESS AND FILM MAKING IN HOLLYWOOD

Engineers' Society and Academy's Technical Division Cooperate in Discussions and Exhibits at Spring Meeting

Full Session Given to Color Photography and Printing; S. K. Wolf Presides at Banquet with Studio Executives

Three hundred engineers and technicians from the motion picture's scientific laboratories, and another hundred from studio and equipment manufacturers' technical staffs, made a first-hand study this week of motion pictures in the making, on the scene of production, in Hollywood, in connection with the annual Spring meeting of the Society for Motion Picture Engineers.

Convention discussions, held at the Hotel Roosevelt, emphasized the Society's conclusion of last week: that "Research and development of motion picture equipment and technique show greater acceleration in the last year than at any time since the first several years after the introduction of sound."

The practical demonstrations on the how and why of motion picture making were conducted, during actual filming, in the studios of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, where sound quality was studied; at Universal, where the general aspects of production were described, principally cartoon making, story reading, story conferences, scheduling players and equipment, prescoring, set designing, and lighting equipment; and at Twentieth Century-Fox.

Aside from the unusually heavy program of technical papers read by engineers and manufacturers' representatives on new motion picture equipment and technique and on the improvement of old, the Engineers' convention on this occasion was marked by an unprecedentedly close relationship between the Society and the technical division of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, both as to Academy and SMPE joint participation in discussions and in actual studio demonstrations.

Color Important in Discussions

A session on the newest developments in color photography and color printing featured the convention sessions, on Wednesday.

J. A. Ball, color committee chairman, read the report for the SMPE, urging a search for a cell that would have all the advantages of existing caesium cells but having its chief sensitive response in the visible range.

Other talks in the color session included: "Color Print Processes," by O. O. Ceccarini of M-G-M; "The New Agfacolor Process," by a member of the Afga-Ansco Corp. staff; "Advanced Technic of Technicolor Lighting," by C. W. Handley, National Carbon Co.; "Some Lighting Problems in Color Cinematography, by T. T. Baker, Dufaycolor, Inc.

Agfacolor, a product of Agfa-Ansco Corporation, will be available for 16mm color filming in six months and for 35mm in a year, the engineers were told.

Mr. Handley, for National Carbon, said that improvements in Technicolor lighting make it possible to reduce by 40 per cent the light required.

Among those having exhibits at the color-stills exhibition were Eastman Kodak Co., Photographic division of General Electric Corp., Apeda Studio, Paul A. Hesse Studios, Nickolas Muray, Pagano, Inc., Steichen, Mrs. Mattie Edwards Hewitt of New York, O. E. Ceccarini of Hollywood, James N. Doolittle of Los Angeles, Charles H. Miller of Chicago, Defender Photo Supply Co. of Rochester, N. Y., and William G. Housekeeper of South Orange, N. J.

Symposium on Transmission Meters

On Wednesday afternoon a session was held for the discussion and demonstration of instruments and transmission meters. Among the papers read at the instruments session were: "Twenty Years of Development in High-Frequency Cameras," by H. Joachim of Zeiss-Ikon Aktiengesellschaft, Dresden, Germany; "A High-Precision Sound-Film Recording Machine," by H. Pfannenstiehl, Bell Telephone Laboratories; "A Dubbing rehearsal Channel," by H. G. Tasker, Universal.

The transmission meters symposium was featured by papers from W. W. Lindsay, Jr., General Service Studios, on "A Transmission-Measuring System Utilizing a Graphic Recording Meter"; A. D. MacLeod of Tobe Deutschmann Corp., Canton, Mass., on "A New Instrument for Producing Automatically a Graphic Record of Audio-Frequency Characteristics," and L. A. Aicholtz, Universal, on "A Curve-Plotting Transmission Meter."

Wolf Presides at Banquet

The Society's semi-annual banquet was the principal social event of the five-day meeting, Monday through Friday. S. K. Wolf, convention chairman, presiding, with executives attending from virtually every important Hollywood studio.

Mr. Wolf, executive of Erpi Consultants, Inc., and president of the SMPE, told the convention of an increase in production and in sales of educational sound film and that the sale of projection apparatus for it has more than doubled in the United States and Europe during the past year.

Films and Education

Overcoming a possible crisis in September, 1936, when the International Standards Association adopted and ratified the 16mm standard, educational films, particularly with sound, have made exceptional progress, Mr. Wolf said, but need the wholehearted support of the entire film industry and most importantly, of the large producers whose wealth of educational material will give great impetus to educational films.

Despite the advancement made, however, there are many problems confronting educational films, according to Mr. Wolf. He listed these as follows:

Need for better mechanical and optical quality; need of a color process, thus far not available; better lighting resources for projection; simplification of projection equipment, especially to reduce noise; more adequate systems of distribution.

Removing Obsolete Equipment

J. G. Frayne, chairman of the Progress Committee, reported that in the last year the the industry had further renovated obsolete sound and picture equipment, and continued expansion of studio floor space and facilities. Push-pull recording has made great inroads against previously employed systems, and the Fletcher two-way horn development is in widespread use. The three color subtractive process, he said, has aroused new interest in color. In the process, a multi-layer emulsion contains components in the three separate layers which react with the developing solution to produce dye images in the layers. A move to use less general illumination and more effect, or spot lighting also was reported.

Monday afternoon's session was devoted to papers on studio improvements, with L. Fermaud, of London Films; F. W. Jackman, Guiatno Gaudio, Walter Strohm, E. C. Richardson and L. D. Grignon presenting papers on the various lighting, portable recording, and intramural engineering equipment.

Opening the convention on Monday, Mr. Wolf, after welcoming delegates in the Roosevelt Hotel's Blossom Room, turned the meeting over to the chairman of the convention committee, W. C. Kunzman, convention vice-president. Reports on membership then were made by E. R. Geib, membership committee chairman, and on the papers committee by G. E. Matthews.

Delegates registered at the convention from Mexico, England, Japan, Germany and the Argentine.

The fall meeting of the Society will be held in New York October 11th to 14th.

Eight Committees

Convention arrangements and procedure were in the hands of eight committees, as follows, with the officers of the Society:

Officers: W. C. Kunzmann, convention vice-president; J. I. Crabtree, editorial vice-president; H. G. Tasker, past-president; G. F. Reckett, executive vice-president; K. F. Morgan, chairman, Pacific Coast section; G. E. Matthews, chairman, papers committee. Local Papers Committee—W. A. Mueller, chairman.

Local Arrangements and Reception Committee—P. Mole, chairman;

Ladies' Reception Committee—Mrs. K. F. Morgan and Mrs. P. Mole, hostesses;

Banquet—E. Huse, chairman;

Projection—H. Griffin, chairman;

Hotel Accommodations—G. F. Rackett, chairman.

Transportation—C. W. Handley, chairman.

Publicity—W. A. Mueller, J. J. Finn, W. Greene, S. Harris, G. E. Matthews.

Special Sessions

Special sessions were held on television, acoustics, sound and laboratory practice, among others.

Officers and members om the SMPE board of directors were guests of the officers of the Technicians' Branch of the Academy of Moving Picture Arts and Sciences Monday night at the Hollywood Plaza Hotel. Officers of the Academy and chairmen of other sections also attended and later the group witnessed "The Prince and the Pauper" at Warners' Hollywood Theatre.

Thursday morning was open for studio visits, and the laboratory and projection session was held that afternoon. In the evening members and guests attended a meeting of the Research Council and the Technicians' Branch of the Academy. Friday, the final day, will feature the apparatus symposium and manufacturers' announcements in the morning, the sound equipment symposium in the afternoon and the television session in the evening.

SONGWRITERS ASSUME MECHANICAL LICENSING

Publishers Protest Move by Authors' Group to Administer All Transcription Rights

Representatives of the Music Publishers' Protective Association and the Songwriters' Protective Association were conferring this week in an attempt to reach a compromise in the dispute which followed an announcement that the Songwriters' Association, beginning June 1st, would administer the authors' transcription and motion picture synchronization rights previously assigned to publishers.

In a notification to author members of the Songwriters Association, Irving Caesar, president, said that the decision to rescind the assignment of rights to publishers, except the small rights assigned to the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, was taken to "establish the precedent that rights should no longer be dissipated or controlled by anyone but the creator, and, in this case, you as the creator have very wisely entrusted the administration of said rights to your own Association."

Music publishers at first took the stand that they would not accept for publication the works of any author unless they were permitted to continue to have full control over the disposal of the mechanical rights. A committee appointed to confer with representatives of the authors included A. M. Wattenberg, representing the Warner Brothers music companies; Walter Douglas, Jack Bregman, representing the Robbins Music Company, owned by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; and Louis Bernstein of Shapiro, Bernstein and Company.

At the first meeting with Mr. Caesar, George Meyers, Joe Young and Abel Baer, for the writers, concessions were mentioned and possible mechanics of working out a suitable solution were discussed. The conferences were to continue this week.

Mr. Caesar, in announcing the move, quoted that section of the by-laws of the Association under which the member authors agreed to assign the transcription and motion picture synchronization rights to the Association for administration as it saw fit. The announcement said, in part:

"Be assured that there is no intent on our part, nor should there be any complications arising out of our intended action, that will in any way embarrass either the transcription companies or the moving picture companies in the operation of their business. You may rely on us that there is no thought of our increasing rates to either one or the other, and your songs will be available to them as in the past—the only exception being that instead of clearing them through the publishers, they will be cleared through SPA. . . .

"Besides the present existing avenues of income, such as transcription and synchronization, remember that the world is getting ready for television—remember that there are some 250,000 slot machines playing records from which no income is derived at the present time, and which, if we do not assert ourselves as writers now will probably be dissipated in one form or another, as have been many of our other rights.

"What we are doing is entirely consistent first, with what we have a right to do, and secondly, with what is happening in creative fields all over the world."

The notification to the transcription and motion picture companies included the excerpt from the by-laws under which the authors' rights are assigned to the Association and said that such assignment would be enforced after June 1st. Arrangements for the use of any compositions owned by members of the Association should be made through the SPA, it was said.

Mr. Caesar said that provisions have been made for payments to writers by the Association on a strictly per use basis in accordance with statements furnished the organization by the music users.

Cast Sits Down In WPA Theatre

A sit-in demonstration to protest reduction of Works Progress Administration appropriations was staged by Federal Theatre actors, encouraged by about 500 pickets last week at the Nora Bayes Theatre, 44th Street, New York.

Charles Weidman, one of the leading players in the second of two productions playing the theatre, "How Long Brethren?," stepped to the front of the stage as the curtain fell and delivered a protest against impending WPA layoffs. He requested the audience to remain in the building to give force to the protest.

All but a few of the 600 in the theatre left, however. Within a few minutes a picket line was formed outside the theatre and crowds, attracted by their shouting and singing blocked the street to traffic. Police reserves were summoned but order was not restored for more than an hour. Soon after their shouting was halted the pickets, members of the City Projects Council of the Workers Alliance, a WPA workers' organization, retired from the scene.

Police officials sent 25 patrolmen and a policewoman inside the theatre to watch the sit-in strikers who called off their demonstration about 5 A. M., although they had boasted they would remain "all night and all day."

Mr. Weidman said that 100,000 WPA workers in the city were facing dismissal as a result of the reduction of appropriations. The strike, he said, was ordered by the City Projects Council.

Singapore Bans Two

The censor at Singapore in Malay this week banned "Green Pastures" and "The General Died at Dawn" because they were "unsuitable for Malayan audiences."

CEA Party Lands On Annual Visit

Ten members of the Cinematographic Exhibitors Association of England, and their families, headed by Nat Cohen, arrived in New York Monday on the Queen Mary for a visit to New York, Washington, Chicago and Hollywood. In the party are Mr. and Mrs. Lever, W. and Mrs. Eckhart, Mr. and Mrs. Napolsky and daughter and Mrs. King.

Mr. Cohen and Mr. Eckhart visited the New York offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., immediately after their arrival, and later, in Rockefeller Center, visited the offices of QUIGLEY PUBLICATIONS. The next stop of the exhibitors was at the home offices of Electrical Research Products, Inc., where arrangements were made for a reception to the visitors at the Trocadero when they reach Hollywood.

On Thursday the party left for Washington, thence to Chicago, where they were to entrain for California.

It is planned to spend five days in Hollywood, during which time the English visitors will tour the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner studios.

From Hollywood, the CEA party will go to San Francisco, Toronto, Niagara Falls, Quebec and Buffalo.

Exhibitors Oppose Proposed Zoning

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment of New York City will conduct a public hearing June 4th on a proposed amendment to the zoning laws which would bar motion picture and legitimate theatres, cabarets, clubs and other places of amusement from certain sections of downtown Manhattan, particularly on Fifth, Madison and Park Avenues.

The amendment was proposed after the state appellate court ordered the city license commissioner to issue a permit for a theatre at 53rd Street and Park Avenue. The construction had been opposed by the Fifth and Park Avenue Associations as detrimental to the neighborhood. Exhibitors, theatre architects and real estate men are organizing a protest against the zoning proposal.

Under the amendment, which establishes a new classification, a restricted retail district, construction of theatres or other places of amusement would not be permitted on Fifth Avenue, between 26th and 59th Streets; Madison Avenue, between 23rd and 84th Streets; Park Avenue, between 32nd and 59th Streets, and the sidestreets from 26th to 59th Streets between Fifth and Madison Avenues.

In addition to the theater at 53rd Street and Park Avenue for which plans are now being drawn, Translux Pictures Corporation is reported planning to erect a house at 84th Street and Madison Avenue.

Theatre men are basing their protest on the contention that the small theatres of the "intimate" type which have been constructed or are planned for the district would benefit rather than detract from the neighborhood.

SETTLEMENT OF STUDIO STRIKE DELAYED BY UNION JURISDICTIONAL DISPUTE

IATSE Demands Voice in Negotiations, Blocks Recognition of FederatedCrafts; UtilityWorkers Sign Separate Agreement

The Hollywood studio strike appeared closer to a final solution this week with the signing of an independent agreement between the producers and the Studio Utility Workers' Union, one of the largest of 11 groups in the Federated Motion Picture Crafts which walked out on April 30th and the third to return to work. Settlement, however, was delayed by the intervention of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees which condemned the Federated Crafts and threatened a walkout if Federated Crafts is recognized.

The IATSE told producers and the striking units of Federated Crafts that it would settle the strike on its own terms and that it would call a strike in studios and in the theatres if Federated Crafts were recognized without its approval. The IATSE claims jurisdiction over several of the crafts involved in the strike.

Federated Crafts submitted charges of proselyting and strikebreaking by the IATSE to the executive board of the American Federation of Labor, meeting this week in Cincinnati. Strike leaders threatened that unless the AFL board took action on the charges they would secede and seek the support of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The strike of employees at independent studios in Hollywood, threatened by Federated Crafts unless a closed shop was granted immediately, was postponed indefinitely.

A union shop and a wage increase of 15 cents an hour were granted by producers to members of the Studio Utility Workers' Union. Joseph Marshall, union representative; George Browne, president of the IATSE, and William Bioff, his assistant, in a joint statement, said that the IATSE intervened to obtain the laborers' agreement.

Charles Lessing, strike committee chairman, said that producers' spokesmen telephoned him last week to the effect that the studios were ready to grant a union shop and negotiate further demands for all crafts but that the IATSE blocked the peace move with its demand for a voice in the negotiations.

Mr. Lessing said that the IATSE intervention placed that group in the position of dictating the producers' management policies whereas the Federated Crafts strike was called for the purpose of forcing a closed shop for crafts not under the basic IATSE agreement.

Mr. Browne issued a long statement attacking Mr. Lessing and "communist agitators." He said that company union charges against the IATSE were libels.

"Neither the local painters nor other misguided labor organizations still clinging to the recklessly-called outlaw strike will ever receive the slightest recognition in the industry until purged of Charles Lessing and the inner circle of communist trouble makers. The IATSE, standing on its own proved jurisdictional rights, against the Federated Crafts ringleader, claims as unsubstantiated the Federated Crafts rumors and reports of expected support from the American Federation of Labor. These are outright lies issued in an attempt to trick the members and the public," Mr. Browne said.

ACTORS' GUILD CITED AS CIO ARGUMENT

The example of the Screen Actors' Guild in organizing along union lines for protection and benefits is being used by the Committee for Industrial Organization as an argument to persuade employees in motion picture industry offices to unionize. A handbill, distributed among stenographers and clerks leaving the RKO Building in Rockefeller Center, New York, this week, said,

"Hollywood's movie actors and actresses are generally considered to be the world's most highly paid and highly regarded employees. Many of them earn fabulous salaries and enjoy the fame, attention and glamour associated with their occupation. Yet these workers, the 'big names' as well as the extras, have seen the necessity of organizing into a trade union for their mutual benefit and protection."

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the producers' negotiating committee, also attacked Mr. Lessing, calling him the chief obstacle to an immediate settlement of the strike. He claimed that all crafts are deserting Mr. Lessing except the painters, scenic artists and makeup men, "whose total number is 475." Mr. Schenck added that producers have no control over the strike situation now as the issue is primarily one of American Federation of Labor jurisdiction.

Lessing Defies IATSE

Answering the charges, Mr. Lessing said that he regretted the attacks on him because "this is not a fight of personalities but one of principles." He added that Federated Crafts was not beaten and would not be intimidated by the IATSE.

The strike committee chairman last week announced that the boycott move against five Screen Actors' Guild stars was unauthorized by the executive committee. The actors, charging strike pickets were molesting them, last Friday declared that they would drive them from the studios. They said the threat was prompted by incidents at the Paramount lot in which one actress reported that the gasoline tank of her car had been drained and another that a window in her automobile had been broken.

Producers this week recognized the Society of Motion Picture Art Directors and its affiliates as the collective bargaining agency for several crafts claimed by the Federated Crafts. The move was disclosed in a letter sent by Pat Casey, for the producers, to Felix Cunningham, attorney for the art directors' group, inviting conferences over wages, working conditions and hours.

Affiliated with the art director group are the newly formed Society of Motion Picture Interior Decorators, made up of set dressers, and

Extent of Collective Bargaining and Unionization in Industry Seen as Minimizing Effect of New NRA Legislation

New wage and hour legislation introduced in Congress this week in response to a message from President Roosevelt will affect the motion picture industry in some degree although collective bargaining and unionization are considered well advanced in the production, distribution and exhibition fields.

Designed to carry out the purposes of the former National Recovery Act, the new legislation has been carefully written so as to avoid the errors of the Blue Eagle effort, which led to its invalidation by the Supreme Court in 1935.

The bill is to apply only to employers of more than 15 persons, but not to purely local service or retail trades. It is to be administered by a five-man board, and provision is made for the appointment of advisory groups to represent individual industries in the working out of hour and wage standards, on which employers and labor are to be equally represented.

As introduced, no definite maximum working week or minimum wage were written into the bill, because of the difference of opinion between William P. Connery, representative from Massachusetts, and Hugo L. Black, senator from Alabama, as to whether the 40 or 30 hour week should be provided. It is anticipated, however, that the general maximum week will be fixed at 40 hours, with a minimum wage probably of 40 cents an hour.

The board, however, will be authorized to fix the hours and wages for each industry separately, but within limits which are expected to be fixed at not less than 35 hours for the working week and not more than $1,200 a year or 80 cents an hour for the minimum wage.

From the standpoint of the film industry, it is not believed the new legislation will require much change in practice. Exhibitors are seen as possibly entirely exempt as service industries but in any event the great majority of theatres would be exempt under the provision for 15 employees.

Producers are said also to be probably unaffected by the bill since the minimum wages paid are even higher than the maximum of 80 cents an hour, but there is some doubt as to how the distributors will be affected, although it is believed most employees now are receiving more than the minimum which can be expected to be set for that branch.

It is pointed out that the industry is well organized, which will be a point in its favor, since the bill, in instructing the board how to fix wages, stipulates that consideration shall be given to the wages paid under union agreements reached by collective bargaining.

Just how the various branches of the industry will be affected by the legislation, however, will depend upon what changes may be made in it as a result of the committee hearings which are expected to be held and amendments incorporated when it is considered on the floor of House and Senate.

STAGE LOOKS TO TECHNIQUE OF HOLLYWOOD FOR RESUSCITATION

Studios' Methods of Handling Talent and Film Theatres' Operation Plans Proposed at First Legitimate Convention

Speakers Propose Promotion Bureau, Lower Prices, Voluntary Salary Cuts for Broadway Actors, Apprenticeships

by FREDERICK W. AYER

The legitimate theatre at long last officially has decided that Hollywood is not a Big Bad Wolf which, since the inception of talking pictures, has been huffing and puffing in calculated effort to topple the already decayed structure of the stage drama from the foundations of a by-gone era.

Assembled in New York this week, with more than 100 official delegates from all parts of the United States and Canada and 1,000 persons in daily attendance at business sessions, the first national convention of the legitimate theatre, held under the auspices of the newly-formed American Theatre Council, went into public confessional and, in a spirit of humility and contrition for its repetitiously maudlin attacks of the last nine years on Hollywood, its mental nemesis, emerged with the following revolutionary theory:

That emulation of Hollywood promotion methods and handling of creative and technical talent is the sole and only saleable solution to the redemption of the American theatre.

Speaking at the Wednesday afternoon session, which was devoted to playwrights, Sidney Howard, president of the Dramatists' Guild, accused the playwrights themselves of responsibility for the present play famine. "The sins of omission in the theatre today are those of the dramatists rather than of Hollywood and the motion picture industry. The withdrawal of film money from play financing," Mr. Howard said, "has little or nothing to do with conditions in the theatre at the present time. Something must be done to stop this play famine."

To this end Mr. Howard announced that the Dramatists' Guild is at present establishing a fund for indigent playwrights who have proved their merit in some way or other, but he could not say at this time on what basis the playwrights would receive awards or fellowships. Other speakers Wednesday included Maxwell Anderson, George Middleton, former president of the Guild; Barret H. Clark, who now heads the Guild's amateur department; Arthur Kober, Marc Connelly and Louise Sillcox.

Hollywood production was not alone in the unexpected avalanche of praise heaped on the motion picture industry by convention speakers. The motion picture exhibitor and theatre owner came in for their share of consideration, particularly at the hands of Lawrence Langner, governor of the League of New Work Theatres and a director of the Theatre Guild. Speaking at the first day's session on Monday on "Streamlining the American Theatre," Mr. Langner asserted that theatre management and operation must be put on the same modern, progressive basis as that of the film theatre if the legitimate drama is to survive.

Other points made at the first two day's sessions, which were turned over to the producing managers, actors, representatives of stagehands' and musicians' unions and the dramatic critics, were:

1. A five-point program introduced by Brock Pemberton as a cure for the most serious of the theatre's ills.

2. A suggestion by Mr. Langner in his speech on "streamlining" that a promotion bureau be organized to fight legislation unfriendly to the stage.

3. A proposal by Paul Hollister, vice-president of R. H. Macy & Co., that ticket prices be reduced.

4. Suggestion by Burgess Meredith, Broadway star, that present-day producers' modus operandi are all out of date.

5. Recommendation by William A. Brady, dean of theatrical producers, that the theatre adopt certain Hollywood methods to its own advantage.

6. A suggestion by Kenneth MacKenna, actor, that Broadway actors should voluntarily accept drastic pay cuts to permit of more extensive play production.

7. Assurance by union representatives of stagehands and musicians that they will cooperate with managers.

8. Assertion by dramatic critics that the quality of plays produced this season was abnormally low; that the critic generally is accurate in his estimation of a play's worth—and subsequent attempt at rebuttal by Mr. Pemberton.

At the first luncheon session Helen Hayes set the keynote of the convention when she said:

"Until now the theatre has been like a not too happy or homogeneous family. All of the hounds of theory, prejudice and personal advantage were unleashed and howling."

Says Demand Exceeds Supply

Asserting that the demand for drama throughout the country far exceeds the available supply, Miss Hayes pointed out that the primary purpose of the convention was to sift its future, to hear the public's ideas and suggestions, as well as the ideas of workers in the theatre, as to what is wrong with relations bewteen the theatre and the public and to arrange practical means for carrying out these suggestions.

"The Council feels that perhaps the theatre is backward in meeting new conditions, in adapting its methods to a new and changing world," Miss Hayes said. "It may be that they have not been sufficiently wide awake: they have not seized or created opportunities to resort to strategy and salesmanship to develop new audiences, to stimulate dramatic output and to reshape the physical conditions in existing theatres."

Critics Object

Mr. Pemberton's five-point program met with approval from the entire convention on all except one point and that one point was seriously frowned upon by the critics. The program follows:

1 That an amicable agreement be effected whereby, if a producer feels that his play may have audience appeal, but not critic appeal, he may, at his own discretion, either invite the critics to see the play, or invite them to stay away. (The critics objected to this).

2 Creation of machinery, whether in the form of prepared contracts or otherwise by which the individualist — who insists upon being "rugged" at the expense of the theatre as a whole — could be made to conform to ethical standards. In this respect Mr. Pemberton assailed managers who produce plays which provoke censorship and also condemned the practice of box-office "ice" or gratuities, an example of which he cited in the addition of $2 in "ice" to a $4.40 ticket, skyrocketing the price to $6.60.

3 A bestowal of prizes by the American Theatre Council for the best play, the best performances of actor and actress, the best direction and honorable mention for "the best ten of everything," these awards to be made annually.

4 Adoption of a seal of approval to be conferred by the Council upon touring companies which comply with the standard set up by it. In making this recommendation Mr. Pemberton expressed skepticism of the caliber of most touring companies now being sent out from Broadway.

5 Drafting of new contract forms by which the theatre can retain for its own use the services of talented newcomers and, if necessary, the establishment of a communal fund for the carrying out of these contracts, this suggestion being made to keep new talent in New York and out of Hollywood until the formative period is over.

Suggests Film Theatre as Model

In the speech on "Streamlining the American Theatre," Lawrence Langner predicted the rebuilding of many theatres along the lines of motion picture theatres, with flexible seating arrangements that would allow the sale of most seats at a dollar top.

"The theatre must be restored by innovations as striking as those adopted by the railroads," Mr. Langner added, concluding his speech with a direct reference to the recently vetoed Dunnigan censorship bill by saying that "we must not wait always for a spectacular crisis to pull together." To this end he recommended establishment of a bureau, to be supported by all active managers, to fight such unfriendly legislation.

Prices to Fit Play's Cost

Larger-scale methods of merchandising in the theatre were suggested by Paul Hollister of R. H. Macy & Co., who advised the convention that the theatre would benefit materially if ticket prices were reduced according to the cost of a play's production, taking into consideration the seating capacity of the theatre in which an attraction is playing and allowing for a moderate, fixed percentage of profit.

"It might make one's gorge rise," Mr. Hollister said, "to hear the crass doctrine of volume and mass scale, but your gorge will rise even higher to realize the ways in which the motion picture industry has taken, from the hands of its creators, the tools of the drama and has applied them for volume production and mass scale."

Calls Producers "Archaic"

Without exception the most violent attack on the theatre of today and the men at the head of the industry, the producing managers, was made on Monday by Burgess Meredith, one of the youngest actors ever to be starred on Broadway, when he told the producers to their faces that they were the archaic remnants of an outmoded era in show business.

"You are behind the times—you are vestiges of a past era," Mr. Meredith said. "For the time has come when Hollywood has taken your game and developed it into a big-time sport. If you—any of you—were good enough promoters you would not be here. You would be out there where negotiations run into big money.

"But the producers sit at the theatre's helm driving it along old, worn out roads, trying to force it back into old ruts—old habits. Now something is wrong, so these Hoovers of Broadway call a meeting together to find out what they think!"

"You complain that actors leave Broadway for the Coast, yet you fight their union in its efforts to make conditions better here," Mr. Meredith continued. "You should stop fighting the Dramatists' Guild. You should form cooperative theatres and you should encourage and finance apprentice groups of actors and authors."

Subsidy Idea Advanced

Subsidy of the actor and playwright was advanced by several other speakers at the convention as the only practical method of keeping creative talent in the legitimate theatre long enough to pay both the talent and the manager worthwhile dividends.

In the February 13th issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, page 27, it was pointed out that any and all efforts in the playwrights' and actors' behalf would be without material result until such time as Broadway managers realized that the legitimate theatre could be held together only by unified support and purpose among themselves, financially and morally, and with the same method followed by Hollywood.

William A. Brady, veteran showman, also sounded the "follow Hollywood" note when he told the convention that the theatre today is a completely disorganized institution which "has devised no resistance to a smarter, more modern Hollywood."

Urges Hollywood Methods

Mr. Brady urged the managers to organize as the film industry is organized, to adopt Hollywood methods and use them to the stage's advantage "instead of sitting back and wondering what Hollywood will do next, or complaining when it takes something new from the stage."

Mr. Brady further recommended the classification of plays, "A," "B," and "C," as the motion picture producers and film critics do. He said that there are many plays which may not be altogether acceptable to New York audiences which would do good business in the provinces, comparing such plays with the average "B" picture and western film.

On Tuesday, Kenneth MacKenna amplified the suggestions made by both Mr. Pemberton and Mr. Meredith to keep actors satisfied in New York when he recommended that Broadway players should accept, voluntarily, reductions in salaries in order to permit the production of more plays, and suggested, specifically, that actors assist the managers in setting up two financial pools: one for the experienced players, and one for novices, with a view to providing cash to keep the players on salary for at least twenty-five weeks in each year—another emulation of Hollywood method.

The stagehands' union representatives on Tuesday promised producers their complete cooperation in an effort to bring conditions back to a more normal basis. James J. Brennan, president of Local 1, New York, found fault, however, with the majority of managers for not taking the stagehands into their confidence until "it it too late." Other union representatives assured the convention that they are in a position to help producers materially reduce production costs.

Whether these promises of cooperation by the unions mean that when a producer is forced to cut the salaries of his acting company in order to prolong a play's run he also will be allowed to cut proportionately in the stagehands' salary list was not made clear, but this subject long has been a sore point with both producers and members of Actors Equity, who see no reason why one branch of the American Federation of Labor should be forced to take salary cuts when another branch refuses.

EQUITY WAGING BITTER TILT OVER PRESIDENCY

Actors Equity Association in New York this week was split into rival factions in a bitter fight over the presidency of the organization. The election is to be held June 4 and heading the regular ticket is Frank Gillmore, a candidate to succeed himself as president, a post he has held for several years. E. J. Blunkall heads the independent ticket.

The independents have endorsed for re-election all the candidates of the organization ticket, except Mr. Gillmore, as well as three of those named for the council by the Gillmore faction. For the remaining places on the council, the Blunkall group have nominated Jack Byrne, May Buckley, Jack Norworth, Victor Morley, James Spottswood, Mabel Talliaferro, John Ravold, Hal Dorde and Earl Mitchell.

Critics Answer Pemberton

On Tuesday afternoon the dramatic critics took the platform and immediately set about the business of castigating both Mr. Pemberton and his plan for an amicable arrangement whereby it would be optional with a producer to have his shows reviewed carefully, as news reports, or not at all. The plan met with vigorous opposition from both Burns Mantle of the Daily News and John Anderson of the New York Evening Journal.

Mr. Mantle said that in all his experience as a newspaper man he had never known a publisher who "would submit to such dictation," and offered, as an alternate suggestion, that any producer who felt that his attraction had been unfairly treated by a critic should protest to the paper's editor and call the critic to his own defense.

The critic serves mainly to arouse "reader interest," Mr. Anderson said, pointing out that the critic's whole intention is to "try to guide the public to the theatre and keep alive an interest in it."

"We go there," he said, "and give, as truly and honestly as we can, a direct opinion of the play. The only bad critic is the one who always likes plays and makes no distinctions. The good critic is the one who liked your last production."

Despite the criticism leveled at his plan, Mr. Pemberton came to its defense.

"There are plays," he said, "which are good enough to run without being destroyed by the critics. So why, when a producer has a play which he feels is in this category, shouldn't he be allowed to say, 'This is a play which I think has audience appeal, but I don't think the critics will like it. I'd rather let it ride on its own.' After all, are we producing for the public or are we producing for the critics?"

Mr. Pemberton cited the instance of one of his own plays which "seemed to please four paid preview audiences and which clocked 207 laughs" but which "died immediately because the critics gave it a panning."

Gallo Suggests Apprenticeships

Among other speakers during the first two days' sessions was A. Raymond Gallo of QUIGLEY PUBLICATIONS, who urged that there be established an apprenticeship period for would-be producing managers on the same basis that a business man sends his son "through the mill" to learn the business.

"It appears that the stage producer is more concerned with what he can get out of the business than what he puts into it," Mr. Gallo said. "If Hollywood is sending the stage to the dogs, the managers are accessories to the crime for being so short-sighted, and obvious protective methods must be adopted."

Sound Innovation

Also on Tuesday's technical program was G. T. Stanton of Electrical Research Products, Inc., whose subject, "Making Plays Audible," was met with great interest inasmuch as it is a distinct innovation in the legitimate playhouse.

Mr. Stanton pointed out that the clear and even distribution of sound in the better class of talking picture theatres had reduced the tolerance of the public to weak, inadequate sound.

"The answer is to make our plays more audible," Mr. Stanton said. "Let us face the fact that the public demands more in ease of hearing the play, and establish the requirements of a new stagecraft, which, with the technical knowledge available, will be successful in making our plays more audible."

The sessions on Wednesday were devoted to discussions of the road and problems of the dramatists, while on Thursday, the final day of the convention, the business was turned over to discussions by representatives of the theatre-going public and the Federal Government's theatre projects.

Niblo Reported Slated to Head NBC Television Output

Fred Niblo is now chief radio talent scout for the National Broadcasting Company. Broadway, however, hears that the eventual intention of NBC is to place Mr. Niblo in charge of its television production.

Fred Niblo, who has been conducting the NBC-WPA sustaining weekly radio broadcast, has been a motion picture director of note as well as a producer and director of plays for the past 25 years. He is perhaps best remembered as having directed the motion picture, "Ben Hur." He later directed Douglas Fairbanks in "The Mark of Zorro" and "Three Musketeers" as well as the late Rudolph Valentino in "Blood and Sand." Among his other pictures were "Camille" and "Redemption."

Griffin to Convention

Herbert Griffin, vice-president of International Projector Corporation, flew to Los Angeles from New York last Friday to attend the annual convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers in Hollywood. Earl G. Hines, president of the company, also attended the sessions.

UNITED ARTISTS PRODUCERS TO USE $26,000,000 ON NEW SEASON FILMS

Schaefer at Hollywood Meeting Says Company Will Distribute 20 American Films Besides Korda's Productions

United Artists producers will spend $26,000,000 in new film product starting the 1937-38-season, George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager of the company, announced Wednesday following conclusion of the annual meetings of the United Artists stockholders, in Hollywood, attended by Dr. A. H. Giannini, chairman and president, and Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin, Alexander Korda and Samuel Goldwyn.

"For the season of 1937-38 United Artists will release twenty American films in addition to the London Films product made by Alexander Korda," Mr. Schaefer said.

"Total expenditures for United Artists pictures will approximate $26,000,000.

"For the purpose of acquainting our personnel with our forthcoming product policies, I am calling two regional sales conferences early in June, one in New York and the other in Chicago."

Among Goldwyn Productions

Among the productions to be issued by Samuel Goldwyn on this year's list, Mr. Schaefer said, will be included such films as:

"Dead End," the $165,000 play hit with Sylvia Sidney, Joel McCrea, Humphrey Bogart, Wendy Barrie, Claire Trevor and Allen Jenkins, now in production under William Wyler's direction;

"Stella Dallas," with King Vidor directing John Boles, Anne Shirley and Alan Hale, to be completed within the next ten days;

"The Hurricane," by the authors of "Mutiny on the Bounty," under John Ford's direction, now in production;

"The Adventures of Marco Polo," with Gary Cooper and Sigrid Gurie, due to start June 10th;

"The Goldwyn Follies," slated for July production in Technicolor;

"The Cowboy and the Lady," starring Gary Cooper and Merle Oberon, and others.

From Alexander Korda

Among the important pictures to be released by Alexander Korda next season, Mr. Schaefer said, will be the following:

"Knight Without Armour," with Marlene Dietrich and Robert Donat;

"Four Feathers," starring Robert Donat;

"The Divorce of Lady X," starring Merle Oberon;

A second Merle Oberon picture in Technicolor, and others.

One from Chaplin

Charles Chaplin personally will produce in the 1937-38 season one production bearing his name.

Selznick International

Of Selznick International's new season releases the first three to be issued will be:

"The Prisoner of Zenda," with Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith, Raymond Massey and David Niven, which is almost completed;

"Nothing Sacred," with Carole Lombard and Fredric March, under William William's direction, starting June 10th;

"The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," with an all-star cast directed by H. C. Potter.

Walter Wanger

Walter Wanger's releases will include "Vogues of 1938" in Technicolor, with Warner Baxter, Joan Bennett, Helen Vinson, Alan Mowbray and the Wanger Models, under Irving Cummings' direction, and almost completed;

"Fifty-second Street," with Ian Hunter, Leo Carrillo, Pat Patterson, Ella Logan, Sid Silvers, Zasu Pitts, Maria Shelton and Kenny Baker, with Harold Young directing;

"Carelessly," with Joan Bennett and a large cast:

"Stand In," starring Leslie Howard, directed by Tay Garnett;

"Personal History," by Vincent Sheehan, with Madeleine Carroll, and others.

Paramount Renews Paris Studio Lease

by PIERRE AUTRE

in Paris

Paramount has renewed its lease on the French studio of the company at Saint Maurice, and the future policy of the Paramount Theatre here has been settled, according to Barney Balaban, president of the company, now in Paris.

The lease on the studio, which is owned by Gaumont, has been renewed for six years, in spite of the fact that there is no activity there at present with the exception of dubbing and newsreel work.

As last year, the stages will be rented to independent French producers. It was explained that the lease was renewed in anticipation of a possible Government decree which would make production necessary in exchange for importation of American films.

The Paramount theatre here will remain in the hands of the company, but an agreement for film programs has been made with the Siritski Circuit, which operates 25 first-run houses in French cities. The Paramount will head the Siritski Circuit for French and Paramount films, effective Thursday. The Paramount will drop its permanent orchestra and stage staff, and they will be succeeded by bands and various acts booked for each change of program.

Warner Outing June 23

The annual New York Warner Club boat ride and outing, will be held this year on June 23 on the S. S. Peter Stuyvesant, which has been chartered to take the party to Bear Mountain up the Hudson.

The Cleveland Variety Club announced this week that its first golf tournament of the season would take place at the Beechmont Country Club on Monday, June 21. Henry Greenberger, chairman, is in charge of the arrangements.

Theatres Form a Censorship Unit

The Association Against Censorship in the Legitimate Theatre, Inc., a permanent organization to fight any censorship of the legitimate theatre in the United States, was formed in New York this week at a meeting of 21 theatrical groups in the office of the League of New York Theatres. This is the first organization of this type in the history of the legitimate theatre.

Delegates of every branch of the industry took part in the creation of the association, which will be registered in the supreme court of New York after the members of the various groups have complied with the legal technicality of indorsing the new organizations, a formality expected to be completed by July 1.

The association is an outgrowth of the Joint Committee of the Legitimate Theatre Opposed to Censorship, which was established overnight to combat the Dunnigan bill empowering License Commissioner Paul Moss to close any show which he thought was "immoral." The bill was vetoed last Wednesday by Governor Herbert H. Lehman, who held the measure was "too broad and too susceptible of abuse."

Organizations taking part in the Association Against Censorship in the Legitimate Theatre are the Actors' Equity Association, League of New York Theatres, Dramatists' Guild, Authors' League, United Scenic Artists, New York Theatrical Press Representatives, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Theatrical Protective Unions Nos. 1 and 4.

Also the American Federation of Musicians, Local 802, American Theatre Council, Society of Authors' Representatives, Treasurers' Club, Theatrical Press Unit of the Newspaper Guild, Allied Theatrical Transfer Association, Episcopal and Jewish Actors' Guilds, Federal Theatre Supervisors Council, The Drama Critics Circle and the Chorus Equity Association.

Interstate and Texas Managers Hold Meetings

Headed by Karl Hoblitzelle and R. J. O'Donnell, president and general manager respectively, Interstate and Texas Consolidated theatre managers, home office executives, bookers and members of several publicity staffs met at the Galvez Hotel in Galveston, Texas, Monday for the circuits' annual convention. The meetings were to last until Thursday.

The convention, originally scheduled for Dallas, was transferred to Galveston in honor of A. Martini, Interstate partner and Galveston city manager, who formally opened his new Martini theatre Thursday. There were approximately 135 in attendance, 25 from the home office in Dallas and 110 from the various theatres.

BELGIAN THEATRE OWNERS SEEK PROTECTION AGAINST BUILDING

Syndical Chamber of Cinema in Attempt to Halt Building by Inserting Contract Clause to Restrict Supply of Product

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

In an effort to restrict the building of theatres in the Antwerp area, threatened with overseating in the opinion of operating showmen, members of the Syndical Chamber of the Cinema have decided to insist upon inclusion of the following clause in all service contracts:

"For four years onward, films pertained to by the present contract will be allowed to be exhibited in Antwerp, Berchem, Borgerhout, Deurne, Hoboken, Merxem, Morstel and Wilryck only in theatres which were established and in operation on March 8, 1937. (The same priority will be given to the Cineac, De Prins, Rubenpaleis and Hippodrome at Antwerp.)

"In event of infringement of this stipulation, the present contract, as well as all contracts concluded by existing distributors with other persons who have accepted this clause, will be automatically cancelled, with damages, this applying only to the film or films for which the infringement was committed. In cases of dispute, the Tribunal of Commerce at Antwerp will have final jurisdiction."

Reasons for this decision, regarded as of tremendous importance in the affairs of the industry here, were set forth by the Special Commission of the Cinema for the region of Antwerp in a letter to distributors in the following language:

Letter States Case

"You have no doubt heard that the exhibitors of Grand Antwerp have taken a decision by which they have bound themselves to ask the distributors to insert in their contracts the enclosed clause. At the same time we enclose a few figures and considerations which caused them to take this decision.

"We hope that you will let us know at the earliest possible date whether or not you are in favor of this movement. We are entirely at your disposition if you desire an interview, either individually or with your colleagues, or with a delegation of the syndical group in which you will eventually be included; it would be an interview which would allow us to set before you in a clear and complete way the imperative reasons which have caused us to act as we have and which did not permit us to act in any other way.

"We hasten to affirm, formally, that our movement is in no way directed against the distributors, and that the exhibitors have only one aim, the improvement of cinema conditions in the general interest; that is to say, as much for the distributors as for the exhibitors themselves."

This letter was signed by Willy Tyck, president of the Special Commission, and was accompanied by statistics presented in adjacent columns.

These statistics show that Belgium has more seats in proportion to its inhabitants than any other country in Europe, the nation averaging 1 seat to each 15.6 persons, with Antwerp itself having 1 seat for each 8.6 potential customer.

The building of new theatres in this region has had the natural result of distributing the patronage and this has resulted in reduction of receipts of existing theatres. Secondarily, the distributors have found their revenues decreased proportionately.

A few months ago the Syndical Chamber of the province of Antwerp sought to impose a minimum seat price, as has been done in France in the Paris district. This expedient failed and established exhibitors fear that any advocated admission scale would fail of adoption by the operators of new theatres. They felt that they could not depend upon a scale of fixed prices to protect them against the possibility of seeing new theatres built in their locations and came to the decision that the measure of first importance to their interests must be one to limit the number of theatres.

Early Attempt Fails

On November 30th, 1935, the Censortium of the Cinemas of Great Antwerp was formed with the sole aim of limiting the number of theatres. All exhibitors of the region—65—joined forces. Since then several theatres have changed hands, 3 have been closed, 4 have been declared bankrupt and 1 has disappeared. These developments are cited among reasons given for the present decision.

Against the decision has been advanced the claim that it is unilateral and cannot, of itself, rally the support of all parties. It has been an object of heated controversy. The Belgian business publication, "La Cinematographie Belge," has asked and published the opinions of leaders in the trade, including President Bourland of the Syndical Chamber of Brussels, resigned, who said:

"The problem of limiting the theatres in Antwerp does not date from these last few weeks. It originates in the difficult situation in which exhibition, in general, finds itself, and it was first put forward during 1936. At that time the Syndical Chamber of Antwerp thought it would be able to find a governmental solution following imperfectly detailed declarations which had been made during an interview with the Minister of Commerce. The hope was premature.

"Antwerp exhibitors then turned to their town council, thinking they would be able to make its members adopt their point of view. This was another disappointment. It was then, and after a vain attempt to achieve their ends with aid of the National Union of the Belgian Cinema, that they decided to solve the problem themselves by decreeing a sort of padlock law which would practically put an end to the opening of new theatres in the designated vicinity.

Approval Not Unanimous

"This decision did not meet with unanimous approval and, if the Cinema Association of Belgium agreed to it, it was quite the opposite with the Exhibitors' Section of the Syndical Chamber and with the Association of American Distributors, who refused to assent to the obligations imposed upon them.

"The Antwerp scheme has not been rejected for this. If the rather harsh decision which the exhibitors of Antwerp wish to impose does not carry a general agreement it does not mean that the question was not timely, nor that it could not, after impartial examination, afford fascinating prospects."

Belgian Owners Seek Protection On Overseating

The opinion of the Distributors' Section of the Belgian Cinema Syndical Chamber was phrased as follows in an official utterance:

"The Distributors' Section was stupefied on reading Mr. Bourland's interview. While acknowledging the right of Mr. Bourland to have whatever opinion in the matter he pleases, even if it be contrary to the general interest, we regret that he has chosen such an untimely moment in which to air his views.

"No Publicity" Pledged

"In fact, at the end of an interview with the Exhibitors' Association of Antwerp it was decided by common accord to give no publicity of any description to this meeting. As a result of this meeting, the delegates of the Syndical Chamber made no proposal to the Exhibitors' Association and, on the other hand, they promised to submit to the Distributors' Section of the Syndical Chamber certain amendments proposed by Antwerp. Finally, the Distributors' Section wishes to declare that the question of the restricting of theatres is, for them, only one of many problems of the reorganization of the industry."

Robert Klees, president of the National Union of the Belgian Cinema, said:

"I consider that the problem of restricting the number of theatres is not without an answer. I go so far as to say that I consider the limiting of their number an eminently desirable measure as a means of bringing some sort of stability and security to our profession, which is so very much affected at the present moment.

"If we examine the situation in our country from the exhibition angle we find that Belgium is one of the parts of Europe in which the greatest number of theatres have been built, in proportion to the density of population, and that it is advisable to limit this abnormal proportion.

"It is well to see how our neighbors have reacted to incessant multiplication. Mentioning only England, Holland and Germany we may note that severe regulations have been decreed. It would be well for Belgium for this question to be examined and adjusted by the organizations concerned and that all details be rigorously inspected before a decision is arrived at.

"Ready to Comply"

"Unreasonable opening of theatres must be prevented. Personally, I am ready to comply with any solution which is acceptable to all and which may settle the situation. As for the U. N. C. B., it has not yet given its opinion on the matter as it has not been informed of the question."

Vice-president Bounameaux of the Syndical Chamber of Brussels, regretting the blunt manner in which the subject has been brought forward but believing a practical solution to be within bounds of probability, said:

"If the exhibitors had succeeded in obtaining the intervention of the state for limiting the number of theatres, there would be no reason why the state should not interfere in all other industries, and that would mean the end of all commercial liberty. . . . If the exhibitors of Antwerp wish to continue with their campaign for restricting the number of theatres, they must go about it in a more adroit way; only temporary measures can be taken, and reciprocal guarantees must be given the distributors."

All of this leaves the matter in a highly unsettled condition. Film distributors, especially the American companies, have refused to accept the Antwerp exhibitors' proposition.

Directors elected were Rupert Hughes, Bert Kalmar, Grover Jones, Walter DeLeon, William Conselman, Patterson McNutt, John Lee Mahin, Waldemar Young, Howard Emmet Rogers, Frank Butler and Bess Meredyth. Representatives of the Guild on the code regulatory board are Mr. Jones, Mr. Rogers and Mr. Young. Producer representatives are Darryl F. Zanuck, Adolph Zukor and B. B. Kahane.

Warns of Pressure By "Special Pleaders"

"The motion picture is not in politics, on or off the screen. It is making and needs to make a defense against a horde of special pleaders who wish to twist the screen's expression in support of their special interests."

That was Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief and publisher of Quigley Publications, speaking at the annual alumni dinner of the Regis High School, at the Hotel Roosevelt in New York last Saturday. Mr. Quigley also took occasion to define and emphasize the differences between self-regulation and censorship.

Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, spoke and observed that the late Will Rogers, found the world's greatest box office personality in exhibitor polls conducted by Motion Picture Herald, was a triumph as comedian without resort to questionable word, phrase or innuendo.

Ascap Meet Is Held

A three-day meeting of 52 field representatives of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers was held at the organization's headquarters in New York late last week to discuss legislation and public relations problems, including the improvement of relations with important customers, particularly radio broadcasters and theatres.

UA Foreign Contracts

United Artists will handle "Jericho," now being made in London by Buckingham Films, in Egypt, Palestine, the English Sudan and Syria. The company also signed to distribute "The New Adventures of Tarzan" in Mexico.

"The Golem," French motion picture which recently finished ten weeks at the 55th Street Playhouse, New York, was shown to 250 rabbis at the convention of Reformed Rabbis of America in Columbus, O., on Thursday. The picture is being distributed by Metropolis Pictures Corporation of New York.

Companies Plan To Confer with Exchange Unions

Major distributors were reported this week to be planning the appointment of a labor negotiating committee which would meet in various parts of the country to negotiate wage and hour agreements with employee committees designated to represent the new exchange workers' unions.

Initial conferences which resulted in agreements with the Boston and Philadelphia exchange unions were held in New York. The meeting with New Haven employee representatives will also be held in New York. The new Cleveland union is the only additional one which has requested a conference with home office officials but a date for negotiations with this group is not expected to be set until distributors decide on the procedure for future conferences in other cities.

Sales conventions during June are expected to delay further negotiations until midsummer. At present, however, it is estimated that not more than half a dozen exchange centers are sufficiently advanced in organization to desire immediate negotiations. Formation of the unions is either completed or under way in about half of the 32 principal exchange cities throughout the country. These include New York, Oklahoma City, San Francisco, Cincinnati, Omaha, Seattle, Atlanta, Pitsburgh, Chicago and Springfield, Mass.

Hal Olver, president of the Theatrical Business Representatives Guild which has applied for a CIO charter, this week was reported initiating organization of managers, treasurers and cashiers in New York. It was indicated that ushers and doormen would also be included in the new theatrical union.

RKO and Skouras Will Acquire Springer Units

The acquisition of the Symphony, Olympia, Stoddard, Carlton, Beacon and 77th Street theatres on upper Broadway in New York from the estate of the late Jack W. Springer is scheduled to take place upon the return to New York of George Skouras from Hollywood next week. The six houses, when taken over, will be included in the pooling arrangements now in existence between other Skouras and RKO houses in the same sector.

Schmertz To Be Feted

I. J. Schmertz, Cleveland branch manager for Twentieth Century-Fox, since 1929, will be honored by his friends with a testimonial dinner on June 28 to celebrate his 30th year of uninterrupted service to the company. He has formerly been connected with the company's offices in New York, Albany and Cleveland.

Dick Merrill Is Signed

Dick Merrill, trans-Atlantic flyer who recently brought back pictures of the Coronation in England, has been signed for pictures by Lou Irwin, agent.

$4,040,388 WARNER NET DOUBLES EARNINGS OF PREVIOUS HALF YEAR

Compares with $1,976,245 for Same 26 Weeks Last Year and Loss of $133,515 First Six Months of 1935

Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., has increased profits from operations by 100 per cent, reporting for the 26 weeks ended Feb. 27, 1937, a net income of $4,040,388, after deducting all charges including amortization, depreciation and normal federal income taxes, as compared with a new operating profit of $1,976,245, after similar charges, for the corresponding period ended in February, 1936. In neither instance did the income totals provide for federal surtaxes on undistributed taxes.

The $4,040,388 profit in 1937 and profits of $1,976,245 in 1936 compared with a loss of $133,515 in the same six months ending in 1935.

Gross profits from operations, after charging off film costs, but before other charges, in the six months ending February, 1937, were $9,558,650, compared with $7,300,179 in 1936 and $5,335,156 in 1935.

The $4,040,388 income for the six months ending in February, 1937, were equivalent after allowing for dividend requirements for the 26 weeks' period on the $3.85 preferred stock (on which unpaid dividends to and including March 1, 1937, amounted to $1,984,810 or $19.25 a share) to $1.03 a share on 3,701,090 shares (par $5) of common stock, excluding 100,254 shares held by company.

This compares with $1,976,245 or 48 cents a share on common for the 26 weeks ended February 29, 1936.

For the 13 weeks ended February 27, 1937, indicated net profit, based on a comparison of company's reports for first 13 weeks of company's fiscal year and the 26 weeks' period, was $1,992,453 after charges and taxes, equal after 13 weeks' dividend requirements on preferred stock, to 51 cents a share on common, comparing with $2,047,936 or 52 cents a share on common for the preceding 13 weeks' period ended November 28, last, and $944,929 or 23 cents a share on common for the 13 weeks ended February 29, 1936.

Current assets, including $4,068,516 cash, amounted to $25,679,826 on February 27, last, and current liabilities were $20,767,129. This compares with cash of $3,575,491, current assets of $21,433,045 and current liabilities of $16,058,520 on February 29, 1936.

On August 29, 1936, the accumulated deficit was $10,469,148. On February 27, 1937, this had been reduced to $6,363,301.39.

In the consolidated balance sheet the total assets and liabilities are listed at $174,727,581.18, as of last February.

The accounts of subsidiaries and branches operating in foreign territories (other than Canada, which is included for the same period as the domestic companies) are consolidated in the new report as at January 30, 1937, with the exception of the subsidiaries in the Far East, other than Japan, and the Australasian subsidiary which have been included as of January 2, 1937, and the results of their operations are included for the 26 weeks ending on those dates. The net assets of these subsidiaries and branches are included at the rates of exchange prevailing at February 27, 1937, or at rates, based on remittances, which were lower than those nominally quoted.

Three-Year Comparison of Warners Income Account and Balance Sheet

Consolidated income of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc. and subsidiaries for the 26 weeks ended February 27, 1937, compares with 1936 and 1935 as follows:

RKO's 1937 Net Is Estimated At $5,173,174

Estimation of $5,173,174 net profits in 1937, made at the continuing reorganization hearings, and the filing of objections to the reorganization plan by independent stockholders, were this week's highlights of procedure out of which the new Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation will evolve.

Radio-Keith-Orpheum can expect a net profit for 1937 of $5,173,174 according to testimony presented at a hearing on the company's reorganization plan in New York Monday before Special Master George W. Alger. The testimony was that of Bernard Bercu of Gottheimer and Company, accountants, who was put on the stand by George L. Schein, attorney for the independent stockholders' protective committee, in an attempt to show that forecasts, made by proponents of the plan, do not represent a fair earnings expectancy for the year.

Mr. Bercu declared that RKO Radio Pictures and Pathe should show a profit for 1937 of $2,543,570 before taxes but after interest; that the theatre operating subsidiaries should show a profit of $2,173,849 and that RKO, the parent corporation, should show a profit of $1,058,116. He estimated taxes at $1,055,000 and adjustments at $350,000, leaving a net of $5,173,482. That figure, Mr. Bercu said, should leave $3,696,174 available to common stockholders after providing $1,477,318 for fixed charges.

Before putting Mr. Bercu on the stand, Mr. Schein, who represents 133,000 shares of common and 37,000 shares of the old RKO Class A stock, said in a brief that the plan, which is proposed by the Atlas Corporation, was "unfair and discriminatory" to the common shareholders. The independent committee is regarded as the strongest objector to the plan, which has the approval of a majority of the debenture holders, stockholders and general creditors.

"The plan," Mr. Schein declared, "purports to ascribe a value to the common stock based solely on earning power and does not appraise the value of the equity of the common stockholders."

Meanwhile, at a hearing in the federal court on the claims of the Security First National Bank of Los Angeles and the RKO Proctor Corporation against RKO, Federal Judge William Bondy indicated that he would approve a settlement proposed by the Irving Trust Company, RKO trustee.

The Security Bank claim was for $771,000 which is based upon a guarantee by RKO of a supplementary indenture of the Orpheum Theatre in San Diego. It is to be settled for $350,000. Payment in full of the RKO Proctor claim for $10,350 was also recommended. The Proctor claim is based upon a refund made to the parent company on income tax paid for the years 1929 and 1930.

The suit of Barnett Binkowitz and Frederick Patrick against Harry Link, John Mercer, Matt Malneck, Irving Berlin, Inc., and RKO, charging infringement of the plaintiff's coprighted song, "Eenee Meenee Minee Mo" in an RKO picture was marked discontinued but not settled in the federal court last Saturday.

GENERAL THEATRES AND LOEW DIVIDENDS

Motion picture financial news of the week—highlighted by Warner Brothers' report of net earnings of $4,040,388 for six months—also included the following:

Loew's, Inc. declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents and an extra dividend of $1.50 on 1,599,053 common stock shares outstanding, payable June 30th to holders of record on June 12th, and representing total payment of $3,198,106.

General Theatres Equipment Corporation declared an interim dividend of 25 cents a share, payable June 28th to stockholders of record on June 18th.

David Bernstein, New York, officer and director of Loew's, Inc., was reported by the Securities and Exchange Commission to have sold 2,000 shares of the company's common stock during March, retaining 13,680 shares.

Roxy Hearing Put Over Until June 4

The hearing on a motion to confirm the report of Special Master Addison S. Pratt which recommended approval of the amended plan of reorganization of the Roxy Theatre Corporation in New York with only a minor modification was adjourned last Friday to June 4 by Federal Judge William Bondy. Objectors to the report were instructed to file briefs with the court not later than May 27.

Indications are that with the adjournment of the hearing, confirmation of the plan will be delayed beyond July 1, the date specified by Twentieth Century-Fox as a condition of its reorganization offer. It was said unofficially, however, that the company would consent to an extension of the time if necessary. August 1 is regarded as the earliest possible date by which the plan can be confirmed now.

Objections to Mr. Pratt's report were voiced last Friday by virtually all groups, although most of the objections were minor ones with the exception of those of the Class A stockholders for whom no provision is made in the plan. A voluntary offer to stockholders of $1 per share, however, was made by Twentieth Century-Fox. The stockholders contended that they invested $4,500,000 of an original $10,000,000 Roxy capital and that they would receive only two per cent on their investment. They contended that the Roxy is solvent, that they should be an equity for the shareholders and asked that the trusteeship be continued.

Meanwhile, on Tuesday of this week, the Fletcher American National Bank of Indianapolis, whose claim of $265,069 has been allowed in the reorganization, has filed acceptance of the proposed amended plan with the court.

In filing his opinion on the amended proposed plan, Mr. Pratt pointed out that although there had been some objections to the amended plan by minority bondholders and stockholders, approval of the plan by the Pound, Tipton and Adler committees, the three largest bondholders' protective committees, indicated that it was fair and equitable.

New Mexican Tax On All American Trade Is Levied

Mexico, which raised the general tariff an average of 25 per cent in the middle of January, affecting chiefly product from the United States, this week placed a heavy new income tax on companies of the United States through their salesmen in Mexico City that is expected by American business men there greatly to reduce their trade with Mexico.

The new tax law declares that 35 per cent of the gross sales of any foreign company selling in Mexico City, but not maintaining a branch sales office in Mexico, are presumed to be profits, and heavily taxable, according to a wireless to the New York Times. Sales representatives in Mexico City are held responsible for the foreign company's payment.

American companies doing business in Mexico City, it is said, actually average not more than 10 per cent profit. Most freelance salesmen in Mexico are from the United States and it is estimated that at least 50 per cent of the business done is obtained by these salesmen, whose companies pay income taxes on real profits in the United States.

The new Mexican law is expected to force American companies with large businesses there to establish branch offices, but American business organizations declare many companies doing a relatively small business will be forced to drop out of Mexico to avoid paying duplicate taxes in both countries.

"Desire" Wins Award

"Desire," Paramount picture starring Marlene Dietrich, has been voted "the perfectly artistic film and the best film of 1936" by the Film Board of Prague, Czechoslovakia. Miss Dietrich and Ernst Lubitsch, the producer, were each presented with a diploma by the board.

Charles Moses Leaves Century

Charles Moses, for the past five years film buyer, supervisor of theatre operations and executive assistant to A. H. Schwartz of the Century Circuit in New York, resigned last Saturday. Mr. Moses has been active in various branches of Manhattan exhibition for the past 25 years.

Releasing Poultry Film

A three-reel sound picture, "The National Poultry Improvement Plan," is being released by the United States Department of Agriculture. The picture runs 40 minutes with the accompanying narration by H. L. Shrader, the department's extension poultry husbandman.

To Show Foreign Films

The Radio theatre in the Bronx, New York, formerly showing revivals, will show foreign film exclusively, starting this week. Moe Goldman, who operates the Roosevelt in Manhattan and the People's in Brooklyn, owns the house.

RKO RADIO PICTURES

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Finish 9; Start 8

Eight pictures were started and 9 finished, bringing the production level to 47, with this and next season's schedules about equally represented.

Two started at RKO-Radio. "House In The Country" will present Fred Stone, Marjorie Lord, William Corson, Emma Dunn, Ray Mayer, J. Carroll Naish and Bradley Page. William A. Seiter is directing. "The Life of the Party" will feature Gene Raymond and Harriet Hilliard supported by Victor Moore, Helen Broderick, Eric Blore, Joe Penner, Parkyakarkus, Richard Lane and Billy Gilbert. Richard Rosson was assigned to direct.

Republic Starts Two

Republic also started two. With Mack Wright directing, "Range Defenders" will offer Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune, Eleanore Stewart, Donald Kirke, Earle Hodgins and John Merton. Bob Steele, Lois January, Forrest Taylor, Charles King, Karl Hackett, Bobby Nelson, Ed Cassidy, Lew Meehan, Frank Ball, Jack Rockwell and Horace Murphy make up the cast of "The Red Rope" which S. Roy Ruby is directing.

Universal shot the first sequences of "100 Men And A Girl." Deana Durbin, Leopold Stokowski, Adolphe Menjou, Mischa Auer, Alma Kruger and Harry Allen are players presently listed but many additions will be made. Henry Koster is directing.

"The Hoosier Schoolboy" was started by Monogram. Mickey Rooney is featured with Ann Nagel, Frank Shields and Edward Pawley as principals. William Nigh is the director.

Paramount's started "This Way Please." Robert Florey is directing and the cast lists Charles (Buddy) Rogers, Ned Sparks, Fibber McGee and Molly, Jerry Bergen, Romo Vincent, Wally Vernon, Mary Livingstone, Porter Hall, Cecil Cunningham and Lee Bowman.

At 20th Century-Fox "Heide" went into work. Shirley Temple is the star. The support lists Jean Hersholt, Arthur Treacher, Helen Westley, Thomas Beck, Mady Christians, Sidney Blackmer, Violet Kemble-Cooper, Gene Reynolds and Marcia Mae Jones. Allan Dwan is directing.

Important Film Finished

Several important pictures are noted among those finished. MGM's "Broadway Melody Of 1938" must be counted in that category for many reasons. Robert Taylor and Eleanor Powell are the stars of this number, the supporting cast including Buddy Ebsen, Binnie Barnes, George Murphy, Sophie Tucker, Judy Garland, Charles Gorin, Raymond Walburn, Billy Gilbert, Barnett Parker, Helen Troy, Willie Howard, Robert Wildhack, Robert Benchley and Charley Grapewin. Produced by Jack Cummings with dance ensembles by Dave Gould, Roy Del Ruth directed.

Sam Goldwyn completed "Stella Dallas." The cast includes Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Ann Shirley, Alan Hale, Barbara O'Neil, Tim Holt, George Walcott, Marjorie Main, Edmund Elton, Anne Shoemaker, Winifred Harris, Al Shean, Hattie McDaniels, Nella Walker, Dickie Jones and Jack Egger. King Vidor directed.

Two pictures finished at Paramount. In "The Last Train For Madrid," Dorothy Lamour, Lew Ayres, Gilbert Roland, Karen Morley, Lionell Atwill, Helen Mack, Robert Cummings, Olympe Bradna, Anthony Quinn, Lee Bowman, Francis Ford, Stanley Fields, Francis McDonald, Evelyn Brent and Otto Hoffman will be seen. James Hogan directed. "Wild Money" offers Edward Everett Horton, Louise Campbell, Lynne Overman, Porter Hall, Lucien Littlefield, Esther Dale, Colin Tapley, Benny Baker, James Sheriff and Nick Lukats. Louis King directed.

IT COULD HAPPEN IN HOLLYWOOD

Lucien Hubbard to a likely youngster on the Paramount lot: "How would you like to be in a sea picture?"

"I'd love it — any picture."

"Okay—here's a part I've got for you—read it over and report back."

And, next day, the actor to Producer Hubbard: "I'm sorry, sir, but I'm afraid I can't handle it. You see, I just can't go near the water without getting seasick — congenital, I guess."

"But you said——"

"Yes, I know; but I thought you meant a C picture — you know, A - B - C."

"U" Completes Two

Universal removed two films from the shooting roster. "Love In A Bungalow" will present Nan Grey, Kent Taylor, Dorothea Kent, Hobart Cavanaugh, Jack Smart, David Oliver and Louise Beavers. Ray McCarey directed. Principals in "Westbound Limited" are Lyle Talbot, Polly Rowles, Henry Hunter, Henry Brandon and Frank Reicher. Ford Beebe directed.

"Meet The Boy Friend" finished at Republic. David Carlyle, Coral Hughes, Warren Humer, Pert Kelton and Andrew Tomes are featured with Gwili Andre, Oscar and Elmer, Smiley Burnette, Leonid Kinsky, Sid Saylor, Selmer Jackson, Cy Kendall, Robert Middlemass, Mary Gordon and the Beverly Hill Billies in support. Ralph Staub directed.

"Drums Of Destiny," Crescent, stars Tom Keane with Edna Lawrence, Bud Buster, Rafael Bennett, Robert Fiske and Carlos de Valdez. Ray Taylor directed.

Selling the Salesmen

Thus William Gargan, actor, to the Universal sales staff at banquet at convention's end in Hollywood:

"Mr. Rogers, Mr. Cowdin, brother salesmen and those not present—the showmen of America who keep us working, I'm glad to be here tonight and pay tribute to the unappreciated stepchild of the big Universal family—the salesman. I've sat and listened to you being called various flattering names, but none of the names really describe you. You are salesmen in the canned goods business!

"You walk into an exhibitor's office and he asks you, 'What have you got?' and you say, 'I've got six cans of Gargan,' and he says, 'What size?' and you answer, 'B.' Then he asks, 'What else have you got?' and you say, 'I've got twelve cans of Deanna Durbin,' and he asks what size and you say, smilingly, 'A.'

"Don't think we here in Hollywood with our swimming pools and our stables of horses (forgive me for lying) don't appreciate what you're doing for us—but have you any idea just what we're up against? It'll only take a minute to tell you.

"An actor plays the part of a taxi driver and a talent scout named Rufus LeMaire signs him and he's brought out to Hollywood. Then he's introduced to a casting director, Dan Kelly by name, through whose fine Italian hands flows the life blood of the industry. He looks at the actor and says, 'No good, we've got enough blond taxi drivers.' So you die your hair black and become the first blackhaired taxi driver of the new Universal. Then a producer sends for you and says, 'I've got a swell part for you in a submarine picture. I hear you were a big hit in the part of a deep sea diver.' 'No, no,' says Gargan, 'not diver—driver.' So they call in the author, who rewrites the story to make it the first one in which a submarine is driven by a black haired taxi-driver.

"After the picture is finished it is shown to Mr. Rogers. Mr. Rogers is the man who calls up Mr. Cowdin in New York City. Mr. Rogers says, 'This is Mr. Rogers.' Mr. Cowdin says, 'Mr. Rogers of TWA?' and Mr. Rogers says, 'No, Mr. Rogers of Universal,' and Mr. Cowdin says, 'How much more do you want?' Mr. Rogers tells him and Mr. Cowdin sends the money to TWA who build a new airplane and it is previewed in the lobby of the Roxy.

"Then there's the preview, and as you leave the theatre four taxi-drivers who saw the picture try to run over you, but the critics hail you as the best taxi driver they ever saw under water.

"After seeing the film again, Mr. Rogers says, 'Ship it!' And that's where you come in. Bright and early one morning they hand you six cans of Gargan in the part of the world's first under sea taxi driver.

"So I say more power to you, and thanks, because, no matter what they make me do in pictures, it's still lots better than driving a real taxi—above water. Keep up the good work, because I don't mind telling you I get a big kick out of driving past a theatre and seeing my name up in lights, 'William Gargan,' spelled wrong, and beneath it in letters twice as big 'Extra special—tonight—we give away two Plymouths!'"

Critics' Award

"Romeo and Juliet" was voted the Blue Ribbon Award of the National Screen Council as the best picture of the month of April for family consumption. The council is composed of 300 critics of metropolitan daily newspapers, the chairmen of the state federation of women's clubs in different states, and the reviewing committee of the International Federation of Catholic Alumni.

IN COURTS

File General Denial In Horn Patent Suit

A general denial of patent infringement by 15 defendants, including Fox West Coast, National Theatres and Twentieth Century-Fox, was entered this week in the federal court at Los Angeles in the suit of Leonard L. Maxam, inventor of a padded sound reproduction horn, for an accounting of profits and damages.

The reply claimed that Mr. Maxam's patent claims had been antedated by others both in the United States and abroad, and that his horn was not a patentable device, but a mechanical expedient.

Belwin-Harms Suit Ends

The copyright infringement suit for $50,000 damages and an injunction by Belwin, Inc., against Harms, Inc., was settled in the federal court in New York last Saturday. The suit alleged that the plaintiff's song, "Rococo," was an infringement on the Harms song, "Twenty-Four Hours a Day," which was used in the picture, "Sweet Surrender." The amount of the settlement was not given.

RKO Drops Field Suit

The suit of RKO Distributing Corporation against Ferry Field Amusement Company in Detroit for $933 and $2,500 damages, has been dismissed by Circuit Judge Guy A. Miller, with the consent of both parties without costs.

The Earl of Warwick, under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as Michael Brooke, has filed suit against the company in Hollywood for $7,188, allegedly due him for salary and transportation.

Milliken Praises St. Louis Council

The making of motion pictures right and keeping them right means that more and more people must like the better ones, Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., in New York, declared in an address at the seventh annual meeting of the Better Films Council of Greater St. Louis at the Hotel Chase last Thursday. He added that this means a long process of education.

Mr. Milliken highly complimented the members of the Better Films Council for the work done in the St. Louis area in the way of cooperating with the industry for the elimination of undesirable motion pictures and in creating a genuine box office appeal for more pictures suitable for family audiences. He said that the St. Louis Council is regarded in his New York office as the model for similar bodies in large metropolitan districts.

Touching at greater length on the broader aspects of education and motion pictures, Mr. Milliken said that the schools are attaching greater importance to the direction of a proper appreciation of good motion pictures, and that the educators realize they must keep up with what is transpiring on the motion picture screen.

"Unless a teacher knows what is in motion pictures she does not know what is in her pupils' minds," he said. "Thousands of school teachers have come to a realization of the importance of children using their leisure time wisely."

At the meeting Mrs. A. F. Burt, honorary president of the Council, who presided, installed the new officers for 1937-38 as follows: President, Mrs. H. W. Schmale; first vice-president, Mrs. F. W. Ives; second vice-president, Mrs. Jasper Blackburn; third vice-president, Mrs. Charles Lambur; fourth vice-president, Mrs. Joseph C. Weiler; fifth vice-president, Mrs. A. B. Joseph; recording secretary, Mrs. Emmett Hood; corresponding secretary, Miss Anna Louise Petri; treasurer, Mrs. F. G. Fulkerson, and auditor, Mrs. E. H. Brewer.

The Advisory Board remains the same as during the past year, being composed of Mrs. Burt, Mrs. E. A. Kieselhorst, Mrs. A. B. Harrington and Mrs. Clyde McNay.

About 150 women representing the various civic and neighborhood organizations of St. Louis and St. Louis County that are affiliated with the Council were in atendance.

An injunction and accounting are asked.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Born Reckless

(20th Century-Fox)

Drama

A couple of squints at this production in work indicated that the picture will come to the screen as a modernized gangster film. A taxi war is raging. A renowned racing driver joins up as an undercover man with the police department and is given an armored car. His job is to put the finger on the mysterious man higher up. He falls in love with the queen of the mobsters and it is logical to deduce from that situation just exactly what will happen.

With that knowledge available, the entertainment characteristics and the entertainment potentialities are quite evident inasfar as they concern production and thematic detail. The most interesting angle of the forthcoming feature, from an exhibitor's point of view, then, is who is going to be in it and who made it?

For names it will offer Brian Donlevy, recently in "Half Angel," "Crack-Up" and "Midnight Taxi," who will also be remembered for his first featured appearance in "Barbary Coast." The girl is Rochelle Hudson, who, though young, has been in a great many pictures which should have made her familiar to audiences. The other man is Robert Kent, featured in "The Crime Of Doctor Forbes," "Reunion," "That I May Live" and, with Jane Withers, in "Angel's Holiday." The balance of the cast includes Barton MacLane, long prominent in Warner Brothers pictures, Pauline Moore, Chick Chandler, who somehow or other, seems to be encountering difficulty in having his talents as a comedian recognized, Harry Carey, William Pawley, Francis McDonald and Eddie Dunn, George Wolcott, Joe Crebon, Stanley Andrews and Harvey Clark. These constitute a cross section of the group of players in Hollywood whom the leaders of the Screen Actor's Guild announced themselves as being ready and willing to sacrifice everything for.

The production is being directed by Malcolm St. Clair.

Release date: July 9.

That Certain Woman

(Warner)

Drama

A story of a woman's trials, tribulations and sacrifices made for the man she loved will be told in this production. In theme it is tense drama contrasted with tender romance. It seems ideally suited to the talents of Bette Davis. Although Miss Davis is turning to comedy characterizations in her forthcoming "It's Love I'm After," she has scored her greatest successes and theatre goers know her best as a dramatic artist. As the story will be told, for the greater part, in retrospect, it appears to be of a human interest character that should be primarily appealing to women.

The woman was a gangster moll, but when death struck in the way gangsters have of causing it to strike she gave up her old associations. Then, beginning with what will be the finale, the story of her life during the intervening years is narrated. An office girl, admired by her employer, her marriage to a reformed playboy is annulled by his father. Her husband marries the girl of his father's choice and, as a child is born to the now unmarried woman, the new bride is cruelly injured in an auto accident. Knowing that she will never be anything but a burden to her husband, she desires to release him to the other woman. But although circumstances bring further sorrow into the woman's life, the death of the crippled wife sends the man to search and find the woman he loves.

The cast certainly appears to be competent. Henry Fonda is the playboy, Donald Crisp is his father, and Anita Louise is the girl he had to marry after his marriage to Bette Davis was annulled. This group constitutes the central figures in the drama. Additional players are Hugh O'Connell, Ben Welden, Mary Phillips, Minor Watson and Norman Willis.

Edmund Goulding, not active in Hollywood since he wrote, adapted and directed "The Flame Within" and "Rip Tide," wrote, adapted and is directing the production.

Release date: August 26.

Thin Ice

(20th Century-Fox)

Musical Comedy

Two of Hollywood's 1937 "discoveries" are teamed in this production. Sonja Henie, well known because of her Olympic Games skating accomplishments, zoomed to screen fame in "One In A Million." "Lloyds Of London," "Love Is News" and "Cafe Metropole" combined to thrust Tyrone Power up the ladder while most people were looking out the window and paying comparatively little attention to him.

The production is a romance based on a case of mistaken identity. Thematically it will offer hilarious situations interspersed with gay love making between the girl and boy. Located, mainly, in the winter Alps, it naturally will feature much glamorous spectacle which not only will present Miss Henie in solo and ensembles to demonstrate her remarkable skating ability again, but will also show her as a skiing artist.

Name values supplementing the leads which the producing company will have on its credit sheet include Raymond Walburn, Sig Rumann, Alan Hale, Leah Ray, Arthur Treacher, George Givot, Joan Davis, Pat Somerset and Rudolph Amendt.

Music and lyrics were prepared by Lew Pollack and Sidney Mitchell, who were responsible for the musical numbers in "One In A Million." Dances and skating ensemble numbers were supervised by Harry Losee.

Because of the great success he had in directing Miss Henie's introductory picture, Sidney Lanfield, who made "Wake Up and Live" in the time between "One In A Million" and this, will again be at the helm.

Release date not set, but after September 1.

Varsity Show

(Warner)

Musical Comedy

Immediate reaction to a few sequences of "Varsity Show," now in the making on the Warner Lot, is that the idea of spotting a musical comedy in a jerk-water co-ed college is still a pretty sound entertainment and commercial premise. The story is the story of a college show. A fraternity wants to put on a red hot musical; the faculty decides their efforts must be confined to high art. But college kids were never known to be stymied. They put on the show the way they want it and from the appearance of the production at this stage, it also seems that the director and professional players engaged in making the picture are putting it on in a way that should make exhibitors and patrons want it.

Warren Duff and Sig Herzig thought up the idea, Jerry Wald and Richard Maculey combined their talents with those of the originators to effect its transition into a screen play, and William Keighley was assigned to direct it. Music and lyrics were provided by Dick Whiting and Johnny Mercer and, though Eddie Larkin is handling the earlier dance numbers, Busby Berkeley is scheduled to stage the finale spectacle.

In addition to being the old grad who connived with the students to outwit the faculty and stage the musical show, Dick Powell will take care of the singing of most of the musical numbers, while Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians will furnish the instrumental accompaniment. Lee Dixon will lead in the dancing and Ted Healy in the comedy. Naturally, there's a romantic content, and that will feature two promising young ladies, Rosemary Lane and Priscilla Lane. Walter Catlett is the faculty advisor and other players who will be seen are Roy Atwill, Scotty Bates, Mabel Tod, Sterling Holloway, George MacFarland, Johnny Davis, Poli McClintock and Emma Dunn.

Release date not set, but after August 1.

It's Love I'm After

(Warner)

Comedy

That Leslie Howard and Bette Davis are being starred together in a comedy is probably the most interesting showmanship feature of this production. When they were previously teamed, in "Of Human Bondage" and "The Petrified Forest" their material and characters were dramatic. Individually, Mr. Howard up to "Romeo and Juliet" and Miss Davis to "Marked Woman," they also have been cast in dramatic roles. According to Fame Miss Davis is a Red Ribbon box office attraction. Mr. Howard, while strong in some quarters, does not have the same pull, generally, as many other players whose ability as an actor is far less than his. However, out of this hilarious comedy romance it is possible that more important (from a box office viewpoint) Bette Davis and Leslie Howard may emerge. Assignment to comedy roles has done much for other dramatic players. It may for these two.

The idea of the show, and the situations contingent thereupon, should induce high comedy. Howard is cast as an actor. Number One matinee idol, he is the type of actor who dramatizes every offstage situation in which he finds himself. Miss Davis is his leading woman. All season long, they have played, loved, fought, stolen scenes from each other. They might marry any day, if one doesn't murder the other first. But a society girl, Olivia de Havilland, gets a crush on Howard and he, though he has had but a quick glimpse of her, is interested. When Miss de Havilland's boy friend, Patric Knowles, pleads with the ever acting star to disillusion her, the fun begins. Miss Davies, bent upon avenging all the ridiculous dirty work Howard has practised upon upon her, butts into the setup and what ensues before all matters are straightened out and the various lovers wind up where they should promise to be surprisingly wild and wooly amusement. It might be said that both Howard and Miss Davis are quite determined that they will be revealed as successful comedians.

The material with which the pair is being provided is an original story by Maurice Hanline, for which Casey Robinson, who has contributed to several of Warners' most recent best pictures, prepared the screen play and which Archie Mayo, both a comedy and drama director, is guiding.

While Mr. Howard and Miss Davis with Miss de Havilland are the dominant names, the supporting cast is not without merit. Other than Knowles, the top flight performers listed are Eric Blore, George Barbier, Bonita Granville, Spring Byington, E. E. Clive and Mary Treen. In lesser roles Georgia Caine, Veda Ann Borg, Grace Fields, Harvey Clark and Sarah Edwards will be seen.

Release date not set, but after August 1.

Angle Shooter

(Warner)

Drama

The long succession of newspaper pictures, good, bad and indifferent, serves to indicate that producers believe that the theatre-going public and exhibitors are more than ordinarily interested in getting a peek into the romance, drama, thrill and excitement supposed to constitute the inside story of the stories that make sensational headlines. Such films as "The Front Page" and "Five Star Final" started cycles and, though the cycles have apparently never ceased to run, there is a possibility that "Angle Shooter" may start a new and different one.

This production will take its audience behind the scenes of newspaperdom to expose the inner machinations and unscrupulous methods used by certain editors to create sensational news material. Papers must have circulation; sensationalism is the seed and blood stream of circulation. That is the premise.

There is plenty reason for Mr. Bischoff's enthusiasm. The author of the story, which originally appeared in Cosmopolitan Magazine, Adela Rogers St. John, is a widely known newspaper woman. Her screen credits include "A Free Soul," collaboration in "What Price Hollywood," and the screen play of "Mrs. Fane's Baby Is Stolen." The screen play is by Warren Duff. Ray Enright is directing.

Pat O'Brien and Joan Blondell are the leading name players. Their ideas of newspaper ethics almost bring tragedy to Margaret Lindsay. Supporting players listed are Regis Toomey, John Litel, Eddie Acuff, George E. Stone, Walter Byron and Granville Bates.

Release date not set, but after August 1.

Windjammer

(RKO Radio)

Melodrama

Popular in his cowboy and other he-man characterizations, George O'Brien has not been in a sea picture since "Seas Beneath." Now, for the second time in his career, he takes to the open sea in a story of adventure. With Mr. O'Brien, supported by a capable cast, the primary name asset, plenty of showmanship potentialities are being crowded into the production in order to permit exhibitors to devise interest-creating exploitation campaigns.

Highlights of production detail are picturizations of the start of the famous California-Honolulu yacht race; a dive from a hydroplane; a sea collision; personal and group fights by the dozen; the explosion of a munition smuggling schooner and the hero's rescue of the girl, who first hated but later learned to love him, from a gang of kidnappers. In the yarn Mr. O'Brien, a government official, is ordered to bring back a millionaire sportsman to appear before an investigating committee. Aboard his racing yacht, the romance, drama, adventure and excitement begin and ensue and are climaxed by his saving the man and his daughter from the hands of Asiatic kidnappers.

The story was written by Ewin Scott, who previously did "Park Avenue Logger" and collaborated on "Hollywood Cowboy" for Mr. O'Brien. The screen play is by Dan Jarrett, associated with several recent O'Brien pictures, and James Gruen. Mr. Scott, maker of "Hollywood Cowboy," is also directing.

Constance Worth, seen in "China Passage," is featured with Mr. O'Brien in the leading roles. Principal heavy is William Hall, featured in the recent "Magnificent Brute." The rival for Miss Worth's affections is Gavin Gordon and her father is Brandon Hurst. Important in the supporting cast are Lal Chand Mehra, now in "The 13th Chair"; Ben Hendricks seen in many outdoor adventure films, Lee Shumway and Stanley Blystone.

Release date July 16.

K of C Extending Fight Against All Propaganda Films

A vigorous program of action against Communistic motion pictures will be adopted this week, when 400 delegates, representing 100,000 Knights of Columbus of New York State, hold their annual convention at Geneva, N. Y. Publication will be made at Geneva for the first time of a report on Communistic film propaganda prepared for the state officers under the direction of Edward J. Shea, Bronx County deputy.

This move follows the announcement of last weekend that the organization would extend its investigations of "suspicious" motion pictures to include companies responsible for their distribution, and to the possible appointment of a permanent committee to be named to deal with subversive films as they are released.

Meanwhile, the Joint Boycott Council of the American Jewish Congress in New York and the Jewish Labor Committee announced that it has voted to boycott all German Tobis and Tobis-Sascha productions released in America. The decision of the council "followed the receipt of official documentary proof that these companies are controlled by Nazi interests and are under the direct supervision of the Nazi government." The council also voted to picket all theatres showing German and Austrian Tobis films. Decision is being withheld, however, on the picketing of French Tobis releases, pending an investigation of its status with relation to its German affiliations.

Police officials in Providence, R. I., this week refused to grant a local committee to aid Spanish democracy a license to exhibit the Russian picture, "Spain in Flames," holding that the film "reeks with Communistic propaganda, tends to incite riot and class hatred, is distinctly disrespectful to two friendly nations and sordid depiction of the terrors of a civil war."

Commander George Radcliffe of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Chicago, meanwhile, also announced in Chicago that his organization had joined the Knights of Columbus in attacking the showing of Russian films in Chicago. The action is described as a move to keep Red propaganda off the screens.

Has Byrd's Equipment

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Take Warner Brothers' word for it, their producer, Jack Warner, in Hollywood, has a tough job as chief studio executive. One of his really weighty problems is described in a piece of publicity, as follows:

"Crying (in films, of course), is an art but not half as important a one as mopping up the traces of a good weep after it has run its course."

"Bette Davis, for one, is such a highly dramatic actress that her tears roll out with convulsive sobs. An emotional scene doesn't leave her in tapering off sobs nor yet in a state of apathy. Instead she is taut and unable to relax. Her remedy for this state of affairs is a warm bath sudsy with sweet-smelling soap in which she can loll until her tense muscles begin to relax. Then she lies down in a room with the shades drawn and here eyes covered with big squares of cotton which have been soaked in a refreshing astringent. Soon she is soothed to the point where she could go back before the cameras and do a laughing scene.

"In 'Marked Woman,'" Warners continue, "Jane Bryan plays the heart-broken younger sister of Bette Davis and her crying consists of stifled sobs—the quiet, racking type. As every woman knows, this is the kind that is the greatest strain. It leaves a girl limp and unstrung so that she must be returned to high spirits with a good rubdown, a cold shower and anointment with spicy eau de cologne. Then some setting-up exercises, a tracery of powder over the nose and eyelids and the lethargic mood as well as the pink nose are conquered foes."

After looking over the Dionnes' current receipts of $573,000 from testimonials, Twentieth Century-Fox film work and Pathe News appearances, you'll have to agree that they have turned out to be a very attractive extra dividend.

All who have seen "A Star Is Born" will admit that Producer Dave Selznick photographically penetrated Hollywood in an unprecedentedly intimate manner. Mr. Selznick now will equally as intimately describe the gay centers of the east, including Havana, Palm Beach, Long Island, etc. Appropriately, this one will be called "Nothing Sacred."

"Shakespeare may have been a bit of a Goliath in his day," observes the London Era, "but he has been laid low by the little Bergner with her deadly sling," as witness:

In the Twentieth Century-Fox company's contract with exhibitors in England, it is stipulated that in all advertising and billing of "As You Like It," the name of Miss Bergner shall always appear in letters twice the size of William Shakespeare and that "the name of the said picture and/or William Shakespeare must not appear" before the name of Elisabeth Bergner.

Ol' W. C. Fields—William Claude Dukenfield—has been away from the screen, ailing, for some 13 months. He is mending now, but it will be another six months before the public will see him again in a picture. And when they do, it will be in "That Man's Here Again."

ONCE the most camera shy American, the late John D. Rockefeller, Sr., was first pictured for the theatre screen by Tracy Mathewson, of Atlanta, star of the staff of Kinograms, a newsreel of the day, in 1919.

The soft-spoken Mr. Mathewson achieved his picture of Mr. Rockefeller by stealth and strategy.

When word came that Mr. Rockefeller was shortly to leave Lakehurst to go to a southern resort hotel to play golf, Mr. Mathewson went ahead and spent a week at the hotel establishing himself and making friends. He suggested he would make the management a present of a one-reel picture of the establishment and its grounds. When Mr. Rockefeller arrived, he and his entourage were a bit dubious about the busy cameraman, but were disarmed on being informed he was making a picture for the manager. Meanwhile Mr. Mathewson ignored the presence of Mr. Rockefeller and ordinarily was interested in moving elsewhere whenever he appeared.

On the golf course one morning Mr. Rockefeller got curious about the workings of the camera and approached it between takes while Mathewson was ostensibly picturing some darky caddies at their antics.

Mathewson opened his camera and explained its workings and invited Mr. Rockefeller to crank for a few feet of a dancing little black boy, observing the finder the while.

"And," Mathewson went on in his slowest Georgian drawl, "now we need a shot of some one driving off at the first tee."

Mr. Rockefeller, thawed by his participation, selected a driver and stepped up to the tee. He was in the movies, and Mr. Mathewson went around nine holes with him. while they photographed each other.

That very noon Mr. Mathewson left for New York with a can of film under his arm. He wanted to be gone before someone changed his mind.

A Latin American film executive wrote to his home office chief in complaint of a current feature release, and the burden of the protest was carried by the following paragraph:

"One of our employes tried this picture in several of our larger theatres and it was immediately refused. We tried to exploit it then in some of the suburban houses, always without results. Everywhere the public became boisterous, began to break chairs and furniture, endangering even the motion picture theatres. It is the habit in this country, especially in the small theatres, that when the picture is bad and the public believes it has been defrauded, they start to destroy the theatre furniture. They once burned a house at Barquisimeto."

And then there's the really big opportunity offered in The Script magazine, published by Rob Wagner for Hollywood and Beverley Hills film folk, as follows:

> $6,000 WILL BUY one-seventh interest in the manufacture and sale of a new needed article. Returns will be extremely large or nothing. Reply only if you have and can afford to lose $6,000. Box 1 Script.

The New York Herald-Tribune expects too darn much from the producers in Hollywood.

"Though modern cameras rise to the stratosphere and plunge into ocean abysses, to bring us back reports of what passes there, so many strange things happen which one feels he will never see!", bemoans the Herald-Tribune. Why, for example, asks the Herald's editorial, could there not be a camera on hand to film the recent great school of false killer-whales committing suicide in a lonely bay off the Cape of Good Hope, fighting themselves on the sharp rocks near the shore?; or the balls of red lightning that roll across the earth?; and meteors falling, digging valleys and creating lakes?; or that tidal wave that carried ships a mile inland on the Chilean coast? It would have been diverting, too, the Herald feels, to see a picture of that mile of butterflies seen far out at sea.

They also would like to have a camera on hand to photograph the icebergs more than 700 feet high crash in winter upon Greenland, with detonations that would make the roar of New York or London a silly bleat.

"Almost everything can be 'reproduced' with money, learning and technique in mighty studios. But," asks the Herald, "with certainty?"

All of which might well be classified as the year's biggest piece of belittling.

The Westchester County, N. Y., Motion Picture Council, like other "better films" councils, insists that the public prefers socalled "better pictures." Yet, in its latest "Semi-monthly Film Guide," the Westchester Council makes the interesting, albeit inadvertent, admission that such is not the case. Reviewing Paramount's "Swing High, Swing Low," the guide asserts it is a "hilarious mixture of tortured 'music' and wisecrack dialogue, with breezy adventure, pick-up romance, cabaret 'love,' cheap philandering, sodden drunkenness and continuous night club tone, offending taste and intelligence." In a single word, the Council says, it is "Unwholesome." And in the next breath they classify it as a "Sure-fire money-maker."

"Where do you get the inspiration to write great music? asked the interviewer.

"Great music," Mr. Straus replied, takes "perspiration, not inspiration."

Bet Mr. Straus had heard someone say that before.

I Met Him in Paris

(Paramount)

Comedy-Drama

Grade A entertainment for deluxe houses, this romantic farce is also spun of those elements which, experience has taught, click all the way down the line from class neighborhood to isolated country theatres. The story, sustaining dialogue, action and situations, acting, direction, production detail and photography combine to make it a thoroughly finished description of human relations.

In theme, it's the old story of two men in love with a girl, but the characterizations are so subtly drawn and so humanly interesting that the picture is extraordinarily interesting. It is primarily an adult attraction. It has a strong appeal for women, but is not without those values that claim the attention of men. Too sophisticated, probably, for adolescents, it naturally is over the heads of younger children.

Exhibitors whose first consideration of a picture is "Who's in it?" will be interested when they see "I Met Him In Paris" to note how much the right kind of a screen character and part can do for a player's potential drawing power. As "My Man Godfrey" made a comedienne out of Carole Lombard, although she had previously been in "Twentieth Century," and as "Theodora Goes Wild" revealed Irene Dunne in an entirely different light, this definitely proves that light and gay comedy roles should be Claudette Colbert's specialty if her drawing power is to be increased. Since "It Happened One Night" Miss Colbert has been presented in more or less heavy dramatic roles. Audiences reaction to Miss Colbert's work in this film indicated that showmen who promise a different and more delightful Claudette Colbert in their advance advertising will not disappoint their patrons.

The story isn't entirely new, but the wealth of clever dialogue and situations with which it is embellished give it surprising novelty. To get away from the boredom of work-a-day life and to escape the unwelcome attentions of rich but unreliable "Berk Sutter," modiste "Kay Denham" sails for Paris to enjoy the grand time of which she had long dreamed. There she finds fun with American "Gene Anders," but the thrill of romance is blunted by "George Potter," who takes gay delight in butting in on all their meetings.

To get away from this pest, who threatens to expose "Anders" for the married man he is, "Gene" invites "Kay" to go to the Swiss Alps for a winter vacation, but "George" dogs along as a sort of unofficial chaperon to prove his theory that intelligent people can do unconventional things without danger to anyone's morals. In the following days, the trio divide their time between winter sports and bickering, with "Gene" and "Kay" always wishing that busybody "George" would leave them alone. Finally "George," who is now wildly in love with the girl, insists that "Gene" reveal himself to "Kay" as a married man. Expected dramatic complications are eliminated by the arrival of "Gene's" wife, "Helen," which is a sad event for "Kay."

Disillusioned, she decides to get away from all of them and go back to "Sutter." This smart worthy doesn't make "Kay's" lot any lighter with his insinuations and suspicions and she is driven almost to distraction when her two Lotharios again show up. In a rousing climax "Kay" lets "Gene" and "Sutter" have it with both barrels and when "Potter" drops in to comfort her, she suddenly realizes that he is the "big moment" for which she had always been looking.

Selling policy is going to be governed by many differing conditions. Thoughtless, unstudied publicity, in any kind of a house, is not going to do it any good. How well managers know and understand their patrons' tastes is going to have much to do with the film's commercial success.

The Girl Said No

(G-N)

Comedy with Music

Andrew Stone, who wrote the original for, produced and directed "The Girl Said No," seems to have come up with an attraction which managers can offer to their patrons confident in the anticipation that it will satisfy. Mr. Stone hasn't got any sock names in his cast. Nevertheless, he has given such known players as Robert Armstrong, Ed Brophy, Harry Tyler, Richard Tucker and Bert Roach material that inspired them to unusual efforts and he has handled them in a manner that makes them as good if not better than they have been before. Additionally, he has done something with Irene Hervey that may make her a personality who will be given more serious consideration in the future. Though the names may not be big, the story, mainly due to the novel twists that have been included, is big time and so is the production detail. This value, plus the ingenious manner in which Gilbert and Sullivan music has been worked in, gives the film character and class.

The plot is simple and appealing. A race track tout notwithstanding the objections of his pals, falls for a taxi dancer. She gives him just what he had been warned against, a trimming. Bent on revenge, he goes to work to convince her that she has the makings of a musical comedy star. She falls for his game and when he claims influence with a producer she finances the promotion. Meanwhile he rounds up a group of old Gilbert and Sullivan players and starts rehearsing the show. Comes opening night and when he realizes what an unfair deal he has given the girl, as well as how he has double crossed the old timers, he steps out on the stage to denounce himself. But the audience insists the show go on. To the tune of many Gilbert and Sullivan numbers, the show is enthusiastically applauded and when critics claim it a hit, his vengeful trick turns into a good deed that insures happiness and romance all around.

The theme of the story is of a kind to appeal to modern minded audiences and the quality of the musical content should prove a real treat to old timers who like to recall the Gilbert and Sullivan shows. Given any kind of an exploitation break for the first performances, it can be expected that word of mouth comment will prove beneficial.

Previewed May 15 in Alexander Theatre, Glendale. The audience, which at first was sceptical, quickly fell into the swing of the show and became enthused. The applause following the finale indicated that "The Girl Said No" should do all right for itself.—G. M.

Meet the Missus

(RKO-Radio)

Comedy

Showmen looking for an exploitation show on which to hang all sorts of tricks, gags and stunts will do well to consider "Meet The Missus." The piece is a satirical burlesque of two great American institutions, the small town family and those contests which enterprising business houses, posing as public benefactors, sponsor. Gay and amusing all the way through, it has the earmarks of becoming a sure fire clicker in the smaller houses and one that may emerge as a surprisingly popular sleeper in bigger theatres.

The idea is unique. "Mr. Foster" is a rabid contest entrant. No matter what the gag is, the "Missus" is always up to her neck in it. She's so busy with these activities that domestic duties, necessarily, must take second place. Anything around the house that is done is done by henpecked husband, "Otis." Consequently, he is the one whose expert housekeeping causes her to be the sectional winner in a competition for America's Perfect Housewife sponsored by Happy Noodles.

Along with a lot of other husbands and wives, the "Fosters" are taken to Atlantic City for the finals. Smart Happy Noodles devises all sorts of side issue stunts and contests that are sure-fire publicity getters. Frantic as he tries to foster the romance of daughter "Louise" and "Steve Walton," meanwhile fending off the menace of "Fan Dancer," poor "Otis" has his hands full trying to accommodate the demands of his wife. Finally, he and all the other husbands, weary to exhaustion by the manner in which they are exploited, rebel. With "Otis" taking the lead, the husbands make a ridiculous travesty out of the contest and Happy Noodles, fearing that the whole thing will blow up in its face, is thankful to award "Missus Foster" the title and a $10,000 prize for being the Perfect Housewife and get the mob out of town.

Fast moving, with good dialogue and funny situations counterbalancing each other nicely, the film is an all family attraction, full of stunts and gags that can be gayly exploited.

Let's Get Married

(Columbia)

Romantic Comedy

The little known and much abused weather bureau, unthanked when its hurricane warnings save a coastal city and criticized if a minor miscalculation wets down a picnic party, may be the place to turn to for exploitation help of a rare kind in connection with this picture. The production centers about the operations of the bureau, taking time to explain its problems, objectives and the character of the people employed in the service, and although the story is wholly comic in intent and content this phase of it is soundly and authentically treated.

Also involved in the story are politicians and an election. It is hardly likely, perhaps, that local office holders, unaccustomed as they are to giving anybody anything, will be found eager to lend a hand in promotion of the attraction, but it can do no harm to indicate to such of them as may seem susceptible that the picture casts interesting sidelights on the operations of persons immediately interested in the outcome of popular elections. They are not especially ridiculed or harshly dealt with in the presentation and it is possible that in some locations a deal of interest may be stirred up in this sector.

The story is about the daughter of a politician and a young man in the weather bureau whose business it is to tell today what the weather will be tomorrow. Their romance is an up hill and down dale affair, for humorous reasons, but they get along all right until the girl's father seeks to obtain advance information as to what the weather will be on an approaching election day, so that he can make or turn down a patronage deal with an adversary hinging on the farmer vote, which it is expected will not turn out if it rains. The forecaster walks out. The girl makes a conditional promise to marry the candidate, her father's choice. In pique, the forecaster issues what he believes to be a false bulletin, promising rain when he expects clear weather, then resigns. He is mistaken. It rains. But the girl returns to him, intent on marrying him, and it turns out that an invention on which he has been working predicted the weather accurately. Everybody but the defeated candidate is satisfied with the outcome.

Girl Overboard

(Universal)

Drama

This is cut from an unfamiliar pattern and follows a novel design. Early in the picture is placed a marine disaster (burning of a liner) of magnitude and intensity in degree commonly withheld until closing sequences. Unfamiliar, too, are the persons principally concerned in the story, a manufacturer of smart women's apparel and two of his mannikins. Both of these factors appear to indicate exploitation lines not worn thin with constant tracing.

The story is a little intricate for quick retelling. It opens with two mannikins boarding a liner, pursued by their employer, who is in love with one of them and seeks to detain her. In a swift encounter with both girls and a congenial drunk, the employer receives a wound which results in his death on the dock after the boat has left. At sea a fire breaks out and the girl who dealt him the wound writes a confession, which is lost, and then commits suicide. The other girl rescues a boy who turns out to be the son of the district attorney, who takes her into his home.

Reporters and police find the surviving girl and work up a murder cast against her. The district attorney prepares to resign his position in order to defend her. By a series of shrewd deductions and with the aid of his son's memory of events aboard the burning liner, the truth in the matter is finally brought out. He gets his job back and marries the girl.

No straightforward synopsis can give an impression of the story the picture tells. The vital revelations come about under circumstances of most unique character. The conclusion is not foreshadowed, although the audience knows throughout where the guilt properly lies.

The World's in Love

(Viennese)

German Operetta

This is a German language production of Franz Lehar's operetta, "Clo Clo," smartly produced, ably sung, effectively mounted, and supplied with English translation titles for American audiences. It compares favorably with the many importations in kind which have preceded it and appears to the naked eye and ear of a reporter whose class room German was never too good at its best as free of overt portent or purposeful connotation as a Lehar melody is of dolor.

The lady who does most of the singing and upon whom the lens is focused most of the time is Marta Eggerth, an extremely personable and lyrical blonde, and the young man opposite her is Rolf Wanka, who combines the better sides of the early Gary Cooper and Cary Grant. Next in prominence is Leo Slazek, as the boy's father, a mature character comedian of substantial talent. The cast associated with these in the somewhat giddy goings-on is large and proficient.

On the technical side the production is a little less smoothly flowing than Hollywood's best and much better than Hollywood's not-so-good. The music might have come across a little better if recorded in California but the singing and orchestration are of the finest.

The story is slightly in the Continental manner but less so than some that find their way over the ocean. It takes a farmer with boyish memories to the city, his grown son in tow, and they converge by separate devices upon the theatre where a beautiful singer is featured. The boy meets her by accident, the father by design and error, and the three are having quite a night of it, all in good clean fun, when a newspaper publicity story released by the star's agent links her to a dancer of another generation in such wise as to make the father believe she is his daughter. The boy takes the girl to the farm, where his mother approves of her, and they are in a fair way to be married when the father lets the boy know of his supposed dilemma and the romantic young man gives her up. She returns to the city, then the truth comes out, and the boy follows and everything comes out as it should in operetta.

Melodrama

Against a western background and by use of interesting situations and events, this picture tells the story of a boy's moral regeneration. Elements amplifying the theme are romance, drama, music and, in the finale, a dash of thrilling action. Held together by suspense, the various ingredients are well blended to become a picture that should be primarily interesting to western fans.

Always in some kind of a jam, Boston boy "Keith Whitney" has no desire to follow in his father's footsteps and his romance with "Janet" has turned sour. Moving to Texas, he becomes interested in cantina entertainer "Dominga." Ranchers headed by "Tex Stevens" are having trouble with eastern gangsters who are organizing the business of cattle rustling in racketeer style. Grateful for saving his life, "Tex" wants to help "Keith," but the tenderfoot refuses the offer. His gambling and drinking habits leading him into more trouble, "Keith" wires his parents for money, explaining that he is going to buy a ranch. When the money is gone, "Senator" and "Mrs. Whitney" arrive in Verde. In a real fix, "Keith" appeals to "Tex" for aid.

To continue the deception of his parents, "Keith" goes to "Tex's" ranch, where, upon his arrival, the "Senator" discovers that he and Come On, Cowboys!

(Republic)

Western

A good screenplay that manages to keep several elements in the story running smoothly without undue conflicting of sequences, with lots of action and some good comedy contribute to an hour spent amid the romantic west. The story centers around the winter quarters of a traveling circus with control of the outfit under dispute and involves a gang of counterfeiters.

The untangling of the dispute and the apprehension of the mob is done by no one hero, as is usually the case, but by three stalwarts of the plains. The Three Mesquiteers, Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune, share the top role in fact as well as name. Maxine Doyle has the dubious distinction of being the romantic interest to three cowboys who are more concerned with their mundane affairs than with feminity.

"Rigby" (Edward Peil, Sr.) and "Harris" (Roger Williams) are partners in the ownership of a traveling circus. "Rigby," who is the head of a counterfeiting gang, frames "Harris" and sends him to prison so that he (Rigby) will be freed of all suspicion and able to continue his counterfeiting. "Harris" entrusts the guardianship of his little daughter to the Three Mesquiteers. "Ellen" (Maxine Doyle) is the little girl's governess.

The Mesquiteers capture two of "Rigby's" men and lodge them in the town jail when counterfeit money is found on them

Turn Off the Moon

(Paramount)

Comedy with Music

It would appear that the thing to do in box office behalf of this is to flash the names, talk about the music, mention that it has at least one song hit in the score and that the Kenny Baker-Phil Harris portion of the Jack Benny broadcasts is among those present, and see what happens. The picture has a good deal of kidding reference to astrology which some exhibitors may have local reasons for emphasizing and the thing that holds all these and other factors more or less together is Charles Ruggles' comedy.

The production falls, structurally, into two sections, the first a character comedy wherein Eleanore Whitney and Johnny Downs work out a romance with the aid of Mr. Ruggles, the second a kind of elaborated floorshow somewhat tenuously related to the story of the first part and terminating in its long deferred clinch. Dialogue is designed for laughs and characterization is on an everyman-for-himself basis.

Mr. Ruggles is cast as a department store owner whose astrologist tells him he must bring to successful conclusion the romance of a youthful couple before the stars will permit him to complete his own romance with a long and impatiently waiting fiancee. The boy turns out to be one of his employees and the girl, whose antecedents remain unexplained, is given a job in the store also. Gags of this kind and that keep them from getting together until the end of the picture, whereupon their employer gets married, too.

Behind the Scenes

Some interesting and intimate behind the scenes shots of popular film folk at play are presented in this latest issue of candid camera reporting. This issue is notable for the last section of its content which is devoted to glimpses of the presentation of the famous "Oscars," the annual awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for distinguished screen work. Tied in with the current "A Star Is Born" which features as an important part of its story a fictional picturization of such an occasion, these actual scenes of the event may be of genuine and timely interest. The winners including Luise Rainer and Paul Muni are shown receiving their awards while such cinema celebrities as Bette Davis, Victor McLaglen, Leslie Howard, Don Ameche and Jack Oakie look on approvingly. Other items of fan interest included in the reporting are visits to a barbecue, the famous Racquet Club, Allan Jones' motorbike stand and Frank Morgan's new "Trading Post." Running time, 9½ minutes.

20th-FOX AND REPUBLIC START CONVENTIONS

Educational's Program Also Will Be Announced at Fox Meeting; Both Gatherings in Hollywood

Twentieth Century-Fox and Republic home office staffs and sales forces were on their way to Hollywood this week for annual sales conventions.

Eastern delegations of both groups left New York on Wednesday by train. The Twentieth-Century-Fox meeting, to be attended by 800, will open at the Ambassador Hotel on Monday, continuing for four days. Republic representatives will meet at the Roosevelt Hotel, Hollywood, on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Sidney R. Kent, president; John D. Clark, general sales manager, and Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity, arrived on the coast last week in advance of the delegates to complete plans for the Twentieth Century-Fox session. Representatives of all departments of the company entrained this week in various sections of the country, beginning in New York on Wednesday.

Convention Opens Monday

The convention program will open on Monday morning with an address of welcome by Mr. Clark and during the day conferences will be held on the outdoor series, Movietone News and short subjects. Announcement of the production program for Educational Pictures will be made by E. W. Hammons, president, and awards will be distributed to winners in the Sidney R. Kent sales drive.

The second day, to be taken up with production matters, will include addresses by Colonel Jason Joy, public relations director, and Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production. On Wednesday Mr. Clark, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, and Mr. Kent will address the delegates. A session on advertising, publicity and exploitation will be addressed by Harry Brand and Mr. McCarthy.

On Thursday the representatives will visit the studios at Movietone City.

Approximately half of the possibilities for 1937-38 were sold up to this week, according to report from the home office in New York. At least 12 exchanges were expected to report at the convention that salesmen have written off half of the possibilities. Circuits sold include the National Theatres subsidiaries, Butterfield, Metropolitan Playhouses, RKO and Fabian Theatres.

Republic Delegates Leave

Herbert J. Yates, president of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc.; J. J. Milstein, Republic vice-president in charge of sales; Edward M. Schnitzer, eastern sales supervisor, and Sam Hacker, manager of the contract department, left New York on Wednesday for the company's meeting which opens on the coast next Tuesday.

Also on their way to Hollywood for the convention were: Hector Everett, southern sales manager; Max Roth, midwest sales head; Herman Gluckman, New York and Philadelphia division manager; Harry Lavine, Philadelphia branch manager. Sam and Jake Flax, Washington franchise holders; Herman Rifkin, Boston; Sam Berkowitz, Buffalo, and Bernie Mills, Albany.

Franchise holders from the south and midwest were to join the group in Chicago.

The company will announce 56 features, 24 of which will be westerns, and four serials for next season.

Following the convention four regional meetings will be held in San Francisco, June 4th; Chicago, June 9th; New Orleans, June 11th, and New York, June 14th.

Mexican Product Moves Forward

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Mexican production is soon to be embellished with two features of peculiar interest. Work on both is scheduled to start in June. One of them is to be the first picture of the kind. It will be based upon the life and exploits of the original Don Juan, a 16th century blueblood Spanish rake. The production is to be titled "Don Juan Tenorio" and will be made by Cinematografica, S. A. This story has been presented on the Spanish speaking stage for centuries—it is a fixture in Mexico during the period of each November 2, this land's "Day of the Dead"—but never before has it been screened.

The other picture is to be "La Paloma" ("The Dove") based upon the popular old Mexican song that is a near classic. The producer is Colonial Films. Miguel Contreras Torres, president, who is known in Hollywood, will direct.

Extraordinary business was done in Mexico City by Universal's "Three Smart Girls." The picture ran for five consecutive weeks at the select Cine Regis and topped any film for run duration at one house in the Mexican capital. The best the runner-up was able to do was four weeks in one cinema. "Three Smart Girls" is going to stay in Mexico for quite a time, it is indicated by bookings.

Jose Pezet has completed financing for his company to undertake "continuous production" this summer

Two more big cinemas are being rapidly prepared. Both are to have modern equipment and patron luxuries. One of them, in the downtown belt, the name of which has not been decided upon as yet, is to open in the early summer. The other, the Alhambra, a 4,500-seater, is expected to be ready in the fall. The laying of its foundations is now being completed.

Mexican producers have formed a national organization, Associacion Mexicana de Productores Cinematografica, the purposes of which are to develop all branches of the industry and protect its interests, elevate ethics, raise technical and cultural standards, improve relations between producers, distributors and exhibitors, umpire disputes, stimulate production and greater distribution in Mexico and abroad.

Cinema entertainment has been uplifted in Mexico City as a result of strict vigilance, asserts a report of the municipal amusement inspection department. This activity has barred from screens of the Mexican capital productions that are outright Fascistic or tending in any way to spread Fascist doctrines, and those that might stir up religious controversy or attack the ideals and accomplishments of the Mexican social revolution, the department says.

Mexico's use of motion pictures to attract tourists has inspired El Salvador to do likewise. The tiny but progressive Central American country has contracted with Color Films, Inc., to make a series of short subjects depicting its wonders and charms. The pictures, in colors, are to be widely exhibited in the United States and other lands.

All motion picture film must have authorization of the government's press and propaganda department before it can be exported from Mexico, President Lazaro Cardenas has ruled. Censoring of all pictures is done free of charge by the department.

Local cinemas must abide strictly by the civic regulation which forbids them to sell tickets when all their seats are occupied, the municipal amusements inspection department demands. Exhibitors who violate this regulation will be heavily fined.

Aherne Sees European Production Lagging

Brian Aherne, actor, returned to New York from abroad this week and told the daily press that large motion picture production centers had been set up in England and Italy, but that both countries still lack the personnel to carry on large-scale, successful production. The English film companies, he said, were plentifully supplied with capital at the beginning of the venture, but the supply has now apparently vanished.

New Film Magazine

Cinema Arts, new monthly film publication, will make its first appearance some time in June. The new book will be published by Albert Griffith Grey, brother of D. W. Griffith, and will be the size of Fortune, selling at 50 cents per copy. Paul F. Husserl, former managing editor of The March of Time, is editor. John D. DeVine is associate editor; Pamela Pratt Forbes, fashion editor; Marion Martone, picture editor, and J. S. Seiden, art director. E. A. Tropp is executive vice-president and general manager and Bernard Palmedo is circulation manager.

Burkett Projectionist Head

Frank Burkett, projectionist at the Fox Rockhill in Kansas City, has been elected business agent by members of Local 170, Motion Picture Operators, affiliate of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes. He replaces Robert Dillon, who held the position for several years.

The Bluebook School

Conducted by

F. H. RICHARDSON

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 71

Bluebook School Question No. 71 was: (A) What present conditions hamper perfect sound reproduction and projection? (B) Do you consider previewing of productions for sound volume scoring advisable? (C) What are your present views of best method of handling sound volume level in theatres? (D) What, if any, suggestions can you advance looking to possible improvement in sound reproduction and visual projection?

Because of need for space in setting forth views of practical men on these important points I shall omit publication of names, merely saying that with a few additions, all those answering acceptably did so on this occasion.

(A) Evans and Rau say: "(1) Lack of proper acoustical treatment of theatre auditoriums. (2) Refusal of some exhibitors to purchase needed equipment replacement parts. (3) Purchase of poorly designed reproduction equipment and sound projection equipment."

J. R. Prater answers: "(1) Use of worn and obsolete equipment. (2) Lack of standardization even in modern recording and reproducing equipment, particularly as concerns frequency response. (3) Handling of film and operation of equipment by men who do not appreciate the delicacy of modern sound films and reproducing equipment. (4) Lack of systematic co-operation between auditorium employes and projectionists in controlling sound volume and checking sound quality." [To which I would add—and checking visual results.—F.H.R.]

G. E. Doe says, "That's a tough one, Dad! Could use all the Bluebook School page answering it, and need more space. However, the three things that above all others do injury to results are in my opinion, equipment not kept in good condition, films oily and dirty, and projectionists who lack proper pride in their work. Except in first-run houses, clean films are seldom received. Oil and dirt is smeared all over them, under which condition the best results are utterly impossible.

"Then there are the managers who will not permit equipment to be kept in good, or even fair condition. Thirdly, there is the auditorium that has faulty acoustical treatment or construction. Given a real projectionist, good equipment maintained in proper condition, and an auditorium that gives proper results acoustically, a really spendid result can be produced with very many of our modern productions. Lacking any one of the things named, results must and will be faulty."

W. C. Brown says, "There are many conditions tending to hamper sound reproduction and projection. Perfection requires perfect recording in which all frequencies are present, with all sound recorded at relative volume levels, without added noises or frequencies. This is not possible with present day equipment, hence perfect reproduction of the original sound is handicapped at the start. In addition, there is distortion and loss of frequencies, as well as added noises picked up from various sources. Then, too, the speakers do not distribute sound evenly, nor do they produce what comes to them exactly."

(B) There seems to be a considerable number who regard previewing as unnecessary, provided producers will record volume in such manner as will automatically reproduce at a level volume. On the whole, R. and K. Wells set the matter forth as seems most nearly correct to me. They say:

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 77

(A) What is the best method of cleaning carbon clamps?

(B) How much lost motion is permissible in a gear train?

(C) How may such lost motion be accurately measured?

To join the Bluebook School merely send in answers. Place name and question number upon first sheet. Address F. H. Richardson, No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

"Considering the question as asked, we hold it is possible for producers to so record sound that even volume will result automatically, insofar as concerns an auditorium in which reproduction conditions remain constantly at one level. We hold, however, that producers do not as yet always accomplish that purpose perfectly, therefore if exhibitors and projectionists expect to secure really maximum results in excellence, such previewing is necessary.

"However, it is seldom, if ever, that sound projection conditions remain constant. First, there is a difference created by summer and winter clothing, and even by clothing on a very warm day and a cool day. Not only is this true, but as is well known, starting with an empty house, every patron entering creates a difference in results as to sound volume requirement. Slight for a single patron, but a difference just the same, and when an auditorium is empty and full that difference is very considerable. Personally, while this, strictly speaking, is beside the question, in conjunction with my manager I have experimented and determined approximately what fader level serves best with (a) empty auditorium, (b) one quarter, (c) three-quarters full, and (d) full. True this is not wholly reliable, but it serves to enable me, by glancing at the audience, to keep my volume at least approximately at proper level.

"But that is not all, for atmospheric conditions have an effect, so, Dad, I don't know what the answer is. Observers have proven more or less a failure. Reverting to the question as asked, I would say yes, with note that relatively very few will take the trouble to do it competently and carefully—or at all, for that matter."

(C) Throughout the mass of answers there is an almost universal view that to date the only practical method of controlling volume level is by means of a competent observer, but also an almost universal view that a really competent observer is almost a curiosity. But here is one I lay before you, admitting I do not understand the set-up too well myself. W. H. Edmunds says:

"I believe I am fortunate in that I have a monitor enabling me to check auditorium volume accurately at all times. The monitor and acoustical qualities of the projection room go very nicely together. I set the monitor volume control after estimating the volume required to overcome audience noise and absorption. I then hold the main volume control just below the point at which monitor sound seems to get sharp and 'crackly'."

(D) There is one anwser, that of J. R. Prater that tops all the rest. Here it is:

"If it is properly attended to, I believe the best method of handling sound volume level in theatres is to keep a well qualified observer on duty every minute of every performance, and for him to keep the projectionist constantly informed of necessary volume changes, or for the observer himself to handle a remote volume control. However, such a system is worse than useless unless the observer is constantly on duty. Finding a person who is capable and responsible, and yet satisfied to sit for hours doing nothing but signaling or controlling volume is the real problem, even if the manager can be convinced of the need for such a person. Almost invariably such an observer is given other duties which may take him away from the sound control system at the very time he is needed there most. Considering this, I believe most theatres will be better served by the following plan:

"Preview one complete program with manager and three or four other persons with average hearing who can also attend the same program when theatre is about half filled, and when entirely or nearly filled. With observers seated near the back of the auditorium, keep very close check of the most pleasing volume level for all observers, and inform projectionist by signals or phone of any changes desired. During preview the projectionist should carefully select the lowest monitor volume control setting which gives him clearly audible sound in the projection room, and should mark that setting Preview. Then when house is about half filled, the same procedure should be followed, the monitor volume control setting being changed so the sound volume in projection room remains the same as before, and this setting marked Half Filled. Repeat with house filled, and mark this monitor volume control setting Full House.

"During future preformances, the projectionist can keep auditorium volume very nearly correct by keeping his monitor volume control set to correspond with the size of the audience and adjusting master volume control so that projection room sound volume is kept at the correct level (just loud enough to be clearly audible). In addition, the head usher or some other responsible auditorium employee can signal or phone the projectionist of any abnormal sound level requirements or of poor sound quality, and unless the entire seating area can be seen from the projection room ports, should also keep the projectionist informed as to how nearly the theatre is filled.

"As to possible improvement in sound reproduction and projection, excellent equipment is now available at prices which any theatre worthy of having its doors open can afford. Replacement of worn and obsolete equipment must be done, and the new equipment must be so constructed and adjusted as to faithfully reproduce sound exactly as it was recorded.

MINIMUM OF 30 SET BY UFA FOR 1937-38

New President and Board Installed by German Company; Gross Reported Increased

by J. K. RUTENBERG

in Berlin

At the general meeting of Universum Film Aktiengesellschaft (Ufa) in Berlin early this month at which new officers and directors were installed a minimum production schedule of 30 features was announced for the 1937-38 season. Gross business for the first ten months of the 1936-37 fiscal year was reported at 84,000,000 Reichsmarks, cinema attendance and distribution figures were shown as increased, and important agreements between Ufa and Tobis were announced.

Retiring members of the board included Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, former State minister; Dr. Guenther Donner, Dr. F. A. Freundt, Hans Wolf von Goerschen, Hans von Goldacker, Dr. Karl von Hayessen, Gerhard Hugenberg, Otto F. Lehmann, Dr. Hans von und zu Loewenstein, director Johann Bernhard Mann, Heinrich von Meyer, Dr. Kurt Richter, Dr. Hans Schippel, Otto Schmidt, Gustav Struckmann, Dr. Fritz Tetens, Dr. Andrew Thorndike, D. Gottfried Traub, Wilhelm Widenmann and Otto Wolff.

The meeting was held with State Counsel Dr. von Stauss in the chair. He pronounced the gratitude of the company toward the resigning board members and thanked especially the retiring president, Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, for the valuable services he rendered to the Ufa organization. Dr. Hugenberg took control of Ufa exactly ten years ago and made it the most important German film company. He was responsible for the severance of the Ufa film theatres from the influential American film interests by negotiating settlements of their renting contracts with U. S. film companies.

The new Ufa board will comprise State Counsel Dr. von Stauss, Johannes Kiehl, director; Dr. Alexander Kreuter, Karl Pfeiffer, director, and Dr. Josef Schilling, director. New members are Professor Carl Froelich, noted director, who is responsible for a number of successful German films; Paul Hartmann, actor; Eugen Klöpfer, State actor; Dr. Hans Pilder, Karl Ritter, production supervisor; Hans Weidemann, vice-president of the German State Film Chamber, and Mathias Wieman.

Carl Froelich directed such films as Maedchen in Uniform," "Reifende Jugend" and others. Eugen Klöpfer is a well-known actor on German stages and manager of three Berlin theatres. He has played important roles in German films. Paul Hartmann comes from the stage, Karl Ritter is a production supervisor of Ufa and Hans Weidemann has supervised and directed some very successful German films.

Gross Increased

It was reported at the general meeting of the board that the turn-over of Ufa amounted to 84 million Reichsmarks in the first ten months of the year 1936-37 compared with 67 millions in the corresponding period of the preceding year. While the balances of the years 1934-35 and 1935-36 still showed considerable losses it was possible to equalize the expenses by a greater income from exhibitors.

Cinema attendance in Germany amounted to 32,430,000 in Ufa theatres alone in the first ten months of the current year, compared with 25,530,000 persons in the corresponding period of the previous year. The increase in Cinema attendance amounted to 18 per cent in Ufa theatres. Film distribution in Germany could be increased by 25 per cent and there is a slow increase in foreign distribution, it was said.

Of the thirty feature films to be produced in the coming year, half will be ready at the beginning of the new season.

Carl Froelich, Eugen Klöpfer, Paul Hartmann, Karl Ritter, Hans Weidemann, Mathias Wieman and general director Ludwig Klitzsch will form a new committee for the artistic supervision of Ufa production and the president of the board will be Dr. von Stauss.

At the same time important changes were effected in the Tobis Corporation. A new committee for cultural and artistic matters was formed with Emil Jannings as president. Willy Forst, Veit Harlan, Arnold Raether, Hans Zerlett and general director Dr. Henkel will be members of this committee. The president of the board will be Dr. Ferdinand Bausback. Veit Harlan, Arnold Raether and Hans Zerlett will be appointed members of the board at the next general meeting of Tobis.

Important agreements were concluded between Ufa and Tobis to insure close co-operation in the future in artistic as well as in commercial matters.

Prize Winners of UA Announced

Winners of prizes in the George J. Schaefer Drive, conducted by United Artists, were announced this week in New York by A. W. Smith, Jr., general sales manager. The drive in honor of Mr. Schaefer, who is vice-president of the company in charge of sales, officially closed May 1 but the results were unavailable until this week because of record sales, according to Mr. Smith.

The grand prizes were awarded to Robert Mochrie, southern district manager; Ewen MacLean, Los Angeles manager, and to A. J. Jeffery of Montreal.

Four weeks' extra salary go to the following salesmen: Jack Groves, Dallas; Frank Eisenberg, Minneapolis; Guy Gunderson, Los Angeles; Elmer Donnelly, Indianapolis; T. L. Davis, Philadelphia, and David Burkan, New York. The two last named finished in a tie and will split the prize.

Bookers in leading branches who will receive two weeks' pay are E. Schrider, Montreal; Roy Sachs, Dallas; Harry James, Chicago; W. B. Pollard, Los Angeles; L. Dowdell, Cleveland, and Herbert Richeck and Ben Levine in New York.

There also were awards to 13 bookers and managers for increase in Disney product sales and Joe Johnson of Toronto and E. Zerga of San Francisco won an extra week's pay in the accessory sales contest.

Supply Dealers Meeting

The Independent Theatre Supply Dealers Association will hold its annual convention in Chicago starting June 15.

Arkansas Owners Elect; 3 Others Call Conventions

Exhibitor organization activities centered around five units this week as the Independent Theatre Owners Association of Arkansas met in annual convention at Little Rock, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington announced its regional meeting would be held at Spokane June 7 and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia set June 14 at the Cavalier Hotel at Virginia Beach as the time and place of its mid-summer convention. Birmingham was selected by the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association for the 1937 convention to be held June 27-29 at the Piedmont Hotel. William Griffin, vice-president, will preside.

Thirty-five member exhibitors attending the spring meeting of the Nebraska-Western Iowa Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association in Omaha Tuesday discussed product, producers' sales policies and the possibility of increased rentals, but adopted no resolutions.

A survey of current power rates for Arkansas theatres which showed a wide variation led the Arkansas I. T. O. A. to order a power rate survey. With a view to obtaining a minimum uniform rate, a committee was named to consult with Arkansas power officials.

Representatives of manufacturers of Diesel and other types of individual power generating plants were on hand to demonstrate their equipment.

J. F. Norman, secretary of the organization since its formation, was elected president Monday by acclamation. Other officers elected were: O. W. McCutcheon of Blytheville, vice-president; R. V. McGinnis of Hope, secretary-treasurer. Board members chosen were Mr. Ensor and Henry Saunders of Little Rock, W. E. Blume, Searcy; G. Carey, Paris; W. 7. Malin, Agusta; D. E. Fitton, Harrison and Charles Bonner of Pine Bluff.

Approximately 75 delegates attended. The convention ended with a banquet and a dance at the Hotel Marion.

Industry Members Honored

For their service to the motion picture industry, Adolph Zukor, Cecil B. DeMille, Luise Rainer, Spencer Tracy, Lionel Barrymore, Frances Marion, Boris Morros and Slavko Vorkapitch have been given awards by the American Institute of Cinematography of the University of Southern California.

Luter New Manager

J. Harold Luter is the new manager of the Paramount at Miami, Fla., succeeding Robert C. Swanson, who has been transferred to a managerial post in the northern part of Florida. He was formerly manager of the Miami Rex.

Pax Buys "Mayerling"

South Americans Feel Product Is Of Better Class

The quality of motion pictures is improving and the knifing and burning of upholstered theatre seats is on the wane in the capitals below the Equator, John Day, Jr., general manager for Paramount Pictures in South America, reported this week in New York in an interview. Mr. Day is in Manhattan on a routine visit to his home office.

There was a time when the average South American exhibitor was obliged to reckon the cost of vandalism as a fixed overhead charge. The demonstrative Latin Americans were fond of expressing their dissatisfaction with inferior motion picture offerings by slicing a seat covering or leaving a lighted cigarette behind them on the upholstery at whatever stage of the performance they decided they had had enough, Mr. Day said. Nowadays, they are becoming as interested as the management in keeping seats intact, certain that they will be back to occupy them again with the next change of program, he continued.

The average South American has an insatiable appetite for pictures, it was also pointed out by the visiting manager, and this probably plays an important part in the spread of double and even triple features throughout most of the principal cities and into many of the first runs.

Film tastes are as varied below the Equator as they are above, Mr. Day reported. Any good story with an outstanding star in the cast will do business, and the best money pictures in America are usually the best money pictures in South America, as well.

Although American films continue to comprise about 75 per cent of all the product shown in South America, the growth of native production and the increasing popularity of German and French pictures are beginning to be felt, according to Mr. Day. The Argentine, which produced 18 pictures last season, will make 20 to 30 during the new season, he said. Brazil may make only three or four. The European product is being placed in the so-called "money" classification with increasing frequency.

Mr. Day reported that taxation and legislation affecting films is without discrimination or unfairness, but said that local censorship is becoming increasingly worrisome.

Kuykendall Declines Bid

Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, will be unable to attend the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association summer meeting in England during August, it was announced at the M.P.T.O.A. headquarters in New York this week. Mr. Kuykendall was forced to refuse the invitation to address the English meeting by the pressure of business here.

David Loew to Columbia

David Loew will move his production activities to the Columbia studios in Hollywood upon the completion of one more Joe E. Brown feature for Radio. He signed a two-picture contract with Columbia and will deliver the first in the fall.

"Mad Dog" Production Is Once More Announced

"The Mad Dog of Europe," much discussed motion picture which has a background of Nazi Germany, will be produced by a new company, New Era Productions, Inc., it was announced in Hollywood this week. The new company will finance the production and exhibit it as a roadshow, according to present plans.

Officers of the new company are Samuel B. Gach, president; John J. Boland, vice-president; Dr. Eugene Rosenberg, treasurer; J. Frederick Rosen, secretary, and Franklin B. McCarthy, assistant. Mr. Gach is also president of the City Board of Health in Los Angeles and Dr. Rosenberg is a rabbi.

Canty Universal's European Manager

The appointment of George R. Canty as Continental European manager of Universal Pictures was officially announced in Hollywood Monday by Gustave Schaefer, export manager.

Mr. Canty, who has served in various European countries since 1926 as trade commissioner and who is now commercial attache at the American Embassy in Warsaw, Poland, will leave immediately from there for London, where he will establish Universal headquarters.

Eight Foursomes For Albee Trophy

The committee of the Annual Film Daily Golf Tournament, scheduled for June 9 at the Elmsford Country Club at White Plains, N. Y., announced this week that the silver Albee Trophy would no longer be played for by teams representing only the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, the Motion Picture Club and the Cinema Club, but would be the grand prize awarded the foursome with the lowest score of the day in a special event. The AMPA team has won the trophy for several successive past years and it was this that prompted the tournament committee to set the cup up as a prize to teams representing all industry branches instead of the three organizations.

The team representing Warner Brothers, captained by S. Charles Einfeld, was the first to file its entry in the Albee Trophy competition. United Artists, led by Monroe Greenthal, followed. Tom Gerety will captain the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer group while the Eastman Kodak company four will be led by Ted Curtis. C. C. Pettijohn will enlist a foursome from the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., ranks and the entries of the other major companies are expected this week.

Prizes will be given to all foursomes competing, besides those in the Albee Trophy event, and plenty of booby prizes have already been secured by the committee.

Chicago Warner Club Dines

More than 800 persons attended the annual dinner and entertainment of the Chicago Warner Club at the Congress Hotel in Chicago last Friday night. Charles Ryan and Herbert Wheeler of the headquarters staff handled the program.

Depinet Is Named Pathe News Head As Smith Resigns

New editorial and operating policies, stemming from a closer alliance with the parent company offices than has been in force, were reported this week in formation for Pathe News, Inc., under the management of Ned E. Depinet, president, and Frederick Ullman, vice-president.

Reorganization of the executive staff followed the resignation last week of Courtland Smith as president and Jack S. Connolly as general manager, reputedly to engage in radio and television activities. The newsreel company for the last seven years has been operated almost entirely independently of RKO Radio, the parent company.

With the change more direct management supervision by the home office is seen. Mr. Depinet, the new president, is vice-president in charge of distribution for RKO. Mr. Ullman, vice-president, is general manager, assuming the post left vacant by Mr. Connolly. He will be assisted by Frank R. Donovan as production manager, newly created position. Other changes in the editorial staff were reported imminent but details were not disclosed.

Mr. Connolly's resignation, after an association with the company in editorial and executive capacities of seven years, followed Mr. Smith's by one day. He has been associated with Mr. Smith in various enterprises for many years. The two were in early newspaper work together and when Mr. Smith became the first secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Mr. Connolly also entered the industry as a Washington representative for that organization.

When Mr. Smith became associated with Fox Film Corporation in 1926, and organized Fox Movietone News subsequently, Mr. Connolly also joined the company and in 1929 was made European representative for the reel. Mr. Smith was appointed editor of Pathe News in 1928 and when he was elected to the presidency in January, 1931, Mr. Connolly joined him as general manager. RKO acquired control of Pathe News, founded in 1910 by Charles Pathe, with its purchase of Pathe assets in 1932. Mr. Smith opened the Embassy, reputedly the first newsreel theatre, in November, 1929.

Mr. Depinet headed Pathe's distribution prior to its acquisition by RKO and thereafter was a member of the board of RKO Radio Pictures and RKO Pathe. In 1934 he was elected president of RKO Distributing Corporation but with the dissolution of that company in RKO's program of corporate simplification several months ago he became a vice-president of RKO Pictures in charge of distribution.

The new operating head of the newsreel, Mr. Ullman, has been manager of the commercial department of Pathe for the last five years. He came to the newsreel six years ago, having previously been a theatre operator.

Mr. Donovan has been associated with the company in production work for the last three years. He came to Pathe from the Magazine of Wall Street, where he was business manager for three years. Previously he was connected with an advertising agency for ten years.

Following his resignation Mr. Smith took an office in the building at 35 West 45th Street, which houses Pathe News, and announced that among other activities he and his associates would be engaged in marketing a new lens, said to have special value in television camera work.

ASK OFFICIAL INQUIRY INTO GAUMONT-BRITISH

Provisional Shareholders' Committee Wants Board of Trade to Study Company Finances

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Another sensation was added to the many which recently have attended the affairs of Gaumont-British Corporation when it was officially announced that the Provisional Shareholders' Committee, which caused adjournment of the annual meeting in spite of the directors' protests, and later unsuccessfully took legal action to restrain payment of the preference dividend, proposed to ask the Board of Trade to make an investigation of the company's affairs.

The application proposed will be made under Section 135 of the Companies Act, 1929, which provides for an official investigation on the demand of ten per cent of the shareholders of any company. It is conditional on the committee obtaining the necessary percentage of support and also on shareholders contributing the cost of this and other actions which have been or may be taken against the present Ostrer control of the company.

In a circular to shareholders, the Committee requests a contribution of one penny (two cents) per share held and says that holders should think it worthwhile to contribute "in order to provide the funds which will be necessary to safeguard their interests." It is pointed out that the expenses of the action already taken have been very heavy and that, although the committee failed to restrain payment of the preference dividend, "important infortion as to the real position of the corporation's affairs was forthcoming. . . . bringing to the shareholders' knowledge facts which had not hitherto been made known to them."

Stating the general case for an official investigation, the Committee (Chairman W. H. J. Drown, the plaintiff in the recent action, with R. A. Gilbert, G. F. Salas, C. H. Faning and L. H. Woddis) recapitulates its action in the first instance in carrying the adjournment of the annual meeting for the production of a consolidated balance sheet. It points out that this document, when it was forthcoming, showed a net deficit of £507,742 but that this figure was arrived at by valuing assets at £20,086,016 and that this represented a revaluation which increased the book value of the assets by £1,086,786. Without the revaluation, says the Committee, the deficit on capital account would be £1,594,528.

Cites Four Directors' Opposition

The statement then repeats facts leading up to the action to restrain payment of the preference dividend, emphasizing that four directors out of nine opposed the payment because, apart from the deficit of £507,742 in the consolidated statement, the managing director, Mark Ostrer, had admitted trading losses of £623,000 which, it is said, "having regard to the admitted deficiency at March 31st, 1936, could be met only by trenching upon share capital."

It is added that, during the action, an affidavit by Mark Ostrer revealed the intention of the majority directors, including the three Ostrer brothers, to treat the trading loss as that of the wholly owned subsidiary Gaumont-British Distributors and not that of the company and to deal with it by writing down the values of G-B Distributors' shares, and of the studios, from £1,400,000 to £777,000. Later it was argued, says the statement, that the loss could not be transferred to the subsidiary but could be dealt with by utilizing reserves of £500,000 and £200,000 in the corporation's books.

Denman Share Deal Cited

Discussing these figures the Committee assert that the £500,000 is the balance remaining from the sum of £2,500,000 created partly from share premiums which the Corporation obtained by buying shares in Denman Picture Houses, Ltd., at 18/- for a 10/- share and issuing its own 10/- shares at 30/- each in exchange. "In this transaction," says the circular, "Mr. Isidore Ostrer appears to have been a substantial participant."

Of the value of this investment, the circular says: "It is now conceded that the investment in Denman shares is unrepresented by tangible assets to the extent of about £1,000,000, which deficiency would, in itself, more than wipe out the £500,000 reserve."

"While the court held that it was 'legally' permissible to use reserves made up of share premiums for the purpose of offsetting trading losses and enabling payment of dividends, few prudent business men would care to utilize reserves so created, and appearing to be only bookkeeping entries not represented by tangible assets," is another comment by the Committee.

Says Reserves Aren't Represented

Reviewing certain aspects of the legal action, and quoting the judge's suggestion that the corporation might like to call a general meeting before paying the dividend (this suggestion was not acted upon) the committee says that, as the consolidated statement showed a deficiency of assets as regards share capital, "the so-called 'reserves' in the 'Legal' balance sheet are totally unrepresented by assets."

The circular proceeds to attack the action of the majority directors in closing down production and distribution and asserts that in addition to a trading loss now estimated at nearly £800,000, instead of £623,000, there have been serious capital losses, which it identifies as follows:

Ideal Films, Ltd., and W.&F. Film Service, Ltd., out of existence for several years, appear in the company's books as an investment value of £450,000.

Gaumont-British Distributors, Ltd., virtually closed down, appears in the books at £510,000. The Shepherd's Bush studios, also closed down, are valued at £450,000.

The shares in Denman Picture Houses, Ltd., valued at nearly £2,000,000, "were admitted to be over-valued to the extent of about £1,000,000 and even the remaining £1,000,000 is hardly justified by the meagre return which this company shows."

Heavy losses, it is asserted, have probably been incurred on the corporation's large loans to and investments in Gainsborough Pictures, British Acoustic, and Baird Television, all of which show large trading losses.

The committee suggest that, taking these items into account, the capital and trading losses together amount to approximately £3,000,000 and, they suggest, "make it clear that very serious jeopardy exists in regard to the share capital."

Summing up the case for an official investigation, the circular asserts that "there have been grave errors of judgment amounting to serious mismanagement. Owing to the peculiar arrangements regarding voting control, the Ostrer brothers, although now holding a relatively insignificant proportion of money value in the share capital, have been able to operate the assets virtually without check. The result has been disastrous to shareholders' interests. It is feared that the present management, if left unchecked, may well result in further losses of such magnitude as to cause a complete exhaustion of shareholders' capital."

Emphasizing that the recent action was not an action hostile to the preference shareholders "but in order to put them in due course in a position to exercise a vote and to protect their security," the committee emphasizes the cost of the action as the reason for an appeal for financial support on a broader basis, and says that, while the appeal for a Board of Trade investigation is definite, "it is inadvisable in this communication to indicate all the steps in contemplation for protecting the shareholders' interests."

Quality Clause Endorsed

The action of the council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association in pressing for a quality clause in the proposed revision of the British Films Act quota was unanimously endorsed Tuesday at the semi-annual meeting of the London and Home Counties Branch. The decision came after an outspoken discussion organization on the quota question.

The skeleton program of the Summer Conference of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, at the Yorkshire spa of Harrogate from June 21st to June 25th, was issued this week. It shows a General Council meeting, a branch secretaries' conference and the official banquet scheduled for Tuesday, June 22nd. On Wednesday there will be papers in the morning and afternoon, a luncheon with the four Yorkshire branches of the CEA as hosts, and a film gala organized by Arthur Dent of Associated British Pictures, at midnight.

New Federation Approved

The formation of a new production organization in England, as indicated recently, was approved at a meeting at the office of the Federation of British Industries.

It is planned to have virtually twin organizations, the Federation of Film Producers and the Association of Film Producers, Ltd., in order to deal with both labor and trade matters. It is expected that the new organization will absorb the present FBI Film Group.

Hode Guest of Honor

Hal Hode, Columbia executive who has been delivering a series of talks on "Lost Horizon" before clubs and other organizations in the eastern states, was the guest of honor at a dinner-meeting of the Committee on Motion Pictures, Department of Secondary Education, of the National Education Association at the Hotel Woodstock in New York last Friday.

New Southern Offices

The Southern Film Exchange will open new offices in Memphis on June 1 under the direction of J. Harry Span. L. J. Shea will continue as salesman for the company in the New Orleans territory.

Rosenthal Is Comptroller

Aaron Rosenthal has been appointed comptroller and auditor for Grand National Studios in Hollywood. He will also audit all west coast transactions of Grand National Films, Inc.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

CODE OF THE RANGE: Charles Starrett, Mary Blake—Although Chas. Starrett is not as popular as some western stars, he has become very popular here. Business satisfactory.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

COUNTERFEIT LADY: Ralph Bellamy, Joan Perry—O. K. little program picture. In one part of the picture the director went to a lot of trouble to show some Coca-Cola advertising. And when Ralph Bellamy brings a Coca-Cola to Joan Perry she catches it by the neck of the bottle so that the audience can't miss seeing what kind of a bottle it is. And, of course, there's no napkin or anything around the bottle. The Coca-Cola company sure got some free advertising out of this. Or maybe I'm wrong. I've been wondering what the Exhibitors that bought Columbia pictures this year will tell the salesman when he comes around trying to sell the new product, and the new Capra's "Lost Horizon" has been withdrawn from my present year contract and now where are the two Capra's that their salesman based his sales talk on last year? —Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

DODGE CITY TRAIL: Charles Starrett, Marian Weldon—Cannot let this one go by without telling you it is a honey; lots better than most westerns and your patrons will like it.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

PAROLE RACKET: Paul Kelly, Rosalind Keith—Well liked by all; a good programer. Running time, 62 mintes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

RACKETEERS IN EXILE: George Bancroft, Evelyn Venable—This picture is built around evangelism as a racket. It is an open question if it would not be objectionable to some of the patrons, and I think that it was. The picture holds interest, but I am still doubting if it was wise to run it. Then I think that the public are going thumbs down on the gangster and racketeer pictures for it did not do business at all. No dice as far as a take was concerned.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

STAMPEDE: Charles Starrett, Finis Barton—The Peter B. Kyne series from Columbia with Chas Starrett are just fair western pictures. They do not seem to be able to arouse any keen interest from our patrons. I, therefore, class them as just fair westerns. Running time, 54 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

WOMAN IN DISTRESS: May Robson, Irene Hervey, Dean Jagger—A very entertaining and fast moving picture that rounded out our program very well. Action, comedy and romance with May Robson in the top role makes this production suitable for almost any theatre. Running time, 65 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

First National

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1937: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—The gold diggers, lack of gold for the exhibitor. I believe the public in general are not fond of Joan Blondell.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ONCE A DOCTOR: Donald Woods, Jean Muir—Dandy programer. Jean Muir has sure changed and, while we are not entirely certain, we believe it to be for the better. We used to like her because she was so different. This was a grand story. Running time, 65 minutes. Played April 28-29.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GB Pictures

EVERYTHING IS THUNDER: Constance Bennett, Douglass Montgomery—A good picture and is one British picture that took. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 21.—Jno. S. Erickson, Roxy Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

WEEK-END MILLIONAIRE: Buddy Rogers, Mary Brian—Just another programer, nothing for or against it. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 30-May 1.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

Grand National

NAVY SPY: Conrad Nagel, Eleanor Hunt—Fairly good picture for a double bill. Nagel never played his part better. Played May 8-9.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. General patronage.

WE'RE IN THE LEGION NOW: Reginald Denny, Esther Ralston— A big disappointment, good photography but very poor sound. Running time, 55½ minutes. Played May 8-9.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BORN TO DANCE: Eleanor Powell, James Stewart —Excellent production from my own viewpoint. However, we played it so late that most of our customers had seen it somewhere else. Played April 15-17.—Gene Maxwell, Colonial Theatre, Grandview, Wash. Small town patronage.

DEVIL IS A SISSY, THE: Freddie Batholomew, Jackie Cooper, Mickey Rooney—A fine show for any day in the week, much better than the average. It built up the second day. Running time, 92 minutes. Played April 30-May 1.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

FURY: Spencer Tracy, Sylvia Sidney—Here is a good picture; good story and a dandy cast. Tracy sure took the high points on this one and it keeps you guessing till the very end. Running time, nine reels. Played May 7-8.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer—We waited a long time to present this to our patrons at our regular admission prices. With a total of four performances on a three-day run, this pulled nicely, but not to the phenomenal business Metro's exploitation would have you believe, could be expected. Pleased generally, and held the interest through the three-hour performance. Running time, 180 minutes. Played May 2-4.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

KELLY THE SECOND: Patsy Kelly, Pert Kelton, Charley Chase—Well received. A fair program picture suitable for a double bill. Audience reaction very favorable.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LOVE ON THE RUN: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable —Played on Mother's Day to better than average business and it pleased 100 per cent. There isn't much to the story but the cast is the best ever which makes up for a rather light story. Played May 9-10. —C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

MAMA STEPS OUT: Guy Kibbee, Alice Brady—Terrible! Such silly tripe! Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 5-6.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Spring, Neb. Small town patronage.

MAMA STEPS OUT: Guy Kibbee, Alice Brady—Entertaining programer for all. Running time, 69 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

MAYTIME: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, John Barrymore—Class all the way. The "Maytime" score always one of most pleasing of the light operas and it was at its best in this picture, with the superb voices of both stars. I was disappointed in the business done; the picture should break records because of its quality but it did just a little better than average business. No fault of the picture; it ranks with the best. I would not want to miss running it regardless of business done. Call it a prestige picture, it's all of that.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

OUR RELATIONS: Laurel and Hardy — This seemed to take well with those who like that type of comedy, and many of our patrons do like Laurel and Hardy.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

SPEED: James Stewart, Wendy Barrie—A very good program picture. Very good race and the run against the time record was a sensation. Oh boy, what action and thrills. Give us more like this one but change the story. Pictures like this should always please. Running time, seven reels. Played April 30-May 1.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

TARZAN ESCAPES: Johnny Weismuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—Good for country audiences and kiddies; poor otherwise. Played April 22-24.—Gene Maxwell, Colonial Theatre, Grandview, Wash. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BULLDOG DRUMMOND ESCAPES: Ray Milland, Heather Angel—A dandy thriller, well played by an excellent cast. We regret very much the passing of that grand old man, Sir Guy Standing. Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 7-8.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CHAMPAGNE WALTZ: Gladys Swarthout, Fred MacMurray—Good picture, good names, poor draw. Swarthout not a draw here. Played April 8-10.—Gene Maxwell, Colonial Theatre, Grandview, Wash. Small town patronage.

DOCTOR'S DIARY, A: George Bancroft, John Trent, Helen Burgess—A program picture, far above the average, that pleased our patrons enough so that they commented on it. Nice work on the part of the principal characters, with interest shown in the newcomer, John Trent. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 5-6.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

HIDEAWAY GIRL: Martha Raye, Robert Cummings, Shirley Ross—A fairly good program picture that seemed to get by without any serious complaints. Picture was very slow in spots and direction was not of the first grade. Martha Raye, who at times became monotonous, was the big name in this picture. Running time, 79 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

HILLS OF OLD WYOMING: William Boyd—Good western; liked by all. Running time, 75 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

HOPALONG CASSIDY RETURNS: William Boyd, Evelyn Brent—These Cassidy series are quite popular with us. The sound and the prints have been above average. Business extra good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOPALONG CASSIDY RETURNS: William Boyd, Evelyn Brent—Good western. Lots of action. Good business for Friday Saturday ending.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

JOHN MEADE'S WOMAN: Edward Arnold, Francine Larrimore—Poor; not a small town picture. Gave our cashier a good rest on this one. Played April 29-May 1. Gene Maxwell, Colonial Theatre, Grandview, Wash. Small town patronage.

KING OF GAMBLERS: Lloyd Nolan, Claire Trevor —Excellent entertainment in any spot. Well liked by all. Running time, 75 minutes.—W. E. McPhee. Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

MAID OF SALEM: Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray—That star combination always assurces a swell picture and is entitled to a big attendance. But certainly we did not get it. Way below average even though it was a picture our entire town should have seen. Running time, 85 minutes. Played May 2-3.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS: Charles Ruggles, Alice Brady—Nice program picture. Running time, 75 minutes. Played April 30-May 1.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MOON'S OUR HOME, THE: Margaret Sullavan, Henry Fonda—Here is a fine picture that kept our crowd laughing. The dog from Faith, S. Dak. is in this picture, although he is not a drawing card everywhere, we can always find it a help to mention the matter in our advertising. Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

TURN OFF THE MOON: Charlie Ruggles, Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs—Picture drew good, has good cast. Played it hot, but did quite a little advertising, so our patrons were made conscious of picture. Well acted and has plenty of humor, songs, dancing and good music. People ate up Phil Harris's singing; he's good. It's the type of picture that appeals to all. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 16-17.—A. E. Eliosen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Shirley Ross, Martha Raye, Bob Burns—Another picture that puts Paramount way out in front for 1937. At last they have a playmate for "Bing" that fits right into the picture. That girl, Shirley Ross, is good and you will like her. Bob Burns and Martha Raye are more popular with each new picture and they must be cast in same pictures from now on. Business way above average for 4 days.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

WEDDING PRESENT: Joan Bennett, Cary Grant—Just a fair picture that seemed to miss fire. I would class the direction as very poor. For with the good cast and dialogue, this picture could have been made more appealing. No complaints and no compliments. Speaking in the baseball vernacular: no runs, no hits, no errors. Running time, 77 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

Republic

FOLLOW YOUR HEART: Marion Talley, Michael Bartlett, Luis Alberni—Here is a picture that was terrifically slow in getting started, but finished very well. The last reel of this production was superb, but little can be said of the rest. Marion Talley was a complete flop with our patrons and the only redeeming feature of the cast was Michael Bartlett and Luis Alberni. If the tempo, direction and musical settings of the last reels had been kept throughout this picture, Republic surely would have had an outstanding production. Running time, 79 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

LARCENY ON THE AIR: Robert Livingston, Grace Bradley—A fair program picture that can be used as a filler in. There is some action and Robt. Livingston seems to be a very capable actor. Running time, 60 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

RKO Radio

CRIMINAL LAWYER: Lee Tracy, Margot Graham—Played this one because the title is good and Lee Tracy used to mean something at the box-office. I doubled this one with "On the Avenue" so business was pretty fair, anyway.—Oscar A. Brotman, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

QUALITY STREET: Katharine Hepburn, Franchot Tone—Although this is a costume play and the locale English the picture held interest and pleased. No particular draw. Played May 12-13.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SOLDIER AND THE LADY, THE: Anton Walbrook, Elizabeth Allan, Akim Tamiroff, Margot Grahame—"Michael Strogoff" retitled and remade. Russian, as the title depicts, and well produced. Evidently costly to produce, and as with a lot of these big specials, they do just program business. A little discouraging that the public does not support them better.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TOO MANY WIVES: Anne Shirley, John Morley—Very, very poor; all dialogue and that not clever; it wanders around in a circle and never arrives. Waste of film.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

THAT GIRL FROM PARIS: Jack Oakie, Lily Pons, Gene Raymond—Gave this a Sunday date and took it on the nose. Fair picture but no drawing power.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

WOMAN I LOVE, THE: Paul Muni, Miriam Hopkins—Too much war material. Personally, we like the picture. Some compliments, but no box office appeal. Lost money. Too bad to put these stars in this kind of a story. Running time, 88 minutes. Played May 14-16.—J. C. Green, Sun Theatre, Sargent, Neb. Small town patronage.

SERVICE

MAY 1st witnessed the closing date of our 1936-37 Movie Season and, as is our usual custom, we have written to all movie distributors from whom we secured pictures and extended to them our thanks and appreciation for their cooperation throughout the season.

¶ We feel it our duty, also, to thank the MOTION PICTURE HERALD, through you, for taking the guess work out of our programs. The comprehensive reports, the critical reviews and last, but not least, the expressions of opinion of other theatre owners throughout the United States as compiled in "What the Picture Did for Me"—all helped to make our 1936-37 movie season a banner one.

¶ We have especially appreciated the reviews on short subjects and can truthfully say that 90% of our shorts were selected through your reviews. This proved an invaluable aid to us and one that we appreciate a thousandfold. So many programs can be spoiled by poor short subjects and, then again, many a poor feature can be made passable by the proper selection of a supporting program.

Twentieth Century-Fox

LADIES IN LOVE: Janet Gaynor, Loretta Young, Constance Bennett, Simone Simon—Not much to this one. Three good stars wasted on a slow drawn out affair that don't even bring out a laugh or a cry. Don't promise your customers too much. Play it off in your poorest night and you won't hear much criticism. Running time, 10 reels. Played May 2-3.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

LOVE IS NEWS: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Don Ameche—Not the pull it should have been, but pleased those who did attend. Fast-moving, filled with laugh-getting situations, this is without a doubt one of the season's best comedies. Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 9-11.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

NANCY STEELE IS MISSING: Victor McLaglen, Walter Connolly, Peter Lorre, June Lang—No particular pulling power, but in this situation, seemed to please quite well. It's straight drama that holds the interest, though the audience is in on the know all the time and are never surprised at the story development. Running time, 84 minutes. Played May 7-8.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

ONE IN A MILLION: Sonja Henie, Adolphe Menjou, Don Ameche—Can only add to the good reports already made by other exhibitors. Played May 16-17.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND, THE: Warner Baxter, Gloria Stuart—The story of a country doctor who unknowingly gave aid to John Wilkes Booth following the assassination of President Lincoln. Convicted as one of the conspirators, he was sentenced to life imprisonment in the Federal prison on Shark Island; his life on the island and eventual pardon make an interesting but rather gruesome story. Running time, 90 minutes. Played May 7-8.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

SEVENTH HEAVEN: Simone Simon, James Stewart—A very good production of this remade picture that was produced in the silent days. Stewart as Chico great, and Simone Simon more favorably received in this one, as the role fitted her and she is more easily understood. Evidently she has mastered the English language better than she had in her previous pictures.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

THAT I MAY LIVE: Rochelle Hudson, Robert Kent, J. Edward Bromberg—Pretty good program picture with the young people ably supported by Bromberg. Title kills any chance for business. Played May 14-15.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

TIME OUT FOR ROMANCE: Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen—Good picture, logical story and Claire Trevor very good in this role. Smart dialogue and some action. Liked by the audience; that is all that matters.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WAKE UP AND LIVE: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie and Orchestra, Alice Faye, Patsy Kelly—Box office smash in any spot. Running time, 91 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

WINGS OF THE MORNING: Annabella, Henry Fonda—(Reporting first on "King and the Chorus Girl," with Fernand Gravet and Joan Blondell). Another French menace that is going to be heard from later, Gravet. Plenty good. The picture is clever and a smooth comedy and Blondell is at her best, as also were the others of the cast. The other French menace, I think, is the girl Annabella, that made such a hit in "Wings of the Morning," (English production.) When an English made picture can go over in this house, you know that the star has to be good.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

United Artists

GARDEN OF ALLAH, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Charles Boyer—A very spendid story aided by beautiful color but having very little drawing power. Patrons seemed to be pretty much divided; some saying that it was the worst picture they had seen and some praising it very highly. Running time, 77 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

GARDEN OF ALLAH, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Charles Boyer—All in technicolor and a very artistic production. It failed to please the cash customer and the second night's business was away off. Running time, 78 minutes. Played May 2-3.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

LAST OF THE MOHICANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes, Henry Wilcoxon—This was a fine picture that drew well in spite of the numerous school gatherings connected with graduation. While it does not follow the book exactly, it is entertainment for all, and even the most critical could not find fault with its historical correctness, and literary value.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

Universal

FOR THE SERVICE: Buck Jones, Beth Marion—Good western story somewhat better recording than I usually get from Buck. Well, we pleased plenty of kiddies on a Bargain Night. Running time, seven reels. Played May 5.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MAGNIFICENT BRUTE, THE: Victor McLaglen, Binnie Barnes—Very good. Played to a midnite show before the coronation. Failed to make film rental. Worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MY MAN GODFREY: William Powell, Carole Lombard—A real good picture but did not draw. Made a mistake in not double billing it. Powell and Lombard will not bring out the action fans. Played April 23-24.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RIDE 'EM COWBOY: Buck Jones—Somewhat different than most westerns, it produced many a laugh and chuckle amongst the audience. This, in a picture, produces results in coming pictures of the same star. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 30-May 1.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RIDE 'EM COWBOY: Buck Jones—This is an extra good Buck Jones picture, and although it has a very cowboyish title, we found that those who do not always care for the ordinary western, were enthusiastic about the new slants taken in this picture.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

TOP OF THE TOWN: Doris Nolan, George Murphy—Top billing should go to this Murphy boy. He ranks with the best star material today. Doris Nolan should never been called a star until she earned that rank and I say she made a great mistake in letting herself be billed as a star until she had arrived. The picture is positively a riot, and the customer goes out of the theatre after seeing it, so confused that he is unable to tell you what it is all about. For your comparison, brother exhib, "Waikiki Wedding" did double the business in my house.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Warner Bros.

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland, Claude Rains—I gave them a Mother's Day date, which should bring in the best business of the month, but might better have closed down and gone fishing that day for all the profit there was in running. However, it is a fine picture, if you buy it right.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE WOMAN: George Brent, Beverly Roberts—The best by far of the percentage pictures from Warners this year. Drew exceptionally well and seemed to please everyone. The colored photography was grand. Running time, 85 minutes. Played May 9-10.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GREAT O'MALLEY, THE: Pat O'Brien, Humphrey Bogart, Sybil Jason—One of the nicest program pictures we have had in a long time. O'Brien always gives satisfaction. Why no more pictures in the upper classification for him? Little Sybil Jason is always good, too. Bogart was fine in the small part he had. Miss Sheridan is a swell romantic lead. Running time, 71 minutes. Played May 12-13.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

KING AND THE CHORUS GIRL: Fernand Gravet, Joan Blondell—Another French menace that is going to be heard from later, Gravet. Plenty good. The picture is clever and a smooth comedy, and Blondell is at her best, as also were the others of the cast. The other French menace, I think, is the girl Annabella, that made such a hit in "Wings of the Morning" (English production). When an English made picture can go over in this house, you know that the star has to be good.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Short Features

Celebrity

HUMPTY DUMPTY: Comicolor Cartoons—Up to the average on colored pictures. Running time, 7 minutes.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Columbia

DIZZY DOCTORS: Three Stooges—An hilarious comedy with nonsense as only the Stooges can provide. You can depend upon the 3 Stooges to get the laughs from your audience. Running time, 17 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

GIFTS FROM THE AIR: Color Rhapsodies—A fine colored cartoon about Christmas.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

STAR GAZERS: Columbia Tours—No good for me. Some of it is very fine but my people walked out on it.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

TETCHED IN THE HAID: Barney Google—This series is excellent. Too bad not more of them. We are playing these the second time and the kids stay over the second show to see them again.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Educational

FUN'S FUN: Jefferson Machamer—This and all of this series are refreshingly different from the usual run of comedies. They are real favorites with our patrons. Running time, 18 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MODERN HOME: Tim and Irene—Just one laugh after another and Irene is the kind of comedian that brings out the laughs. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

SCHOOL BIRDS: Terry-Toons—An excellent black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DESERT DEATH: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Good short on Crime Doesn't Pay but it should be booked with a comedy feature which would make it better program setup.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

GLIMPSES OF JAVA AND CEYLON: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Excellent as are all in this series.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PUDGY PICKS A FIGHT: Betty Boop Cartoons—Very good. Pudgy's quite a favorite here. Short's clever. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. E. Eliosen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

FOUR JOIN UP AND TWO RETURN TO FOLD

Four exhibitors joining the circle of reporters to "What the Picture Did for Me" during the fortnight are:

J. C. Green, Sun theatre, Sargent, Neb.

E. E. Harris, Park theatre, Butte, Mont.

A. E. Eliosen, Rialto theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

Gene Maxwell, Colonial theatre, Grandview, Wash.

Prodigal contributors of reports welcomed back to the fold after intervals of inactivity are:

Mary Hayes Davis, Dixie Crystal and LaBelle theatres, Clewiston and LaBelle, Fla.

Theodore J. Friedman, Strand theatre, Suffern, N. Y.

Paramount

BLUE VELVET MUSIC: Mark Warnow and His Orchestra—A very entertaining and peppy musical short that will certainly enhance your program. The only drawback that I can say is that Mark Warnow is not well known in this section. Running time, nine minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

BREEZY RHYTHM: Hal Kemp and Orchestra—A series of acts including the song, "I'm Building Up to an Awful Letdown." Not bad at all.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BRIDAL GRIEF: Superba Comedies—A dandy slapstick comedy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ETIQUETTE: Easy Aces—There are lots better short subjects than these Easy Aces.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

GASOLOONS: Edgar Kennedy Comedies — RKO short subjects have been very poor the last year.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HORSE PLAY: Radio Flash Comedies—This is a good slapstick comedy. Pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 9—Good two reeler. This one is of much interest of politics; war preparation in England is very interesting also. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman — More interesting adventures with the newsreel cameraman. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

ROBBER KITTEN: Silly Symphonies—Well received, as usual.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

COUNTRY COUSIN, THE: Silly Symphonies—Is there no end to the versatility of this Disney fellow? This is one of the finest and funniest cartoons we have ever had the pleasure of offering patrons and comments indicated their complete approval. Running time, 8 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MICKEY'S GRAND OPERA: Mickey Mouse—The hen puts on the grand opera singing, but Mickey Mouse, Pluto and Donald Duck, all contribute a part of the fun. Donald Duck is Romeo, and in a stirring scene, Pluto stirs up the magic hat, which escapes with its rabbits.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

Universal

BARGAIN MATINEE: Mentone Musical Comedies—Except for the finish, this one is very good. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. B. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. General patronage.

BEAUTY SHOPPE: Oswald Cartoons—Better than the usual run of Oswalds and I hope they make more of them with the monkeys in the cast. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

IT'S ON THE RECORD: Mentone Musical Comedies—These Mentones are a bright spot on any program. However, this one is not quite up to the usual standard. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. General patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 16—A good one reeler to make a filler. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

UNPOPULAR MECHANIC, THE: Oswald Cartoons—Good cartoon. The dog as a crooner was a knockout. Running time, 7 minutes.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Vitaphone

BED-TIME VAUDEVILLE: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—Not up to the standard of these vaudeville reels.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

CRADLE OF CIVILIZATION: Colortour Adventure—A very pretty colored travel, spoiled by a poor announcer whom but a few could understand.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

OKAY JOSE: El Brendel—A two reel in color, with lots of music, scene laid in Mexico, plenty of comedy.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

PHANTOM SHIP: Looney Tunes—Cartoon. A big dog and two little dogs discover treasure in the far north, also discover some frozen pirates and have a lot of fun with them.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

5,000 Story Properties In Warners' Library

Company Will Continue Active in Stage Production Field

With the completion of purchases of story material for the 1937-38 season, chosen from the fictional and legitimate theatre fields and from the works of studio contract writers, Warner Brothers Pictures now has a library of 5,000 properties suitable for motion picture treatment, according to Jacob Wilk, story editor at the company's home offices in New York.

"We have, at the present time, the largest library of material from which we can pick our motion pictures in the history of the company," said Mr. Wilk. "It has cost us at least $5,000,000 to build up this library and our job is still not completed. We have finished selecting material for the 1937-38 season and are working on 1938-39 product at this point."

Continuing Stage Production

Warners will continue to remain in the legitimate theatre producing field, Mr. Wilk also said as he pointed out that it was the first motion picture company to become active in Broadway financing on a large scale, starting eight years ago with Al Woods, who produced five plays at a cost of $150,000 to the company. Since that time the company has produced "Fifty-Million Frenchmen," at a cost of $250,000, and in the last three years has been interested in 17 Broadway shows, eight of which it has transferred to the screen.

Warners will be interested in only four future Broadway productions, Mr. Wilk said. He pointed out that at present no so-called "summer" productions are on the calendar. In the fall, along with Gilbert Miller, the company will present two plays now running in London, "George and Margaret" and "Wise Tomorrow." The third, "Her Royal Highness," will signal the return of Ruth Chatterton to the legitimate theatre from Hollywood, where she has been for several seasons. The fourth vehicle, "Old Music," will be opened in London and then brought to New York, probably around the first of the year.

Denies Harm from Hollywood

Despite the charges that the motion picture industry's money was "undermining" the legitimate theatre, Mr. Wilk still feels that no harm has come to Broadway because of Hollywood's interest in its productions. Recently, he took up this argument with Douglas Gilbert, critic of the New York World-Telegram, to whom he wrote, in part:

"There are still many plays produced without any consideration of their cinematic possibilities. There are still producers who play the theatrical productions game by its own rules, taking chances on plays on their legitimate merits and regarding any Hollywood vein of gold that may later be tapped as 'gravy.' This way of producing plays, is, of course, a gamble. It always has been. It was a gamble long before the motion pictures began their portentous flickering. If it is today a bigger gamble than ever, I submit that the blame lies rather with the ever-mounting costs of theatrical production than at any door in Hollywood.

"As for the economic influence of the motion pictures, there have been excellent plays of late years that might never have reached the boards but for the backing of motion picture films.

"The obvious retort to that is, I suppose, that these plays were brought out as mere by-product of the Hollywood factories, preliminary to their incarnation in celluloid.

"But that obvious retort is, in numerous cases of which I know at first hand, inaccurate. I was concerned with the arrangements made for 'Three Men on a Horse,' and I can affirm with a spotless conscious that it was bought and produced on its own merits as a stage play, and that consideration of its possible cinematic merits arose as a later and entirely separate consideration. Those merits proved themselves very handsome in time—as 'gravy.'

Lutherans Name Stump Film Head

Dr. Ralph H. Long, executive director of the National Lutheran Council, an agency for the United Lutheran Church, Norwegian Lutheran Church, Lutheran Augustana Synod, American Lutheran Church, United Danish Ev. Lutheran Church, Lutheran Free Church, announced this week the appointment of Theodore Stump of Absarokee, Montana, as director of motion pictures. The object of this appointment is to investigate the possibilities of publicity through motion pictures, both newsreels and features, and to gather and edit 16mm pictures of Lutheran activities and institutions for showing in various churches. Exceptionally good films will be evaluated for their constituency, which number 5,000,000. For the present, Mr. Stump will remain in Montana, making his headquarters at Livingston.

Roadshowing "Road Back"

R. H. Cochrane, president of Universal Pictures, announced Tuesday that "The Road Back," based on the after-the-war novel of Eric Maria Remarque of the same title, would first be released as a roadshow attraction. The picture was completed this week in Hollywood. James Whale directed.

First of the RKO stage shows to be produced in Cleveland for booking over the company's circuit by Clark Robinson and Chester Hale, opens at the RKO Palace this week. The first unit will be called "Glorified Vanities."

Edward Eschmann, known in distribution circles, has joined the Twentieth Century-Fox sales force in Boston under Edward Callahan.

Assets of Olympia Transferred June 4

The five-year old receivership of Olympia Theatres in Boston will be ended on June 4, the date set by the court for the formal transfer of the company's assets to New England Theatres, headed by Martin Mullin and Samuel Pinanski. New England's bid of $4,000,000 cash for the Olympia assets, consisting of 30 leaseholds and fee properties, was accepted by Olympia creditors and approved by the court several weeks ago.

Meanwhile, in Omaha, suit asking foreclosure on the Paramount theatre there and the appointment of a receiver to operate the property has been filed in the United States district court by attorneys for the Omaha National Bank. The suit is against the A. H. Blank Company, Tri-States Theatre Corporation and Creighton University. Action against the latter two named is only on technical grounds, however.

Governor E. D. Rivers of Georgia this week appointed David Bernstein, vice-president and treasurer of Loew's, a lieutenant-colonel on his staff. Mr. Bernstein is the first non-resident of the state of Georgia to receive such an appointment.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of theatre receipts for the calendar week ended May 22, 1937, from 106 theatres in 18 major cities of the country was $1,123,579, a decrease of $30,907 from the total for the preceding week ended May 15, 1937, when 106 theatres in 18 large cities aggregated $1,154,486.

JAPANESE DISTRIBUTION BATTLE GIVES FOREIGN FILMS ADVANTAGE

Four Companies Withhold Film Supply from Exhibitors Who Use Toho Product; Struggle for Domination of Industry

by H. TOMINAGA
in Tokyo

From the point of view of the exhibitor in Japan, the continuing struggle between the powerful Toho and its opponent distributors is exerting a by no means unmixed influence on the development of the industry in the Empire.

On the favorable side is generally set down an augmented awareness of the importance of modern showmanship methods.

Opposed is a sharp scarcity of product due to the unwillingness of Toho competitors to furnish films to exhibitors using Toho pictures.

Beneficiaries of this shortage are the foreign distributors operating in Japan.

Apart from what it was before advent of the Toho interest, which began embarking upon every field of our motion picture industry in 1934, it is true that we have witnessed since that year a greater activity in every branch of the business. It speaks volumes for the part Toho has taken that people in the film industry have become awake to faults of the old system since Toho and its affiliated concerns, including P. C. L. and J. O. Studio, set an example of corporation management and theatre operation in the up-to-date way.

Toho Aggressive

Toho was and is alert, straining every nerve, to make inroads into the territory of other firms in the distribution and exhibition fields, not to speak of trying to leave no stones unturned to produce a sufficient number of pictures to meet the demands of theatres in general. On the other hand, taking advantage of the socalled financial crisis which Nikkatsu faced last fall, Shochiku outwitted Toho in bringing Nikkatsu over to its side by relieving the financially distressed, which resulted in the voluntary mediation of President Ohtani of Shochiku, who assumed responsibility for 2,500,000 yen which Nikkatsu had owed to Chiba-Godo Bank.

Since the Japan's film industry may be said to have been divided definitely into two groups, the Toho-P. C. L.-J. O. Studio and the Shochiku-Shinko-Nikkatsu combinations. Particularly since the Shochiku interests organized into a big concern with a consolidated capital of 38,000,000 yen in February this year, there seemed to be a gathering threat to throw Toho and Shochiku companies into conflict on the spur of the moment, and that came about through Toho's employment of leading stars, directors, scenarists and business personnel whose contracts of engagement had expired with Nikkatsu and Shinko companies.

Those stars who have joined the banner of Toho include Joji Oka, Denjiro Ohkohchi, Minoru Takata, Setsuko Hara, Noboru Kiritachi, the former and latter two having been with Nikkatsu, and Takkata with Shinko. In addition, Toho took into its service Y. Inouye, manager of Nikkatsu Osaka Branch, and a few other business associates of Nikkatsu. Hereupon, a strong objection was raised to Toho by four other leading film producing companies, Shochiku, Nikkatsu, Shinko and Daito, which have constituted the Motion Picture Association of Japan and made a mutual agreement not to take any actor, actress, director, etc., from one another.

Seek Toho's Cooperation

The four companies then persuaded the so-called Toho block of producing and distributing units, including Toho, P.C.L. and J.O. Studio, to join the Association, with the idea of thereby preventing themselves from being deprived of their money-making stars and other technical and business aides. Indeed, thus situated, the purpose of the Association's agreement seemed to have been achieved, but the absorption of Daiichi Eiga, Bantsuma, Chiyezo, and Takata Productions into Toho film block proved that the personnel of each associated studio had undergone such great changes that the agreement worked to little effect. Accordingly, the four companies attached great importance to the attitude of Toho in deciding whether to heed their persuasion or not. Written advices covering the persuasion was given to Toho by the associated four units, requesting an answer by March 13, but Toho is reported to have shown no readiness to accept the bid.

Toho Is Silent

No answer was made to the Association by Toho and the result was that the four companies gave Toho further notice that they had concluded Toho was without intention to join the Association or to approve its agreement covering prohibition of the "stealing" of players and directors from other companies. No sooner did the four firms dispatch to Toho their second notice than they called their executives for a conference at which they arrived at a decision based on their preconcerted agreement.

The decision provides that, effective April 1, the four companies will distribute no product of their own to those 2,000 cinemas in which their pictures have been distributed, in case such theatres have played the pictures shown at theatres of the Toho circuit. In other words, the four companies, according to their joint notices dispatched March 15 to all houses belonging to their respective circuits, declared decidedly to open hostilities against Toho by enlisting the all-round support of such theatres. The following excerpt is from the four companies' notices to various houses of the country:

> "We, the below-given four companies, have decided not to distribute our pictures for simultaneous playing with pictures which were shown at houses of Toho, P. C. L. and J. O. circuits. . . . Although we urged Toho and its affiliated firms several times to join the Motion Picture Association of Japan to approve its agreement, they have, to our great regret, shown no inclination to act in concert with us. . . . We, the four companies, therefore, have been obliged to allow no pictures of ours to be shown together with pictures played at those theatres of the socalled Toho circuit until the time when Toho reflects upon the importance of maintaining peace in the film industry. . . . If, therefore, this notice may not have your approval, we shall have to cease distributing to you the pictures of us, four companies. . . ."

Thus the hostilities, which opened between our two film blocks, brought the exhibitors into the fight which probably will be the most furious ever waged in our motion picture industry.

Exhibitors Take Neutral Stand in Conflict; Ignore Notices Received; Rely Upon Foreign Sources for Program Material

Once this fight was reported, our film journalism began to center its force of argument on this subject, further confusing exhibitors. Meantime, the four companies go on accentuating their readiness to stop distribution of their pictures to any theatre which plays the pictures distributed by Toho. On the other hand, Toho appears to ignore what has been done by the four companies, intent on assuming the aggressive, expecting that in due course, they will, after all, attain their long cherished ambition to control a greater number of theatres

At first, when the hostilities were opened between the two blocks, Toho, keeping pace with P.C.L. and J.O. Studio, began a furious canvass to project itself into various situations throughout the country, while executives of the four companies, trying to constrain those theatres to comply with its original persuasion, have met often to confer on strategy whereby they might shut out Toho, P.C.L. and J.O. pictures from the theatres of Shochiku, Nikkatsu, Shinko and Daito circuits.

Product Is Needed

Meantime, the exhibitors playing pictures of those four companies were greatly upset and have since been embarrassed in their arrangement of programs on account of product shortage. Suspended of the actual distribution of pictures by the four companies, some were immediately thrown into extreme difficulties, while others have chosen to sue for breach of contracts against such distributors. Taking advantage of this complication between the two distributing groups at feud, other exhibitors swung at once to the side of Toho, which is reported to have strenuously manoeuvred them into joining its banner, as Toho so far has not been able to exercise full control over local houses as compared with Shochiku and its associates, apart from the key centres where Toho's network of first-run houses is gaining ground.

During this time, it has been reported that other Japanese distributors of lesser category, such as Jenshu, Makino and Kyokuto, would take the side of Toho to help it produce greater amount of pictures for supply to exhibitors in distress, whereas at present they take a neutral position, in common with a majority of exhibitors who have had little interest in the notices which they received from the four companies.

One consequence of this situation is that, due to this strife, foreign film distributors in this country have been given a chance to get lion's share of the business, as the exhibitors have come naturally to buy foreign pictures, instead of the domestic product, that they might be able to survive the situation.

Ives Enters Exhibition

Herbert Ives, partner for many years in Monarch Pictures, independent exchange in Detroit, has resigned from the company to open the 350-seat Rialto theatre which was formerly operated by Herman Bird as the State, at Tawas City, Mich. Ann O'Donnell thus becomes sole owner of Monarch with the change, and plans to enlarge the staff.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

MANAGERS AND BOSSES

There are few problems between the theatreman and his superiors that cannot be solved where there exists an amity, a mutual respect and consideration for the other man's side of the question. And this was brought forcefully to mind during the short visits made by your Chairman in various spots on the return trip from Hollywood to New York. It may have been that we just happened upon situations where such good feeling is apparent but the relationships between representative managers and bosses in San Francisco, Salt Lake and Chicago are something to point to.

It's not a feeling that one can place a finger upon but one senses immediately. The managers expressed themselves freely on the virtues of their superiors and the headmen were no less hesitant about the general savvy and soundness of their boys. There was an easy socializing that seemed to be taken for granted, all of which summed up means healthier grosses and contented workers.

That today the able manager looms even more importantly in the scheme of things is not to be denied. Wise is the exhibitor who realizes it and wiser still is the superior who goes about insuring the loyalty and support of this valued employee in these uneasy times.

IN LINE WITH POLICY

Promotions are always an occasion for celebration and congratulations are therefore in order to Warnerites Bill Hendricks and Mort Goodman, transferred to California; to Eddie Lewis, from manager to supervisor with Prudential Playhouses, and to F. H. Kershaw, Famous Players-Canadian supervisor to a larger district, the latter "in line with the company policy of promotion from within the ranks," writes headman J. J. Fitzgibbons.

Nothing can do a more effective job of wrecking personnel morale in any organization than the assignment of an outsider to an important post that should go to a man in the ranks who has proven his ability to do a bigger job. It is a fine thing to know that the companies represented by the above theatremen avoid any such damaging error in the selection of manpower to fill more responsible positions.

GRACIOUSNESS PAYS DIVIDENDS

Ask any air-traveler, first tripper or regular, what most impresses him in the conduct of the airlines personnel and the answer almost invariably is the graciousness displayed in the handling of passengers. No matter how trying the situation in customer-contacts whether it be working out intricate schedules or assuring personal comfort of the patron the airlines people seem to come up with the right answer.

The recent coast-to-coast round trip made by the Quigley Awards party via United Airlines is not only set down as an excellent example of these services but referred for the information of theatremen also concerned and vitally with satisfying the comfort and convenience of the public.

True, folks go to theatres to be entertained and this is the prime consideration. But no matter how big the show the patron cannot be said to have enjoyed the fullest measure of entertainment unless the theatre personnel exerts every reasonable effort to convey that he is an honored and highly valued guest.

The airlines make of these chores a gracious and profitable operation. There is no reason why every theatreman cannot do likewise.

"IT'S GREAT TO HAVE SEEN YOU"

Having little opportunity to get out among the members it was doubly enjoyable to stop off here and there to meet up with the boys on our recent journey to the coast. To describe the meetings with the theatremen in various spots would take too long but your Chairman returned with the keys-to-city and a heartfelt appreciation of the welcomes extended.

Our thanks therefore to Lloyd Dearth, Spyros Cardas, Tom Soriero, W. C. Ricord, Jr., Bill Hendricks and others in Los Angeles; to Arch Bowles, Herman Cohen, Cliff Work, Allan Warshauer, Charley Schlaifer, Herman Kersken, Phil Phillips, Arvid Erickson and Charley Thall, in San Francisco; Harry David, Ray Hendry, Nevin McCord, Charley Pincus, Holden Sweigart, E. Claire Woods and Chester Price, in Salt Lake City and last but no means the least, Alex Manta and Jack Rose, in Chicago.

It's sure great to have seen you.

Talent Night Inaugurated By Bannan at Theatre

Each Wednesday night during the past month, George Bannan, Edwards Theatre, East Hampton, L. I. inaugurated what he called his "amateur talent night," consisting of volunteer entertainment from East Hampton and all points on eastern Long Island. Methods of presenting these nights was in the form of a radio hour with a regular sponsor one of the town's leading merchants.

Each week some special sale or institutional advertising was used to aid the sponsor and the talent night was broadcast over public address system from stage with George acting as master of ceremonies. At the end of the five week period, there were ten winners, two selected each night and these performed for a promoted main prize with lesser awards going to runnersup.

Newspapers carried publicity stories, merchants plugged night in all their advertising, and theatre made stage announcements together with running trailer.

Enlarges Theatre News And Wins Warner Award

So successful has been Frank Shaffer's "Movie Chatter" sheet gotten out for the Virginia Theatre, Harrisonburg, Va., that he has recently enlarged it from a four to five-column spread. With a 2,000 printing, 500 of which are mailed out, Frank says merchants' ads pay entire cost, and he has succeeded in publishing it monthly for over a year, securing ads on a six-months' contract.

In the recent best exploitation award offered by Warners in the Virginia District, Shaffer's Theatre came through as one of the winners.

La Falce Installs Critics Quiz Contest

To arouse the newspaper writers' interest and gain extra publicity for the engagement of "Wings of the Morning" at the Earle Theatre, Warner's Washington zone publicist, Frank LaFalce, has worked out a "critics' quiz."

Each day for nine days a different "clue picture" was mailed to each of the Washington dramatic editors. On the tenth day the list of correct titles for the nine pictures were mailed. Under each picture an extra clue was presented in the form of a rave notice from one of the trade papers. Three of the "clue pictures" plugged the title, while others represented the cast, Earle playdates, etc.

The current popularity of similar contests made this an ideal time for LaFalce to inaugurate his stunt in Washington, and critics were given prizes automatically. The results of the entire contest were exactly what Frank had hoped for; increased critical interest in the film and much extra space for the production. A similar "quiz" could be worked out on any picture.

Department Store Tieup Plugs "Prince and Pauper"

Ed Miller, manager Hippodrome Theatre, Cleveland, recently arranged a most effective tieup for "The Prince and the Pauper" with the theatre tying up with Bailey's department store for displays and ads plugging the picture. Emphasis was placed on the film's Coronation scenes to tie in with the actual English coronation.

One week in advance of playdates the five best windows in the store were decorated with props used in the production (see photo), appropriate copy plugged the playdate at the theatre. In all ads placed by the department store in local newspapers Coronation scenes from the picture were used, in addition to copy plugging the picture.

The department store, which was celebrating its 35th anniversary at the same time, plugged the feature in a full page ad which was included in a special edition of the Cleveland News. Two hundred and fifty thousand homes received sales circulars which carried copy featuring the film's engagement at the Hippodrome and numerous stories and pictures appeared in local paper.

Full Page Co-op Ad Tops "Star" Drive

Fourteen large co-op ads, including one full page were obtained by Joe Di Pesa, publicity director of Loew's State and Orpheum, Boston, for "A Star Is Born." In addition, one half-million pieces of selling copy were distributed, fifteen of the most prominent windows were turned over to the picture and 126 vehicles carrying 24-sheets and other copy covered the streets.

Di Pesa secured editorial space in both the Traveler and the Record immediately after the first showing. A double truck with scene cuts broke in the Record in advance. The Globe devoted considerable space to a photo feature of Gaynor and March. The Post ran a special cut and Technicolor story on its news pages, while the American concentrated upon a make-up feature of Gaynor on the Women's page. The Sunday Advertiser used a by-line feature with local theatre credit.

Radio likewise used the "Man-on-the-Street" broadcasts, commentator plugs, spot and sustaining announcements.

Department store, which took the full page ad, covered Greater Boston with 400,000 reproductions of the page ad as part of its annual sales drive.

Portable Signposts Bally "Old Soak" for Pollock

Gag street bally was used by Les Pollock, Loew's Rochester, Rochester, N. Y. for "Good Old Soak" (see photo) with two men dressed in tuxedos and high silk hats carrying their own bannered lightweight lampposts. Boys marched through the streets, set the posts down at busy downtown sections and leaned against them. Les reports the stunt as being one of the best crowd-stoppers he has used in some time, and an inexpensive gag that he recommends to other managers for use on forthcoming attractions.

Les recently cracked the Rochester Evening Journal with a caricature photo of himself standing with an SRO sign in hand which was used by columnist in a "What Kind of Fellow Is . . .?" series running currently. Beneath photo was brief biog of the popular manager with present theatre location getting a plug.

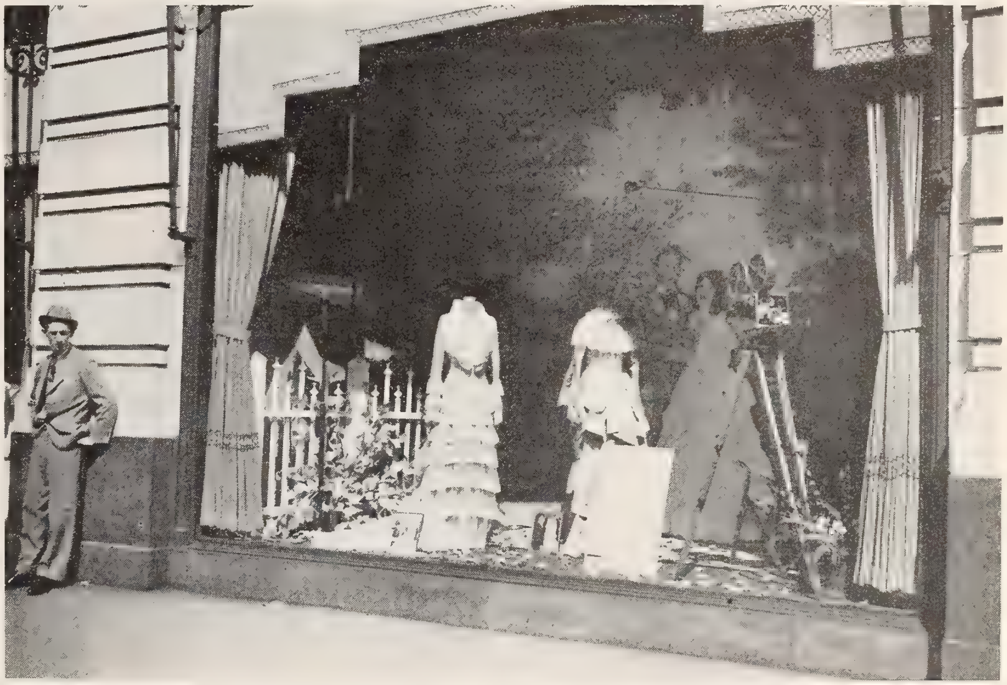
Feldman's Studio Shot Depicted in Chicago Department Store Window



For date on "Maytime" at the United Artists Theatre, Chicago, manager B. W. Feldman promoted window display in leading department store showing original costumes worn by the songstress. Back of these was a studio scene depicting Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy under the lights and microphones during one of the romantic moments of the play. Feldman borrowed a DeVry sound recording camera to add reality to the scene.

Various Stunts Used On "Light" by Donnell

Starting two weeks in advance of "Green Light" playdate, S. T. Donnell, Leroy Theatre, Lampasas, Texas, placed tire covers on cabs with copy reading "Don't be a road hog, I'm on my way to see," etc. Sidewalks were stenciled with green paint and local ballroom tied in on a "green light dance contest" with tickets going to winners.

Week ahead James Gamel, assistant manager, painted his hands and face a bright green, wore a wig of green hair and called on all business houses distributing cards on which were printed "I've worried myself green, because I don't know how we are going to accommodate all the people," etc. Stunt is reported to have created plenty of comment. Donnell also distributed green paper napkins with picture imprint in gold on corner and directional arrows were tacked on telegraph poles.

Winchell Wires Risley

Nice break was landed by Walter Risley, Rochester, N. Y. when the Sunday American printed facsimile of a gag telegram received by him from Walter Winchell on the opening of "Wake Up and Live" at the RKO Palace. Paper planted wire directly above columnist's weekly gossip news.

Merchant Aids Lamm On "Swing High"

Louie Lamm, Palace Theatre, Lorain, Ohio, effected a neat tieup for "Swing High, Swing Low" with local furniture dealer who took half page ad in paper with cut of Lombard and MacMurray on swing. Accompanying photo shows window display with cutout heads of the stars.

A monthly entertainment and shopping guide is distributed monthly by Louie, entire cost of which is paid for by merchants' ads. Guide is printed on heavy pink stock and measures approximately 11 inches wide by 9 deep.

Street Reporter Sells "Miracles" for Huffman

Special interviews by street newspaper reporter on "What would you do if you could work miracles?" brought R. W. Huffman, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo., plenty of publicity for his "Man Who Could Work Miracles" engagement at that house. Street parade was held and accompanying photo shows Huffman standing at truck.

Linoleum pads with title were placed in lobby, ushers wore imprinted sashes and downtown merchants cooperated with "miracle value days." Upside-down ads were run in newspaper as part of Huffman's teaser campaign, illuminated eight-foot shadow-box was constructed for lobby and various displays planted in windows.

Johnson Publishes Paper For Picture Plugs

Having no newspaper within a radius of fifty miles, Bill Johnson, Opera House, Millinocket, Maine, had to create his own medium for carrying advertising and thus started the "Opera House News" which contains not only theatre publicity and enough paid advertising to support it, but such local news as he encounters during the week. Paper is free and thus has an all inclusive circulation.

To plug "Waikiki Wedding," Johnson's ad was written in Bob Burns style with thumb nail of the star. In conversational manner ad talked about the picture and carried recommendation from Burns that the picture not be missed.

Scouts Aid Williams On "Plainsman" Date

Through cooperation of Capt. Carlos Freddi, National Director of the United Indian Tribes of America, theatre was furnished with an authentic Indian exhibit on the mezzanine. Six Indian boys in full regalia were in attendance and one-sheet at entrance announcing the exhibit was guarded by two Indians.

Boy Scout demonstration was given twice daily one week ahead of opening, library branch permitted the placing of study charts on bulletin board, as did public and parochial schools and parade of scouts and Indians was held opening day.

Speece's Newspaper Campaign Publicizes "History at Night"

R. C. Speece plastered "History Is Made at Night" over newspapers well in advance of the opening at Loew's Broad, Columbus. Two and three-column art and feature stories were bolstered by a special 40,000-word serialization in the Ohio State Journal and a four-day classified ad contest in the same sheet.

Department store went for gags such as distributing shopping bags with copy, "Those holding winning numbers will receive guest tickets for 'History.'" Another held a "History Is Made at Night" sale. The Pure Oil Company gave prominent space in all their stations to half-sheet cards imprinted with suitable copy.

Radio plugged the picture through transcriptions and spot announcements. Hotels, restaurants and specialty shops used window displays and special stills and Speece covered the downtown area with throwaways and one-sheets.

School Poster Contest Plugs "Plainsman"

Three weeks ahead of his "Plainsman" date at the Grove Theatre, Chicago, Marlowe Connor planted a poster contest in all the art classes of local high school. Notices were placed on bulletin boards and several of the educational exhibit panels were on display in the theatres. Coloring contest was also held for kids with ducats going to those submitting neatest entries.

Attractive lobby display was provided with borrowed Indian material obtained from local dealer, with guns, rifles, etc., of same type used in picture promoted from gun collector. Ticket taker was dressed as Plainsman and rest of staff as Indians. Accompanying photo shows sound truck with lads in costume, and for newspapers promoted a "Plainsman" co-op page.

Publicity Breaks Help McCarthy on "History"

Manager McCarthy concentrated the efforts of his staff at the Strand Theatre, Hartford, Conn., on publicity breaks for his campaign on "History Is Made at Night." More than a week in advance, a four-column spread appeared in the Times followed by an art layout and feature in the Courant on successive days. From then on fashion art and comment on Jean Arthur vied with production stories and biographical material on Boyer.

Augmenting this publicity, McCarthy arranged a number of outstanding cooperative ads with leading dealers. Beauty shops, shoe merchants, haberdashery stores and others gave the picture prominent mention in newspaper space and also devoted important windows and counters to the stars and the film. The special trancription was broadcast over WTHT night prior to opening.

Newspaper Plug Landed On "Girls" by Borenstein

Tieup was effected with local chain baker, whereby 4,000 miniature Durbin photos were distributed in their branches, counter cards used, with a featured cake named for the star.

"Top of the Town" Banner

A plane towing a banner advertising "Top of the Town" to Buffalo's upturned faces was hired by Manager George Mackenna and Publicity Manager Dick Walsh of the New Lafayette Theatre. The boys put up a sparkling display front for the theatre (see photo), adapted from the 24-sheet, with gay figures cavorting over the title. Cashing in on the full-page ad on "Top of the Town" appearing in the Saturday Evening Post, they had all the trucks of periodical company bannered with colorful announcements of the ad.

New Store Front Publicizes "Star Is Born" for Gilman

Sam Gilman, Loew's, Harrisburg, Pa., took advantage of a new store front being built next to the theatre, by bannering the barricade (see photo) with copy "A new store is being born—see 'A Star Is Born' at," etc., etc.

For street stunt, Gilman's staff built their own telescope, which was planted in front of theatre on a platform. Looking through telescope passersby saw a colored photograph of Janet Gaynor with playdates.

McCrea Double Sells "Woman Chases Man"

Frank Hensen of Loew's Broad, Columbus, Ohio, had the women in the city agog with his "Woman Chases Man" search. The Ohio State Journal devoted 30,000 lines of publicity to the stunt, which ran for four days before the opening. It was announced that an unidentified man resembling Joel McCrea would walk through the main business section at a certain time each day. The first woman to recognize him was given a cash prize of $25. Each day he went unrecognized the prize was increased. The man was not put on the street until the fourth day, when the award reached $100. With the paper giving front page space to the gag for several days in advance, traffic was stopped along his route. All papers and radio stations went for the stunt in a big way.

Hensen blanketed the town with 24-sheets and throwaways and cashed in heavily on the national ad campaign with extra breaks in the press.

CAMPAIGN HIGHLIGHTS OF ENTRIES VOTED "FIRSTS" IN APRIL AWARDS

Tremendous Newspaper Breaks on "Show Boat's" 50th Week Secured by Mgr. Dave Martin Out in Sydney, Australia

Fifty weeks is a long time to keep the public's attention and interest in a picture, but that's the problem which confronted Dave Martin for the "Show Boat" engagement at the Liberty Theatre, Sydney, Australia, and following are listed some of the stunts he engineered to put the engagement over.

The advertising campaign embraced a huge direct mailing; city blanketing of 24-sheet posters; distribution of 300,000 sixteen-page rotogravure booklets to every home in the metropolitan area of Sydney, stickers in all street cars and two special nation-wide state-wide broadcasts of excerpts of the film. Tieups were effected with peace societies, banks, ballet enthusiasts, railways and airways. As a goodwill promotional gesture disabled soldiers from military hospitals were invited to attend showing, part of the proceeds from the gala premiere were turned over to the Blind Instititution.

Stunting of every kind was indulged in, a decorated street car was sent through all the main city thoroughfares, kites with title in ten-foot letters were flown from bathing beaches and plane with title and theatre on the wings and fuselage flew over city during entire date. One of the broadcasts of "Show Boat" was sponsored by a mattress company who gave a valuable prize for the best letter written on "Why 'Show Boat' is proving so popular." Intermittently throughout the run, radio sessions were devoted to the presentation of hit tunes and talks on the production and stars.

Tinted photos of Irene Dunne were distributed, gala two-color souvenir programs were printed containing spreads of scene stills, cuts of cast together with biographies on each and words of the more popular songs featured in the production.

Billboards formed no little part of the campaign and accompanying photo shows one of the many attractive boards. Note cut-out figures standing at base of each letter and the word "7th" in the star at left. As each month of the engagement ended, new number was inserted. Topping all ads and material, Martin included the words "just keeps rollin' along," as indeed it did.

One of the eye-arresting ads used by this showman was cut of one of the Liberty tickets with copy below reading, "250,000 tickets for 'Show Boat' will be sold at the Liberty tonight. Only a truly great entertainment could command such extraordinary patronage. You should see," etc., etc. Stories together with art work were run of local celebrities who had witnessed the film, were going to see it again and their reasons for their keen enjoyment.

"Romeo" Essay Contest Staged By Crites in Local Schools

Two weeks in advance of opening of "Romeo and Juliet" at the Washita Theatre, Chickasha, Okla., manager Arlie Crites personally contacted superintendants and principals of the larger schools throughout the country advising that special admission prices were available to all students. Study guides were distributed to English instructors and contest blanks were distributed to students, with promoted prizes going to youngsters correctly answering list of question appertaining to the production. Through pre-arrangement, Crites also arranged for the picture title to be written on every blackboard in schools four days ahead of opening.

Sock stunt was planting girl dressed in Juliet gown and jeweled cap secured from Metro Studios in box directly under balcony (see photo). Girl tossed roses into audience attached to stems of which were passes, colored spot was thrown on balcony scene when in use, with microphone announcements over the stage horns in the background. Stunt was used approximately fifteen times ahead of opening.

When gown was not used at the theatre, it was displayed in the window of leading department store with explanatory copy scene stills and play dates; store aiding in the publicity by plugging the display. Drugstore featured a "Romeo and Juliet" julep with contest created among the girls employed there by which passes were awarded to the one selling most during the week period.

Local light and power company came through with prominent window display of electrical appliances, copy reading "Romeo and Juliet made love by candlelight, modern lovers prefer electric lights." Large art panel was dipslayed in background with stills, playdates and large four foot candles topping it.

Leading beauty shop cooperated with art panels and featured a Juliet coiffure and posted photos of Norma Shearer in all booths. Jeweler also devoted window to display of diamonds, copy tying in with picture as did various other merchants.

Crites arranged with city officials to stage a parade opening night led by motorcycle police escort and band in bright red uniforms. Cars were all bannered that they were on their way to see the film. Band gave a 45 minute concert in front of house and between each number, bystanders were questioned on the production, to those correctly answering, ducats were awarded.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Sioux Falls, S. D.

Dear Herald:

We came up here to see our old friend Sherm Fitch, R.K.O. manager, who was reported to be in the hospital, but we were rejoiced to find him at home and much improved, and this will be good news to his host of friends all over this western country.

On our way home from the Rio Grande we stopped at Madison to call on Mr. and Mrs. Nofsinger, who operate the Madison theatre. There is but one way for these folks to keep us from calling on them when we go through Madison, and that is tack a smallpox sign on the door, but even then we could find the back way.

We recently received a letter from Leo Peterson of the Elks theatre at Rapid City, South Dakota, inviting us to come up there and inhale the ozone from the pines of the Black Hills, and he assures us that it would put so much pep in us that we'd want to fight a Sioux Indian. Leo carries the banner of progress at the head of the procession and the Elks theatre is the rallying place for the boys and girls of the Black Hills country. But speaking of the Black Hills, did you know that you could see as good scenery in the Black Hills as you could see in the Alps of Switzerland, and at a whole lot less expense?

We hope we can go up there, and on our way we would certainly stop at Valentine and visit Hazel and Harold Dunn of the Valentine theatre. We wouldn't rate a person as having very good sense who failed to visit this theatre and meet these folks. Of course you might not meet Harold—he might be out to Dewey lake fishing—but you will surely find Hazel at the box office every night.

Valentine is close to the Rosebud Indian reservation and when Valentine puts on a celebration and Harold puts on a "Western" it takes the town marshall and his two deputies to keep the Sioux from crashing the theatre.

Then there are Clint and Bessie Robins, who operate the Pace theatre at Gordon. Everybody knows them, that is everybody in the middle western country, for they have trouped this territory with their own company ever since away back when.

We remember visiting these folks at their summer home on Newaygo lake at Newaygo, Michigan, and we recall, with a whole lot of pleasure, the biscuits Bess would bake for us. They were so light that we could eat a whole pan full of 'em, and you can believe it or not, but they were so light in fact, that when we got filled up on them Clint had to put a weight on us to hold us on the ground. And her strawberry shortcake—Oh gosh, gee whiz, Mabel—if you never ate any of her shortcake you "haint never et nothin yet." The oldtimers will recall the "Rag Doll" act made famous by these troupers.

We hope that Horn & Morgan still operate the theatre at Hay Springs. If they do, the Hay Springs folks can "point with pride" not only at Horn & Morgan, but to the shows they put on at the Hay Springs theatre.

In the Hay Springs territory is where they grow such mammoth potatoes. It's the potato territory of the northwest. In fact they grow potatoes so big out there that the boys say a peck of 'em will fill a bushel basket.

Mrs. Gropper at Wausa, Nebraska, told us when we called there that they were in need of the HERALD to assist them in the operation of the Empress theatre. They seem to want something they can rely on, and when they get the HERALD they will have it, for you know that the HERALD covers the field like an April shower.

Here in Sioux Falls we were pleased to call on Mr. Anderson of the Paramount film office. We are glad we did, for we had a very pleasant visit with him. We also called at the office of Mr. Bradley, and as usual, he was out of town installing one of his Neon signs that he makes here in Sioux Falls. We were sorry to have missed him, but we were very cordially received by Mrs. Trotzig, his assistant, who showed us around the place and we saw how Neon signs are made.

A very peculiar thing happened while we were there. Mr. and Mrs. Christianson of the De Smet theatre at De Smet, South Dakota, were in the office, and Mrs. Christianson overheard us talking and she inquired: "Isn't that Mr. Jenkins?" We hadn't called at their theatre for almost a year, and yet she remembered our voice. Just think of a lady remembering a voice for a year. Say, what kind of a voice have we got anyhow?

Southeastern South Dakota looks the garden spot of the world right now. We saw the little water holes and ditches along the highways filled with water and wheat in every direction as far as we see, and the present outlook is that this country will harvest the largest crop in years, something they haven't done for six or seven, but if they don't, we predict that a lot of them will have to hitch up old Fan and Jerry and go back and live with the old folks. Our hope is that the old folks will come out and live with them.

Oakland, Nebraska

Coming down here from Sioux Falls, we stopped and called on E. W. Kundert of the Empress theatre at Beresford, South Dakota. Beresford you know, is right in the heart of the wheat belt, and our prediction is that there will be no depression around Beresford should this crop mature. Mr. Kundert asked us to renew his subscription to the HERALD. We told him we didn't have the South Dakota list with us and we doubted if his subscription had expired, but he said to not mind that, as he didn't want it to run out, and for us to renew it anyway. Now, that's the way we like to hear them talk.

Our friend, Micky Larson, has been under the weather, so to speak, for some time and we came down here to visit him, but we found him up and on the job. Micky operates the Oakland theatre and here is another place where they can "point with pride" to some of the best pictures made, for Micky shows them.

The country around Oakland is beautiful. Crops are looking immense, wherever one goes. The Logan valley is probably another "garden spot." In fact there are a number of garden spots in this locality, and judging from the prospects in this neighborhood, our judgment is that those who want work will find it here.

At South Sioux City we called on another theatre man we just can't remember his name and found him busy overseeing the construction of his second theatre, and we judge from the plans he showed us it will be the ace house of that community. South Sioux City lies just across the Missouri river from Sioux City, Iowa, with street car connections, and this makes it important to have an ace house in South Sioux as a matter of protection against competition across the river.

According to a press report, fifty thousand Americans went over to England to attend the coronation exercises. You remember what P. T. Barnum once said, dontja? This causes us to wonder how many minutes have passed since now and the time he made that statement. Our judgment is that he was only half right, and our judgment is also that if the money that was spent on those coronation festivities had been employed in securing work for the unemployed there would be no need of reviving any of the various alphabetical activities, and our further judgment is that we have caused you to waste enough valuable time already and so we are going to ring off.

ARE YOU GIVING THEM THE LIGHT THEY MERIT?

The response of theatre patrons is ample justification for securing the best feature pictures obtainable. It proves that the theatre-going public seeks out the best. But the theatre patron is critical and is not satisfied with a good picture, poorly screened. Expensive features merit the best light.

The best projection is provided by a steady, snow-white light of sufficient intensity on the screen for clear definition in the presence of a comfortable level of supplementary illumination. This means High Intensity Projection.

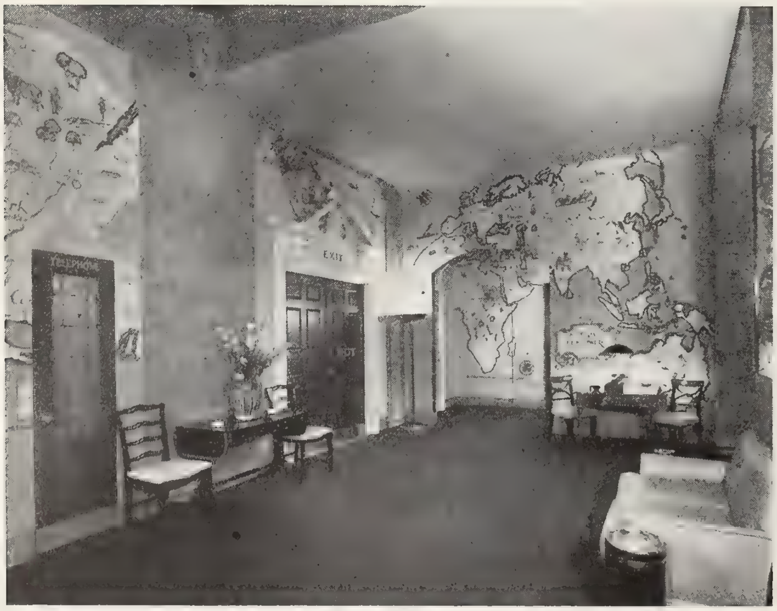
THEATRE IN NEW YORK'S GRAND CENTRAL TERMINAL



■ New York's first railroad station theatre is the tiny cinema which began operation the other day opposite Track 17 of the celebrated Grand Central Terminal, with a program of newsreels and short subjects. It is located off the main concourse, facing which is a small vestibule with a box office in Pyrex glass tiles. Entrance to the auditorium is through a lobby (shown at left) arranged in lounge style and with walls adorned by map murals. The auditorium measures 35 x 70 feet. Its walls are finished from floor to ceiling in Timbertone (a rock wool material) treated as pine board, and bowl-shaped lighting fixtures along the walls have a similar finish. The ceiling is acoustic plaster painted a golden brown. The floor is entirely covered with Crestwood carpeting in a pattern of browns, rust, blue and gold. The seating, by Irwin, is upholstered in blue Velmo mohair. The theatre is completely air-conditioned, with cooling by refrigerated water supplied from the Terminal system. The projection room, located immediately behind a cross-aisle to the rear of the seating area, measures 15 x 8 feet, and equipment includes two Simplex projectors, Peerless Magnarc lamps, and RCA Photophone sound system. Ten seats are wired for Acousticon. Officers of the operating company are John Sloan, Donald Bayne, W. Wallace Lyon and Harold A. Ley. Dave Dubin is manager. The architects were Sloan & Robertson.

To End Image Cut-Off, Extend Sound Standard

PROGRESS TOWARD the establishment of further standards in production methods which will permit greater constancy in the quality of both sound and image in the theatre, is reported by two committees of the Academy Research Council.

A method of framing the "shot," particularly the short-shot and close-up, is expected soon to end the cutting off of vital elements of the image due to the difference in the dimensions of the camera and projector aperture.

In addition, following the adoption of a standard electric characteristic for the new two-way horn systems, the Research Council is working toward the early definition of a method of adapting three-way horn systems to the standard electric characteristic now in effect in recording, which would bring the benefits of this standardization to theatres that are already splitting the frequency band three ways, or which do so in lieu of the somewhat costlier installation of a two-way system.

Both committees are conducting experiments in Hollywood theatres and studios, under the general direction of the permanent committee on standardization of theatre projection equipment, of which John Hilliard, assistant to Douglas Shearer, director of sound for MGM, is chairman.

Air-Conditioning Code Expected This Summer

THAT THE code of standards recently sponsored by air-conditioning equipment manufacturers, was formulated merely as a "stop-gap," to be superseded by a code now in preparation by engineering groups, has been pointed out by the Air-Conditioning Manufacturers Association, through its president, William B. Henderson.

In a letter to J. T. Knight, Jr., who criticized the manufacturers' standards in his article, "Seeking a Guide to Good Practice in Air-Conditioning," in the April 3d issue of BETTER THEATRES, Mr. Henderson states that a joint committee of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers and the American Society of Refrigerating Engineers, expects to submit a complete code to the membership of those organizations before the end of this summer.

The aim is to establish standards in system design and operation which assure comfortable and healthful atmospheric conditions. It may be regarded, at least partly, as an effort to meet criticism which has been voiced by both public and health authorities.

"While I know nothing of the contents of the proposed national code," Mr. Henderson writes, addressing Mr. Knight, "I think you will agree with me that under such excellent sponsorship an eminently satisfactory and usable national code may be expected. Of course, rarely is any code entirely final, but constantly subject to revision and amendment as changing circumstances and developments indicate necessary and desirable. When the approved national code is released by the two engineering societies, it will supersede the ACMA Interim Code as recommended practice for the members of the Air-Conditioning Manufacturers' Association.

"Your article was excellently written and covered the subject in a fair and constructively critical manner."

Independent Dealer Group to Reorganize

CONTINUANCE OF the Independent Theatre Supply Dealers Association, under that or another name, but in any case reorganized, is expected at a convention of dealers and theatre equipment manufacturers in Chicago June 18, 19 and 20. Most of the membership of the present association have signified their intention to attend in the hope of strengthening the organization.

The meeting, which will be held at the Medinah Athletic Club in downtown Chicago, will nominally be another annual convention of the association, but its aims, following indications that the organization would disband, give it a distinctly different significance from that of previous conventions. It is definitely stated among members that the purposes and methods of the association will undergo changes which would create, in effect, an entirely new organization.

Equipment exhibits, however, are planned, and about 60 manufacturers are also expected to attend the convention.

New Filament Increases Lamp Efficiency 10%

AN INCREASE in illumination from incandescent lamps calculated at 10% has been achieved through the perfection of a new high-efficiency tungsten filament at the Nela Park laboratories of the General Electric Company. The improved filament has been announced by J. E. Kewley, vice-president of the company's incandescent lamp department at Nela Park, Cleveland, who states that it represents the result of 24 years of continuous research, and is "the greatest forward step in tungsten filament lamps since the invention of the gas-filled lamp."

Nela Park engineers declare that it will save users of incandescent lamps $16,500,000 this year, and by 1946, more than 60 million.

First drawn into a straight wire 19/10,000ths of an inch in diameter, so fine as to be almost invisible to the naked eye, the tungsten is then wound, 335 turns to the inch, around a thin molybdenum wire, or mandrel, leaving the coils, or turns, 1/1000th of an inch apart. These coils must be kept as close together as possible, to reduce heat loss, but must not touch each other, else they would short-circuit, causing the lamp to fail instantly. Then the coiled wire is coiled once more on another mandrel, 70 turns per inch, with a spacing of 7/1000ths of an inch between the secondary coils.

Before the first coiling, the tungsten wire in a filament is 20 inches long. The first coiling compresses it to a length of 3.4 inches. The second coiling compresses it still further to a length of ⅝-inch, with a coil-diameter of 310/10,000ths of an inch.

Following the second coiling, the mandrels or center wires are dissolved by means of chemicals. When installed in the lamp, the new filament is mounted as a crossbar between two lead-in wires, with one support in the center of the filament, instead of being looped around three supports, as was the practice with the older type of coiled filament.

"The new filament development solves one of the oldest and most stubborn problems involved in lamp manufacture," Mr. Kewley states in his announcement. "In a pure vacuum, a tungsten filament operating at a high temperature tends to evaporate quickly, and deposit its particles on the inner surface of the bulb, thus causing bulb-blackening and decreased light output. The use of certain gases within the bulb introduces pressure which reduces filament evaporation, with its attendant evil of blackening, and allows it to operate at a higher temperature for the same life.

"Offsetting these advantages, the presence of gas inside the bulb gives rise to convection currents, or 'breezes,' which tend to fan the filament and lower its temperature, thus reducing its light output."

Dr. Irving Langmuir, of General Electric's research laboratories in Schenectady, in his invention of the gas-filled lamp, discovered that the greater the concentration of the filament, particularly in length, the lower the heat loss. Since the effective length of the new design filament is only about one-half that of the old, there is much less cooling by the gas which permits the lamp to give 10 per cent more light for the same amount of electric current. The gas employed in the new lamps is a mixture of nitrogen and argon.

More to Come on Lighting

In further dealing with illumination for the theatre today, a subject featured in this issue, BETTER THEATRES will present, in its issue of July 24th, many pages of special material on lighting fixtures for the interior, and on marquees and signs. In articles and pictures, the newer styles and methods will be instructively and comprehensively described, with emphasis on their value in remodeling economically.

Old Sound Equipment Being Rapidly Replaced

FURTHER indication that obsolete sound reproduction equipment, entirely incapable of serving present standards, is being rapidly replaced with the latest systems, was given by Edwin M. Hartley, sales manager of RCA Photophone, at a company convention conducted recently at its new Indianapolis manufacturing plant.

Citing a 35% increase in the number of late model RCA systems installed during the first four months of this year, he declared that most of the replacement installations represented the junking of apparatus dating back to the earliest days of sound. Over 300 back orders of RCA equipment awaited shipment, he said, while the new Indianapolis plant started the year with over 400 orders.

Others who addressed the convention were Lester Isaac, supervisor of projection for Loew's, Inc.; E. C. Zrenner, engineer of the Interstate circuit; Harry Brandt, New York circuit operator; Frank Cahill, supervisor of projection for Warner Theatres; Dan D. Halpin, vice president of Dictograph Products Company; and Herbert Griffin, vice president of the International Projector Corporation.

See Film Damage Due to Flimsy Reels

PROJECTIONISTS in various sections of the country are beginning to voice complaints of film service on flimsy 2000-foot rels. Some of the reels, it is said, afford little protection to the films in shipment and during rewinding, with the result that prints become increasingly damaged as they are transported from theatre to theatre.

While exchanges protest that the reels being used conform to the specifications of the Academy Research Council, it is believed that some instances in which projectionists kept high-grade reels on which the film was shipped, ultimately brought about the purchase of a certain number of cheap reels.

Modern Forms and Materials For Theatre Lighting Schemes

● Describing an array of more recently developed illumination devices and how they may be applied to theatres new and old

By FRANCIS M. FALGE

NEW METHODS and new viewpoints characterize today's lighting. Each application is critically analyzed with a view toward producing equipment to suit a particular requirement, whether it be quantity of illumination, effectiveness of display, or economy of operation. Lighting for theatres also receives its share of this study, and as a result new elements and new lighting methods have been developed to enable the theatre to get effect at minimum cost.

The application of these elements is a design problem, and how they are applied determines the degree of effectiveness obtained. Certainly their range of application appears unlimited—they may be used as thin border strokes, as strokes of letters, as pilasters, pylons, etc., as large wall areas, or as simple accents.

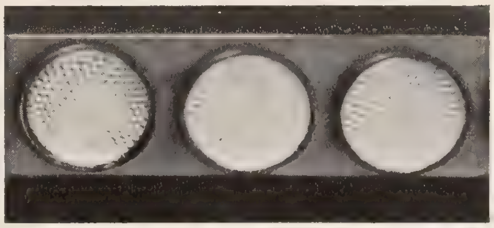
The illustrated forms represent models made in simple shapes and sizes. Each can be applied by the designer in a variety of ways to create new effects both inside and outside the theatre. These forms redirect light into angles where it is most useful, thus bringing about economies for the user. Some of them have polished or mirrored surfaces of high reflection factor which are reasonably permanent for outside service, and which give a sparkling effect. Others have mat surfaces to produce a smooth lighting effect. Surfaces suitable for outdoor service include Alcoa lighting sheets, stock aluminum sheets with a hard outer surface, Alzak aluminum, a similar material but with a still higher reflection factor, and chromium or nickel on copper or brass.

In addition to these new light-reflecting forms, luminous panels and projecting elements are important architectural forms because they may be adapted to so many conditions, and because they lend themselves to so many form treatments in decoration. The choice of many available materials is determined by the necessity for harmony with the rest of the structure, as well as by the luminous effect desired. The uniformly luminous element faced with flashed opal glass has been most used, but often more subtle and charming results are obtained by the use of graded brightness and color, highlights and sparkle. The configurated and tinted, or designed and moulded glasses, the plastics, and thin sheets of the marbles with interesting textures, offer unlimited variations from the usual treatments. They may include anything from small panels to ceilings entirely of glass. For smoothness they must be properly lamped, and a cavity that is white and adequately deep is desirable for best efficiency. Many other luminous forms, pilasters of varied cross-section, beams, and other projecting elements are at the designer's disposal.

REFLECTING ELEMENTS

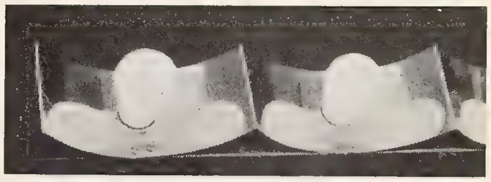
The accompanying illustrations and sketches show a number of light-reflecting elements of various forms—forms which adapt themselves as architectural elements that can be disposed in line, area or mass to fit any design used. They are applicable to both exterior and interior treatment, as illustrated elsewhere (see insert, "Lighting the Theatre") in designs rendered by W. D. Riddle, registered architect and a member of the Nela Park engineering department of the General Electric Company.

Climax Reflectors. These units are small aluminum reflectors using 3- and 6-watt clear lamps and made up with a medium screw base so that they can be screwed into regular sign sockets. Natural-colored glass roundels, available in seven standard colors as well as other special colors, produce a sparkling color effect. These units, which are marketed by Climax Lamp, Inc., of Canton, Ohio, control light efficiently and collect the light ordinarily wasted and redirect it down the street, thus increasing the brightness effect. In addition they insure better legibility at wide viewing angles, eliminating glare and light confusion at these angles of view. Being equipped with natural-colored roundels, high color efficiency, both initially and throughout life, is obtained.



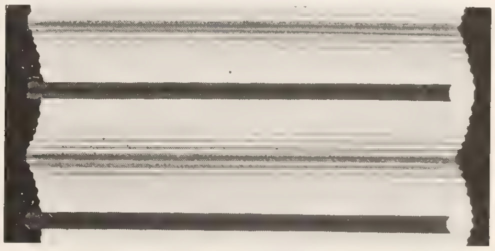
APPLICATION—1. Sign and marquee running borders. 2. Identification signs in color. 3. Roof signs in color.

Reflector Inserts. These consist in a simple polished form of Alcoa Lighting Sheet having a parabolic contour. They can be placed between an exposed lamp border or sign letter treatment to redirect the light to better advantage and at the same time join the light from the two lamps to produce an interesting linear pattern.



APPLICATION—1. Borders of signs. 2. Letter strokes, especially those viewed closeby.

Silhouette Element with Mat Corrugated Background. The same design principle is employed here as used in the silhouette strip referred to below. The background, however, is curved and corrugated to produce an interesting texture.



APPLICATION—1. Building facade. 2. Sign border. 3. Sign background. 4. Lobby and foyer ceilings.

Silhouette Strip. By placing lamps in a trough some distance from a mat surface background, the trough is made to appear as a silhouette line. This dark band then become a part of the design. The face of the trough may incorporate decorated flashed-opal glass panels, plain or decorated, which are made luminous by lamps placed behind the glass. The lamps in the trough should be placed no farther apart than one and one-half times their distance from the background, to insure a smooth lighting effect.

APPLICATION—1. Decorative element on sign or front. 2. As decorative or utilitarian elements in lobbies and foyers. 3. Auditoriums, for general lighting.

Multiple Reflection Trough. A trough of flat pieces of Alcoa Lighting Sheet so shaped to follow, as closely as possible, a parabolic curvature. By using flat metal sheets, an effect is created similar to that produced by three rows of lamps. Still another effect can be created by using a diamond pattern. Here the lamp reflections are broken up, while at the same time the multi-reflection is retained. This same effect can be advantageously applied to the design of letters 4 feet or larger (as illustrated by the letter R).

APPLICATION—1. Borders of signs and marquees. 2. Letter strokes, especially those viewed relatively close. 3. For outlining or as decorative luminous elements.

Large reflectors. Made of spun, oxidized aluminum, preferably treated for permanence, these parabolic reflectors are a new tool that can be utilized by the designer in a variety of ways. For example, using a 10-inch reflector for a border treatment with a low-wattage lamp having its filament at the focal point of the parabolic reflector, a major portion of the light can be effectively directed down the street to command the attention of those at some distance from the theatre.

The 6-, 10-, 25- or 40-watt lamps may be used in the same reflector. An interesting variation is produced by coloring the ends of the lamps. For example, use a silvered bowl lamp, to produce brightness; a 25-watt colored lamp to provide an accent of color; a 10-watt daylight lamp for sparkle; and a 10-watt yellow lamp to give the effect of a round luminous area.

APPLICATION—1. Strokes of large vertical roof or spectacular letters. 2. Beneath the marquee to supplement the exposed lamps.

Twinkle Letter. A channel form with a good white background. Brightness and sparkle is provided by a well arranged system of exposed lamps. The lamps should be on 4-inch centers and wired on four circuits for flashing. Instead of the running 1-2-3-4 motion for border effects, they are flashed rapidly in 1-3-2-4 sequence to give the desired twinkling sparkle.

APPLICATION—1. Large sign letters. 2. Borders.

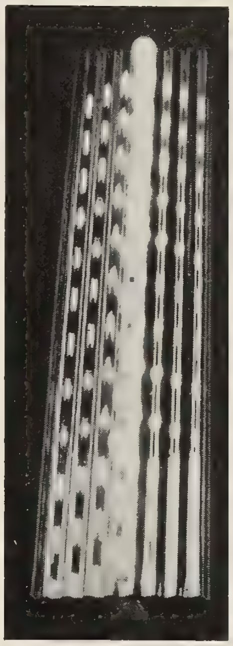
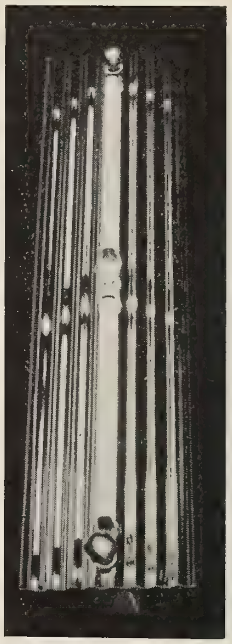
Specular Metal with Corrugations. Corrugated metal and brushed stainless steel have the interesting property of spreading a source of light in one direction only so that bands of light are produced, in each case, as wide as the source of light itself. By taking advantage of this characteristic, many interesting and colorful forms can be produced. The inside colored bulbs produce satin-like effects, the natural-colored lamps, or lamps with color hoods, give sparkling spikelike reflections, and the tubular sources produce wide bands of light.





Both the A-bulb lamps and the Lumiline lamps can be used separately or together with these surfaces, as illustrated, to produce a desired effect.

APPLICATION—1. Borders of marquees, signs, etc. 2. Faces of signs. 3. Backgrounds for letters. 4. Lobby lighting. 5. Special displays. 6. Beneath marquee.

Structural Unit. In this design two triangular pieces of 2½-inch corrugated metal are pieced together. Inset in the corner is an 8-inch plate or block of glass. The metal is mat-finished or porcelain-enameled for greater permanence. Grouped in a suitable framework against the building facade, lighting the theatre

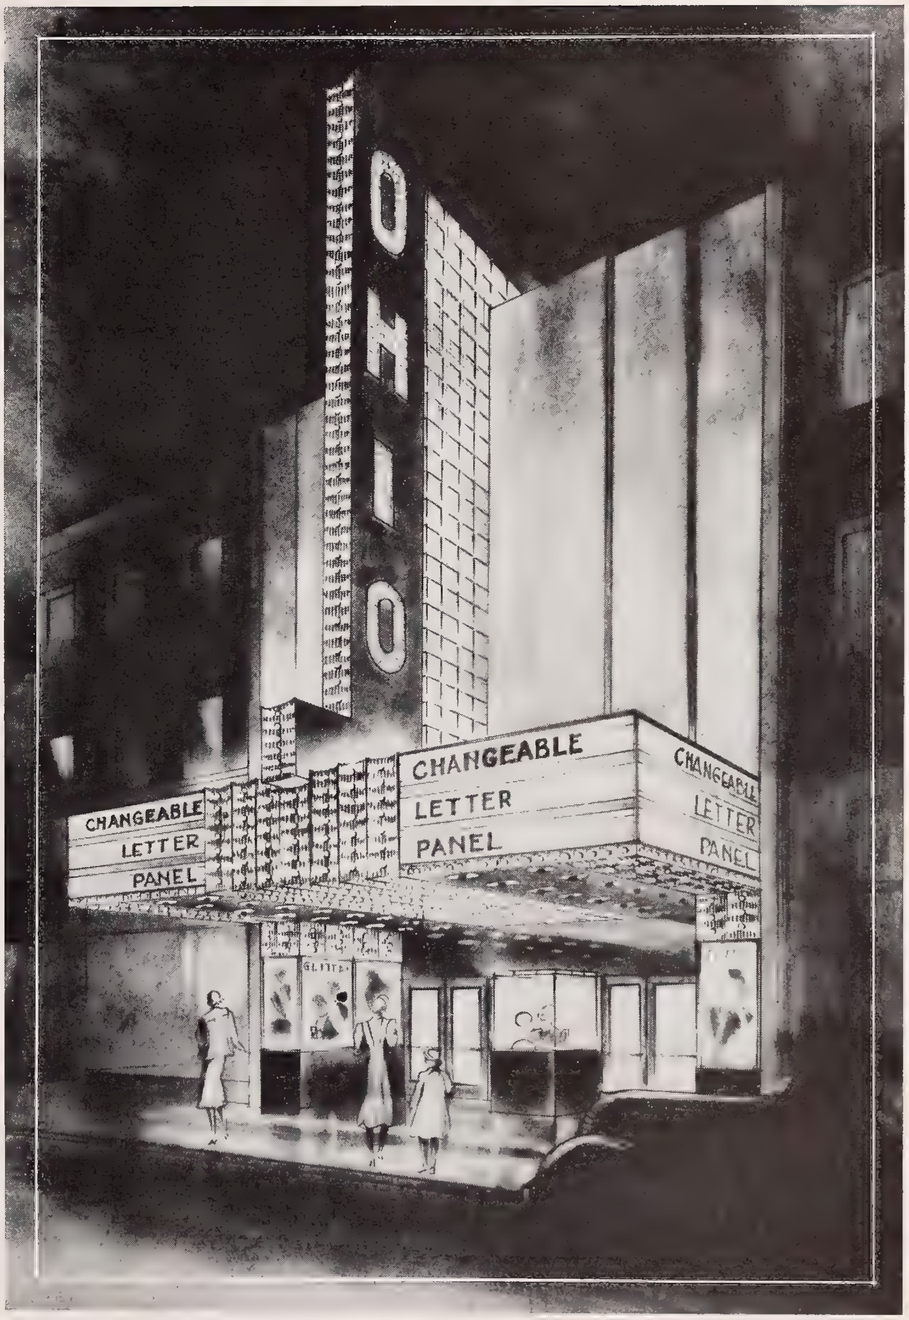
THE motion picture theatre is peculiarly a thing of light. The performance itself is light. Light advertises both theatre and show. Artificial illumination provides the interior with more than visibility—it is a fundamental instrument in the creation of a suitable environment. And in the latter two functions, modern illumination technique has given light greater purpose and therefore a new importance in the theatre today.

Modern lighting is in general distinguished from the old-fashioned methods by its emphasis on light itself as the medium, instead of on ornamental or other forms employed in connection with it, and to modern lighting as thus defined these eight pictorial pages are devoted, with original designs and lighting diagrams by W. D. Riddle, architect on the staff of the Nela Park Engineering Department of the General Electric Company, presented on this and the following three pages.

How light and architecture are being joined today in giving the entire theatre facade the function of an advertising medium is well exemplified in the sketch on this page. Illumination of the entire front of the building is an important requirement of effective advertising.

The treatment demonstrated in this sketch is of course representative of only the idea. Every creative designer has his own peculiar technique in dealing with the various elements of design.

With today's freedom in architectural styling, the surpassing effectiveness of large illuminated areas can be achieved by a number of practical methods. This means that the design should be composed with lighting as an integral component of it, employing materials which co-ordinate illumination elements to the best advantage. Thus a true advertising-decorative ensemble is achieved.



● The twinkling letters in the vertical sign of the front treatment sketched above, and the glass tile panel (intended to be lighted in color) capture attention for many blocks up and down the street. On the front of the sign is a polished corrugated metal element of the type referred to by Francis M. Falge in his article beginning on page 9. The lamps of this element, which produce horizontal spikes of light, are flashed to impart an effect of motion, which carries down and under the marquee to the box office. Similar treatment is found on the soffit of the marquee at each end A high level of illumination is provided under the marquee by silvered-bowl lamps in aluminum reflectors. The attraction board letters are mounted against three luminous panels of cased opal glass, sections of which are separated by strips of the same material in color. An effect of mass and color is achieved by floodlighting the sheer facade on either side of the sign.

functional and decorative auditorium lighting

● In the sketch above is shown an auditorium designed architecturally to employ light for decoration and other environmental purposes as well as to provide the necessary illumination during performances and intermissions. Spaced rather closely along the horizontal ceiling bands are coffered and louvered luminaires, which supply down-lighting that is directed on the aisles, thus serving a three-fold purpose of decoration, general low-level illumination during the performance, and illumination of the aisles so that patrons may reach or leave seats with a minimum of interference with seated patrons watching the performance. The fluted central portion of the ceiling is lighted by lamps on three color circuits; the lamps are concealed in two troughs and in coves at the sides. This system can be used to produce appropriate color effects during the performance or to provide general lighting during intermissions. The proscenium arch is lighted from concealed sources arranged in a system designed to create low-key color effects. Floodlighting equipment concealed below and behind the wainscoting illuminates the fluted side walls with as little or as much light as circumstances may require.

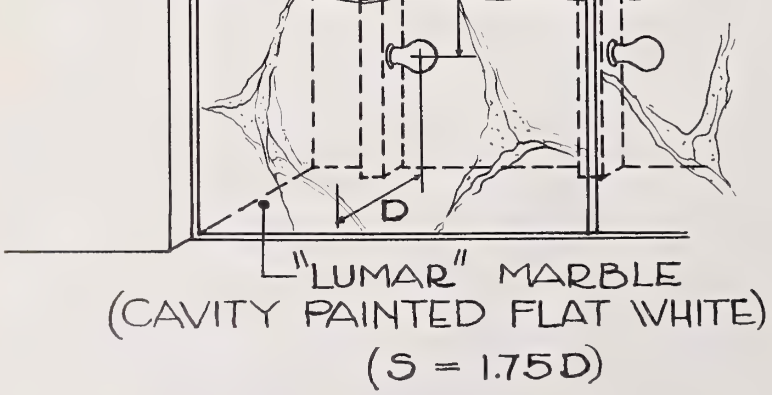
modern lighting forms for a foyer



● An interesting use of modern architectural materials in connection with modern lighting forms and elements is shown in this foyer scheme. The square section suspended in each coffer to shield the light source is made of colored glass and introduces a warm note of color deeper than the pastel tone in which the cavity itself is painted. The chief decorative note in this foyer is the section of translucent marble, which is lighted from behind and which also supplies much of the useful illumination. Effects of striking beauty may be produced by this method of lighting thin sheets of marble (called Lumar and developed about two years ago). Depending upon the size of the room and the general character of its design, an illuminated marble panel of the type indicated in the sketch requires from 25 to 50 watts of lighting for each square foot of marble.

- A simple illumination scheme for a shallow, enclosed lobby is illustrated at right. Treated entirely architecturally, the lighting of this room is provided by luminous panels of cased-opal glass, set flush over the lamp troughs, which have the decorative effect of "striping" the splayed sides of a coffered ceiling.

- Tastefully decorative as well as a means of supplying illumination is the essentially architectural treatment employed in lighting the lounge shown at right. Over arches and doorways have been placed beams containing lamps and formed of cased-opal glass. The metallic members binding the glass panels at the edges and suspending the beams contribute a pattern in silhouette.

How the Manner of Signing Contracts Affects Liability

● Outlining the essential points of the law on signature forms, as established in decisions of higher courts in a number of recent cases

By LEO T. PARKER

A SHORT TIME ago an official of a theatre corporation wrote the following letter:

"I recently dictated a letter in which I contracted to purchase certain items for our corporation. However, I did not sign my name to the letter, but only initialed it. Under these circumstances are we liable if we break the contract?"

The answer to this question is, yes. Furthermore, the corporation would be liable although the official's signature had been typewritten or rubber-stamped, provided the official had authority to make contracts of this nature.

Contrary to the opinion of many theatre owners, officials and employes, any form of an authorized employe's signature, such as that made with a rubber-stamp, typewriter, symbols, initials and the like may be enforceable.

For instance, in the leading case of Mayers v. McRimmon (53 S. E. 447), a higher court considered the right of an employe to bind his employer by endorsing the latter's name with a rubber-stamp. This court said:

"Where the name required has been so placed by one having authority to do it and with intent to endorse the instrument, the authorities hold that this is a valid endorsement."

In still another case, Carrol v. Mitchell Company (128 S. W. 446), it was disclosed that an authorized theatre employe affixed his employer's signature with a rubber-stamp to a note which read, as follows:

"One month after date, for value received, we promise to pay to the order of Mitchell $112.50, with 6% interest from date."

Controversy developed over payment of the note, and the employer contended that the obligation was void because the note was signed with a rubber-stamp and the pen written signature was omitted. However, the court held the employer liable because it was proven that when the rubber-stamp signature was affixed both the employer and the employe intended to complete a valid obligation. In still another case (190 S. W. 1045), where the same point of the law was involved, a higher court said:

"The word 'writing' in law, not only means words traced with a pen or stamped, but printed or engraved or made legible by any other device."

Also, a theatre manager who affixes a signature with a typewriter, intending to make a valid contract, actually completes a valid contract (195 Pac. 316).

INITIAL SIGNATURE VALID

It is immaterial whether a theatre owner or his authorized employe, signs a contract by full name or initials, providing the theatre owner intended to be bound when the signature was affixed.

For instance, in the case of Meaton v. Meyers (33 Ill. 424) it was disclosed that a principal signed a contract "Y. C. M." Later litigation developed, and the court was presented the question of whether or not the contract was valid.

The court held the signer liable and explained that any person or his authorized agent may make a valid legal obligation by using any form of a signature, mark or symbol if the signature adopted is substituted for the signer's name and with intentions to bind the employer.

INTENT AND AUTHORITY

However, it must be remembered that the party who sues on a contract, or other instrument, signed with a rubber-stamp, typewriter, or initials, is bound to prove to the satisfaction of the court that:

(1) The signature was affixed with intentions of making a valid contract.

(2) The person who affixed the signature was properly authorized to do so.

Another important point of the law is: Where a theatre official authorizes a theatre employe to use a mechanical signing device, or to affix a written signature, the theatre owner is liable even though the employe exceeds his authority, if the contract on which he exceeded his authority was made with a firm or person who had made previous contracts in the same manner and with the same employe. This is especially true if all parties involved are fully aware that the employe has general authority to sign contracts for his employer.

If there is doubt as to who is liable, then the liability always rests with the party whose negligence, in authorizing the substituted signature, resulted in loss to an innocent party.

STAMPED SIGNATURES

For example, in the very recent case of Rivers v. Liberty (133 S. E. 210) it was disclosed that a bank furnished a business person with a rubber-stamp for use by the latter's bookkeeper to endorse checks for deposit. Without authority of his employer, and without knowledge of the bank officials, the bookkeeper used the stamp to endorse checks on which he had fraudulently obtained money. In the ensuing litigation the court held the bank liable for the heavy financial loss and explained that an employer is not negligent where his bookkeeper uses a rubber-stamp supplied by the bank to endorse checks illegally and fraudulently.

In another case (Standard Company v. Corn Exchange Bank, 116 N. E. 368), a stenographer was authorized by a bank to use a rubber-stamp to endorse checks for deposit for her employer. She was also authorized by the bank to write after the rubber stamp endorsement her employer's name, as follows: "Percy H. Pinder, Treasurer."

Without authority of either the bank or her employer, she omitted the rubber-stamp endorsement, but endorsed several of her employer's checks in her own handwriting as follows, "Percy H. Pinder, Treasurer," and also endorsed her own name thereon. The checks were cashed for her by persons who later deposited them in the bank. The bank collected the money and paid out the proceeds in the regular course of business. The court held the bank, and not the stenographer's employer, liable, saying:

"The business man who authorizes his clerk to take his checks to his bank for deposit does not vest in her so dangerous a power as to preclude him from setting up her lack of authority if she endorses his name and innocent persons cash the checks for her. If greater authority has been conferred, expressly or by implication, or if the principal has been negligent, or has ratified conduct of his agent, the law will not shield him."

Therefore, it seems to be well settled law that where a bank authorizes a rubber-stamp endorsement, it is responsible for fraudulent acts of the authorized rubber stamp user.

NEWS OF THEIR ACTIVITIES REPORTED FROM ALL SECTIONS AND BRIEFLY TOLD

Dave Maglena will completely redecorate, reseat, ventilate and otherwise renovate his Rialto theatre in Windsor Locks, Conn., at an estimated cost of $10,000. Work will begin shortly, with the Alvin Studios of New York in charge of the interior decoration.

A. Zsold has reseated his Avon theatre in Peoria, Ill. The installation was made by General Seating Company of Chicago.

Nathan Lampert has opened his new 350-seat theatre in Glastonbury, Conn. Mr. Lampert, who also operates houses in Broadbrook, Colchester and East Hampton, Conn., will begin construction soon of a theatre in Wethersfield, Conn.

Leo Schapiro, lessee for the past three years of the Guilford theatre in Guilford, Conn., has purchased the property. Prior to his lease, Mr. Schapiro managed the house for United Theatres.

Clarence F. Bertsch has purchased the equipment of the Loleta Theatre in Loleta, Calif., from Frank H. and Elida Bertsch.

J. P. Neist has opened the Elite theatre in Beverly Hills, Calif.

Principal Theatres, Inc., will shortly open the Tower theatre in Porterville, Calif.

Bud Markowitz has arranged to remodel and reopen the Palmer theatre, San Francisco neighborhood house.

M. Raymond Peterson, who conducted the Fair Oaks theatre in Pasadena, Calif., died recently.

E. T. Burgan has opened his 10th Street theatre, Kansas City, Kan., following $20,000 worth of improvements and new equipment, including new cooling and heating systems, 800 seats, new box office and front, and complete redecoration. Mr. Burgan, who also operates the Home theatre, plans to remodel that house also.

S. R. Ammerman of the Elvin theatre in Endicott, N. Y., has installed an Electoaire ozone generator for air deodorizing.

J. Pastor of the Radio theatre, Milwaukee, has installed an Electroaire ozone generator.

A. E. Sirica of Waterbury, Conn., has installed new Simplex projector mechanisms in his Capitol theatre.

A little "Little Theatre" which John T. Loftus, general manager of the Standard Theatre Supply Company of Boston has installed in the quarters of that theatre equipment concern to show various products "as installed". Each row of chairs displays a different Heywood-Wakefield model.

Ralph Goldberg of the Goldberg Theatre Corporation, Omaha, Nebr., has purchased eight Model-K Motiograph projectors, installing two each in his Avenue, Town, Military and Dundee theatres in Omaha. The installations were made by the Western Theatre Supply Company of Omaha.

C. H. Harris, operator of the Princess theatre, Guttenberg, Ia., has had a cooling system installed. The equipment was supplied and put in by the Scott Ballantyne Company of Omaha.

L. A. Solomon of the Stadium theatre in Evanston, Chicago suburb, has installed 1500 new theatre chairs. The General Seating Company of Chicago made the installation.

Max and Joseph Levenson, New England theatre operators, have started work on a drive-in theatre in Rayham, Mass. The house will cost about $35,000, it is estimated, and will park about 300 automobiles. Max Levensen is vice president of Independent Exhibitors, Inc.

Frederick E. Lieberman, Massachusetts circuit operator, has bought the Thompson Square theatre in Charlestown, Mass. The theatre is being operated by George Solomon.

Myron Glickman has disposed of the Crown theatre in Lowell, Mass., and is negotiating for the sale of the Keith's, formerly the American, in Fairhaven, Mass. Irving Dunn of Lowell took over the Crown.

Tom Edwards has just completed remodeling of his Ozark theatre at Eldon, Mo.

William J. McKinstry, for many years a projectionist at the Mainstreet theatre in Kansas City, Mo., died recently at the age of 54. He was a past-president of the Kansas City projectionists' union, as well as a past-monarch of the Elysian Grotto.

The Peoples theatre in Pleasant Hill, Mo., is being remodeled. The house was formerly owned and operated by Wayne Jenkins. Glen W. Dickinson Theatres, Inc., has assumed control, with Mr. Jenkins remaining as manager.

Glen Dickinson has completed remodeling and re-equipping the Dickinson theatre in Beloit, Kan. Refurbishing included new seats, air-conditioning, new carpets, a new box office and marquee, and

The North Carolina Theatre Corporation, with principal office in Charlotte, will take over operation of the Temple and Lyric theatres in Gastonia, N. C., at an early date, according to an announcement by H. F. Kincey, head of the company.

J. Harold Luter is the new manager of the Paramount theatre in Miami, Fla., succeeding Robert C. Swanson.

Dr. J. T. Greene of Elloree, S. C., has opened a modern theatre in Branchville, S. C., which has been without a motion picture house for about seven years. The theatre will be known as the Edisto.

Mrs. Charles Nott, operator of the Sutherland theatre in Sutherland, Ia., has installed Ballantyne cooling equipment and Garver rectifiers.

Lester E. Matt has opened his new 1500-seat Della theatre in Flint, Mich.

The Lincoln theatre in Detroit, Mich., has been taken over by the Wisper & Wetsman circuit, from the Burton London circuit, giving the former eleven Detroit houses.

John Danz has closed his Winter Garden theatre in Seattle for remodeling. Approximately $20,000 will be spent on new projection and sound equipment, a new screen, redecorating of the foyer and auditorium, reseating and lobby reconstruction.

Francis Falkenburg has become manager of the Alabama theatre in Birmingham. He was formerly manager of the Carolina in Columbia, S. C.

Karl Krueger has taken over the management of the Roxy in Stockton, Calif.

E. S. Calvi and E. C. O'Keefe have taken over the Maywood Egyptian theatre in Maywood, Calif., and will make improvements costing about $3000.

Boyd Allen has opened the Forest theatre in Boulder Creek, Calif., which was closed during the winter season.

David H. Dewey, purchasing agent for Tri-States Theatres, has authorized taking bids on general remodeling of the Strand theatre in Waterloo, Ia., where $25,000 will be spent; and of the Iowa theatre in Sioux City, where about $15,000 will be expended for new seating, new lights and remodeling of the front.

The Princess theatre in Britt, Ia., has been closed for remodeling.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. King, operators of the Allerton theatre in Allerton, Ia., are redecorating the auditorium and lobby.

L. F. Wolcott, president of Allied Theatres of Iowa and Neb., and owner of the New Grand theatre in Eldora, Ia., is enlarging the house, increasing the capacity by one-half.

Elias B. Gerbatt and his son, E. M. Gerbatt, are constructing a new theatre to be known as the Forest, and improving the Ritz theatre, in Des Moines, Ia.

Progress on renovating Donovan S. Deakin's Dells theatre in Wisconsin Dells, Wis., has been delayed owing to bad weather. Gilbert Deakin has replaced Dick Moran as manager.

Theatres recently opened or about to be opened in New Mexico are the Mission in Mesilla Park, built by Bason & Wheeler; a new theatre built by Bartlett & Son in Artesia; and the new La Sendia in Barelas, opened by H. S. Farley.

Economy and Effectiveness in Lighting Methods and Maintenance

● Light is an essential tool of showmanship—today more than ever before. Examined here are ways of using it efficiently throughout the theatre

LIGHTING AS applied to theatres is a very broad and comprehensive subject to cover in a single article—one could write a whole volume on it! It is a medium of expression for us in the theatre business, a very necessary tool from a utilitarian point of view. There is probably no other means at our disposal that is so truly showmanly as lighting.

Yet if an unbiased observer should inspect a hundred theatres picked at random and located away from the larger metropolitan areas, he might be led to doubt that statement. The depression years, with the many "economy drives" by theatre owners, has left many a veteran as well as younger managers with a definite lack of appreciation of proper lighting. When a theatre manager attempts to create the atmosphere of entertainment without light he is like a cook who makes a cake without sugar. The resultant effect is flat.

It might be well to reiterate this point: The business of motion picture exhibition is changing, more is expected and more is demanded of a theatre manager today than ten years ago. In spite of the fact that some old-timers in the business have got by without knowing anything about motors, blowers, air-conditioning or lighting, the time is not far off when the younger managers, who apply themselves to the problem of understanding these things, are going to be operating the choice theatres.

LIGHTING TERMS AND GENERAL TYPES

WITHOUT GOING into too much detail, it is necessary to define five terms which are frequently used in discussions of lighting:

The foot-candle is the unit of illumination. It may be defined as the illumination at a point one foot from a source emitting one candle power in a direction perpendicular to the surface. It is the illumination received when one lumen of light falls on one square foot of area. An approximate idea of the illumination represented by one foot-candle can be obtained by holding a piece of white paper one foot away in a horizontal direction from an ordinary wax candle in a dark room, or about five feet away from an ordinary 25-watt incandescent lamp.

The lumen is a unit frequently used in lighting discussions. It differs from the foot-candle in that it takes account of the extent of area over which the light is distributed. In other words, one lumen is the quantity of light that would fall on a piece of paper one foot square held at a distance (horizontally) of one foot from an ordinary wax candle. It follows that the foot-candle on any surface, multiplied by the square foot area of that surface, will equal the number of lumens of light on the surface.

It is obvious that for a given degree of illumination, the amount of light in lumens varies directly with the area over which the illumination is distributed. The lumen is the unit of measure of the amount of light either sent out by a source or received by a surface.

An expression frequently used to describe the efficiency of an incandescent lamp is lumens per watt. In a practical sense it represents the quantity of light obtained from an incandescent lamp or other source of light per unit of electrical power supplied to that lamp or source. Too frequently we hear the word wattage of a lamp used for light quantity. The wattage of the lamp is an electrical unit of power, which represents the quantity of electricity necessary to give the rated light output of the lamp.

So much for the two important terms with reference to light. Every manager should strive to gain some definite conception of these units.

DIRECT LIGHTING

There are four general classifications of methods of lighting. The first is direct lighting. This may be explained as any system of lighting in which substantially all of the light from the lamp is essentially downward and comes directly from the lighting units. Direct lighting methods may range from the use of spotlights to the many types of fixtures with exposed lamps, or lamps behind colored glass panels, or ceiling plaques. Good distribution is very hard to obtain with direct lighting, and the complete elimination of harsh or sharp shadows almost impossible to attain. Many direct sources of low lumen output (wattage, we would probably say) per source, with the lamps well distributed to give diffusion of light, is about the only method we know of to eliminate shadows and minimum glare with direct lighting.

SEMI-DIRECT LIGHTING

Semi-direct lighting refers to systems where the predominating light comes from a fixture, but where there is also a considerable amount by reflection from the ceiling or walls or both. An example of this semi-direct lighting was the use of parchment shades, or silk shades, or shields which were so popular in theatres some years ago. Semi-direct lighting is frequently used as the principle for the design of some of the modernistic lighting fixtures used today in lobbies and foyers of theatres.

Semi-direct lighting may be defined as a system of lighting in which some light, generally about 30%, is direct from the fixture, and the balance is derived from reflection from the ceiling or walls, or both. Semi-direct light has the same gen-

RUBBER FLOORING: Rubber makes a very resilient, quiet (though not as quiet as carpet), waterproof and durable flooring for theatre lobbies. It is colorful and modern. It is made by vulcanizing pure rubber under great pressure and cutting it into strips, runners and square and rectangular tile. Some brands have in them a reinforcement of fine cotton fiber or mineral fillers.

The finish is usually marbleized in various designs, but plain colors can be obtained. Square and rectangular tile are almost exclusively used. Sizes range from 4-inch to 18-inch squares, and from 9 x 8-inch to 18 x 36-inch rectangles. The thickness varies from 3/16-inch to 1/2-inch.

The tiles are laid in waterproof rubber cement and thoroughly rolled with a heavy roller. When they are laid over a wood floor, sometimes a cotton or fiber sheeting is tacked to the floor first.

New lobby floor covering will change the appearance of a theatre very substantially.

EFFECTIVE TEMPERATURE INDICATOR: There is an instrument on the market which has been developed by a New York physician and a New York consulting physicist. It is no more difficult to read than an ordinary thermometer, and reads, direct, the effective temperature rather than the dry bulb or the wet bulb temperature.

Without reference to charts one can tell immediately whether or not the condition in the auditorium falls within the comfort zone. The effective temperature as indicated by this instrument is based upon an effective temperature at 50% relative humidity rather than on 100% relative humidity of the chart of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers.

Remember, effective temperature is an arbitrary index of the degree of warmth or cold felt by a human being normally clothed in response to temperature (dry bulb), humidity (wet bulb), and movement of air. This instrument combines them all in one reading. It looks like the answer for an instrument to direct the operation of all air-conditioning plants.

BUY GOOD PAINT: There are some paints manufactured and marketed to meet a price market, with the knowledge that they will not give good wear. Sometimes a new paint will be put on the market before the manufacturers really know the wearing qualities of the paint.

The fact that most all paints look alike in the can, clever advertising aimed principally at selling the paint, the fact that it requires some time after application before the user can tell for himself whether it stands up, are probably the reasons why inferior paints can be marketed in direct competition with high-quality, long-wearing paints.

The difficulty in checking up on wearing quality is most certainly taken advantage of by certain manufacturers. Don't "save" by buying cheap paint!

eral characteristics as indirect lighting, and it has a wide field of application for use in theatres from the vestiblue to the auditorium.

INDIRECT LIGHTING

Indirect lighting is characterized by the soft, subdued atmosphere created by low brightness and by the absence of well-defined shadows, as all of the light is diffused in being reflected from larger surfaces of ceiling or walls. This method permits of a very wide range of installation and design technique from simple suspended troughs or panels to built-in coves, niches, pockets, columns and other forms. It has special application to running lights in auditoriums.

The question of proper lighting goes beyond problems of the light source (lamp) and the fixture; it involves the colors of the paint used on the ceilings and walls as well. Every color of paint has a reflective value for light. For instance, pure, dead white has a reflection value as high as 80%. This means that of any given quantity of light striking the white surface, 80% of that light will be reflected back. In other words, even with a dead white surface there is a 20% loss by reflection. A gray color ranging from shades off black to a very light gray will have reflection values of from 18% to 70%, while buff color has a value of 65%, forest green 21%, pale blue 40%, pink 50%, and cardinal red only 20%.

This indicates that if the fixtures in a theatre are clean and properly lamped, and not too out-of-date, the lighting might be improved by decorating in a different color scheme.

One of the larger lamp manufacturing companies has developed a small, comparatively inexpensive light meter which could be used to good advantage by practically every manager. With such a meter one can very closely check the reflection factor of any surface with reference to any source or system of lighting, as well as check the light level in lobbies, foyers and auditoriums. In order to approximate the reflection percentage, take a reading at the particular surface with the photometer facing the light source, then take a reading facing the surface. Both readings will be in foot-candles. The second reading (facing the surface) divided by the first reading (facing the light) will be the reflection factor expressed as percentage when multiplied by 100.

MAINTENANCE AND RECONDITIONING

LIGHTING maintenance is covered briefly in two phrases—proper lamping, and keeping fixtures clean. The wattage of lamps to be used is of course to some extent a matter of opinion, but too often the opinion of the manager is influenced by a desire to economize in both lamp costs and current costs, at the expense of effect and appearance, and sometimes safety of patrons. One authoritative source says that auditorium light levels should be 5 foot-candles; foyers, 10 foot-candles; and lobbies, 15 foot-candles. However, it is my opinion that auditoriums can be lighted to a level of from 10 to 15 foot-candles, depending upon the location of light sources and the method of lighting, while foyers should be kept between 15 and 25 foot-candles, and lobbies at 30 foot-candles. With a light meter you could check your own theatre and definitely improve the lighting with proper lamping.

LAMP REPLACEMENT

As an incandescent lamp is burned, small particles of tungsten are evaporated from the filament and collect on the lamp bulb, forming an apparent dark discoloration of the glass. With the gas-filled lamp, the movement of the gas carries these particles of tungsten to the top of the lamp (in relation to the position in which it is burned) where they are less detrimental in absorbing the light than when deposited directly opposite the filament in the vacuum lamps. From the standpoint of light cost and light economy, a lamp should be replaced when the bulb has become noticeably discolored.

In many instances lamps have lost as much as 75% of their candle-power when they have become badly discolored. Lamps are designed to give an average life of 1,000 burning hours before they become appreciably discolored, when operated under proper conditions. The theatre business does not follow any of the findings of other large lamp users in handling lamp replacements; in our business we replace lamps only when they have burned out, and as a result our lighting effect is usu- ally spotty and our costs are high per lumen.

CORRECT VOLTAGE

The matter of using lamps of correct voltage warrants very serious consideration, both from the standpoint of cost and efficiency. Much has been written on this subject, but there seems to be mighty little attention paid to it. One of the lamp manufacturers has got out a small slide rule arrangement which shows clearly what happens when lamps are burned at too low and too high voltage, in respect to life, efficiency and cost. I am quite sure that a manager could obtain one of these at no cost other than the time it takes to write a letter and the postage.

CLEANING

All lamps and fixtures should be regularly cleaned. The period between cleanings will of course vary with locality and particularly the type of ventilating equipment. With direct lighting fixtures in foyers and lobbies, the dirt gathers on the exterior surfaces and is readily visible to anyone, but for some reason managers just don't seem to see it. With indirect lighting the dirt gathers on the inner reflecting surfaces and is generally not noticed until conditions become so aggravated that the illumination drops sometimes to but 30% of the original design illumination. A weekly or semi-monthly check with a light meter is the best way of determining when cleaning is necessary.

For cleaning glass portions of lighting fixtures it has been found that alcohol is far superior to soap and water, or to ammonia and water. It is just as cheap because the cleaning can be done more quickly, and it leaves the glass clear and bright.

IMPROVING COVES

In reconditioning indirect cove lighting it has been found that after cleaning the cove thoroughly, it is very beneficial to paint the inside of it with a zinc and aluminum paint. The effect obtained with a zinc and aluminum paint is somewhat different from that with white paint—it is very pleasing and refreshing.

Another method of improving old coves, especially when they are straight, is to line them with Alcoa Lighting Sheets. This usually can be easily done. The Alcoa sheet is a sheet of aluminum 20- or 24-gauge in thickness and comes in one size, 24x36 inches. These sheets come in two finishes, but the "diffuse" finish is the best for cove lighting. The sheets can be cut the desired width to fit the cove and bent to conform to the shape of the cove, and fastened by screws to the sides of the cove without disturbing the light strip. The advantage of this is that the cove can be easily cleaned with a rag and alcohol, and the reflection factor remains high afterward.

LIGHTING MODERNIZATION

As stated earlier, the proper use of light with color, of course, is a part of good showmanship. There is nothing that a manager can do that will so effect a spirit

It takes G-E MAZDA LAMPS to put new life into theatre displays

TO TAKE full advantage of today's new building materials, new lighting methods and modern lighting effects to give your theatre exterior maximum attraction value with minimum cost, you need General Electric MAZDA lamps.

Because these lamps that stay brighter longer actually give your theatre exterior the added sparkle, brightness and pulling power so important to "box office" results.

For detailed information on new ideas in theatre lighting with G-E MAZDA lamps, write General Electric Co., Dept. 166, Nela Park, Cleveland, O. Ask for a free illustrated copy of "New Lighting Methods for Theatre Lighting."

The Hollywood Theatre, LaCrosse, Wis., features brilliancy, sparkle, and pep by using G-E MAZDA lamps.

Exposed lamp letters, colorful moving borders, bright changeable attraction boards with new type Wagner silhouette letters and sparkling rows of lamps in the marquee ceiling invite people in.

of gaiety and happiness and pleasure in his patrons than the lighting of the theatre. Modern theatres are emphasizing the lighting effects and combining them with the architecture of the theatre. The interesting part of this development is that with a proper design motif, some sheet metal, glass brick, flashed opal glass, glass tubes, or textured glass, many impressive and interesting lighting schemes can be carried out without great expense. It only requires a little ingenuity.

Luminous architectural elements are effective in completely changing the whole appearance of a foyer, lobby or auditorium. These elements are usually designed to produce a uniform brightness; they are usually semi-indirect or indirect, and the effect is obtained with a covering over the lamps of highly diffusing material, or an exposed, uniformly illuminated diffusing reflective background.

For purely decorative effect the design may be based on whatever brightness is desired. For both decoration and illumination, the design must be based upon brightness and the required intensity or light level of the particular space. In any case, the spacing of lamps and their distance from translucent diffusing covers, or from diffusing reflective backgrounds, the shape of reflective surfaces, and proportion and size of unit, must be carefully studied in order to develop a scheme of maximum effectiveness.

Lighting methods are improving—lamp manufacturers, fixture manufacturers and architects are making the general public light-conscious. The several expositions and fairs have introduced to the general public many novel, interesting and pleasing light and color effects that we in the theatre business could well afford to adopt. Add to this the fact that stores, hotels, restaurants, night clubs and cocktail lounges are all installing very smart lighting effects and you get this answer: Theatres must light up to keep pace with the times.

P. A. Amplifier Applicable In Sound System Emergencies

PHOTOCELL connections permitting announcing amplifier to be used in emergency for film reproduction, feature a new line of five general-purpose theatre amplifiers developed by the Wholesale Radio Service Company of New York. Other features include automatic volume expansion, automatic volume control, beam power tubes, cathode ray tube, volume indicator, neo-dial controls, and reverse feedback. These may be described as follows:

In all recordings volume compression is necessary. In sound film, for example, recording the full volume range of even a medium-size orchestra would require a sound track approximately as broad as the film itself. (Volume compression is also used in radio broadcasting to avoid overloading the transmitter.) Volume expansion in the reproducing equipment restores the brilliance of the original sound.

VOLUME CONTROL

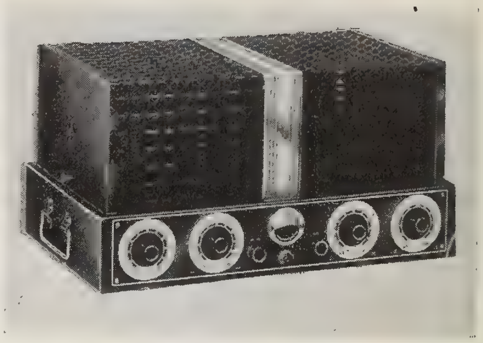
Automatic volume control is significant primarily in the case of microphone operation. It operates to keep the sound level relatively constant at all times and therefore permits the performer to use natural gestures and action before the microphone. He can turn his face away from the instrument, in the course of addressing the audience in intimate fashion, and otherwise behave almost entirely as if there were no microphone present at all. Sound volume remains approximately constant by virtue of the automatic control built into the amplifier.

Another advantage of automatic volume control relates to "squealing" caused by acoustic feedback, which is often troublesome in microphone work. This trouble is combatted by proper placement and pointing of microphones and speakers (either or both of which may be directional in characteristics, and thus afford still further control) by suitable setting of tone controls, and by keeping volume as low as practicable. In spite of all precautions, however, feedback may appear in some installations as a result of supplying the microphone with an excessively loud sound, even for a moment. Automatic volume control keeps the output sound below the point of feedback under such conditions.

Neo-dials are self-luminous controls seen by the operator, but invisible to everyone else if the amplifier is placed back to audience. Amplifiers so equipped can be placed openly in the orchestra pit or on a darkened stage.

REVERSE FEED-BACK

Reverse feed-back is the technical term applied to a new circuit that materially reduces sound distortion. A portion of the output sound is detoured from the loud speakers and fed back into the amplifier, phase being reversed in the process. If the feedback were sufficient, amplification would be cancelled entirely; instead, it is partially cancelled. But the type of distortion called harmonic distortion, which is present in the action of every amplifier, is also cancelled to the same degree, and in consequence is cut down to a lower level than would otherwise be possible.



Deluxe model amplifier, having features described.

VOLUME INDICATOR

The cathode ray volume indicator (identical in appearance and action with the "tuning eye" used in some radio receivers) is a visual monitor, by means of which sound can be kept at a pre-determined level regardless of changing input volume. For instance, overloud recording will be heard with excessive volume in the theatre unless the volume control is adjusted; but volume is not easily judged with the help of the projection room monitor alone. The cathode ray "eye" can be set to close at any volume previously determined as proper for the theatre under given audience conditions, and when so set offers an unmistakable visual indication of the output level. It will similarly indicate sound that is too low. In either case, the attention of the projectionist or other person in charge of the amplifier is drawn to the condition and, unless there is some dramatic reason for exceptional volume at that point, proper adjustment is made. The indicator "eye" once again reveals when correct volume has been reached.

Not all of the five new amplifiers have all of these features. Neo-dials, beam power tubes and reverse feed-back are omitted from amplifiers of less than 20 watts output power, and all of the features mentioned above are included only in the largest amplifier of the group (illustrated) which uses four-beam power tubes in the output stage, and delivers from 60 to 90 watts.

All of the models have mixers, permitting more than one source of sound to be used at the same time; a fading changeover from one source to another; and tone controls. Also, all types supply speaker field power and are adapted to crystal, velocity and other late types of microphones.

News Notes on the • THEATRE EQUIPMENT MARKET •

• A new projection lens, originally developed for DeVry projectors, has been made available by the manufacturers, Herman A. DeVry, Inc., of Chicago, to theatres using other equipment. An increase in light transmission from 20% to 40% is claimed by the manufacturer, who, however, withholds further information concerning the optical character of the lens except that it is the result of experiments to eliminate the use of cement to bind the elements without reduction of the speed of light transmission.

• A method of calculation which a theatre operator may apply to the determination of installation and operating costs of an air-conditioning system is set forth in a booklet just issued by the Carrier Engineering Corporation. A map of the United States is zoned climatically, four general types of distribution systems are indicated, and for each a tabulation of the various costs and charges is presented, based on the number of feature pictures shown each week. Installation cost per seat is also given, while the method may be used ultimately to find out how much of an increase in patronage will liquidate the initial cost and cover operating charges. The booklet is available to theatre owners, managers and engineers upon application to the Carrier Engineering Corporation, 850 Frelinghuysen Avenue, Newark, N. J.

• The new type of chairs recently brought out by the International Seat Corporation of Union City, Ind., has been installed in the Tower theatre, Interstate circuit house in Dallas, Tex., and Tri-State Theatres' Fort in Rock Island, Ill.

• A complete list of theatres in which Erpi has installed Western Electric "Mirrophonic" sound systems shows that on April 15, 883 theatres in the United States had been so equipped since introduction of the type less than a year ago, and 265 houses in foreign countries.

• New installations of complete air-conditioning systems reported by the Carbondale Division of the Worthington Pump & Machinery Corporation of Harrison, N. J., are for the Brighton, Peoples, Midwest, Julian and Dearborn theatres, all in Chicago. Seating capacities of these houses range from 680 to 2,000.

• Two 40-seat installations of hearing aids are reported by the Dictograph Products Company, New York, among recent installations of Acousticon theatre equipment. They were in Warners' Claridge theatre in Montclair, N. J., and the Paramount

The ring, holding the roundel in position over the reflector, consists in two telescoping elements, and when open, provides a semi-circular rim into which the roundel is slipped. The closing element is then drawn up and around the roundel, and locked to the other element.

Lighting Forms and Materials

these units reflect the light from color floodlights to produce an interesting texture.

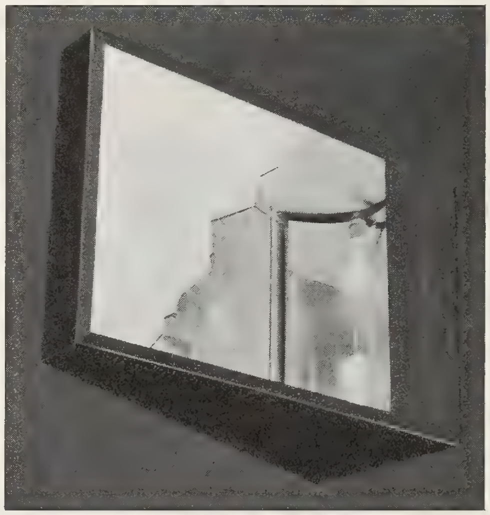
Light from a vertical sign aids the effect.

APPLICATION — Building facades.

TRANSLUCENT ELEMENTS

Translucent elements are being applied to buildings today as definite parts of the architectural design. Mr. Riddle's renderings elsewhere in this issue (see insert) show how the elements can be utilized by the theatre designer to create a palace of pleasure that will enjoy public patronage by virtue of its individuality and appointments. People like beauty, and these luminous elements enable the designers to create aesthetic effects that are pleasingly different.

Wedge Sign. As the name implies, this element is wedge-shaped. At the base of the wedge, a polished parabolic-shaped reflecting trough is installed with lamps at the focal point. The faces of the wedge are approximately 20° apart with a thin edge of from 3 to 4 inches. The light is then redirected from the flashed opal glass sides to the very end of the wedge. Relatively few of the higher-wattage lamps are used. The lettering may be of permanent type, or in the case of a girder sign, one of the silhouette changeable letter types may be used.



APPLICATION—1. Signs under marquee. 2. Vertical signs. 3. Foyer and lobby signs. 4. Fascia signs.

Glass Bricks. The fluted and embossed surfaces undergo artistic transformation when light is properly applied. An especially interesting lighting effect is obtained by using a horizontal row of Lumiline lamps, perhaps yellow in color, near the top of a row of bricks with a vertical row of Lumilines along the right or left sides of the bricks in a contrasting color such as surprise pink or emerald. An accent is provided by a small colored lamp at the opposite corner.

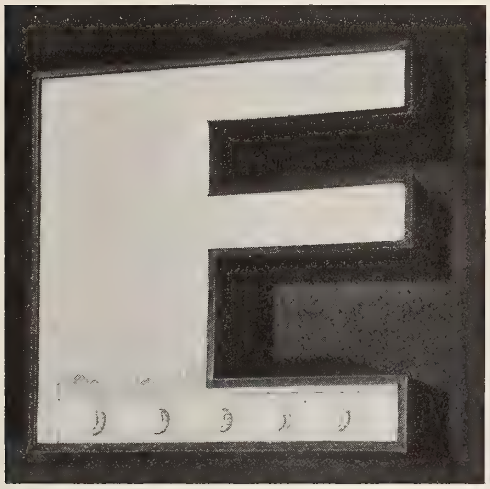
APPLICATION—1. Building facade. 2. Decorative elements in lobby and foyer.

Glass-Faced Letters. Glass-faced letters are smart and completely in accord with the modern trend. The diffusing glass assures a bold, smoothly luminous face, while the letters themselves have depth, assurance and a clean-cut daytime appearance. This type of letter is very legible at wide angles of view. The letters are lighted by lamps spaced one and one-half times the distance of the filaments from the glass. Relatively few lamps are needed, and even when some burn out the letter still retains its legibility.



APPLICATION—Outdoor signs.

EDITORIAL NOTE: Mr. Falge, author of the above article, disagrees as to the amount of light per square foot specified for Lumar marble in connection with the foyer treatment presented on the fourth page of the insert, "Lighting the Theatre." The amount is as given in the designer's material. However, Mr. Falge, who saw the insert after it was printed, asserts that in a foyer, Lumar marble would require far less wattage per square foot than the amount stated.

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE DEPARTMENT DEALING WITH ARCHITECTURAL DESIGN AND MATERIALS, DECORATION AND FURNISHINGS

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES: One of the principal functions of this department is to answer inquiries pertaining to preliminary considerations in the planning of a new theatre or the remodeling of an existing one. All questions receive the personal attention of Peter M. Hulsken, A.I.A., contributing editor of this department and a practicing architect who long has specialized in theatre design. He will be glad to offer advice, suggestions and criticisms. Working plans, however, cannot be supplied. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to Better Theatres, Rockefeller Center, New York. In publishing replies, only initials are used for identification.

THE QUESTION:

I AM PLANNING on remodeling my theatre that has gone through the flood and left the walls in bad shape. They were made and finished with concrete and plaster finish. Would like to have your suggestion as to how to refinish them for sound and what kind of material to use that is the cheapest, as I intend to spend the least amount that is possible at the present time.—B. H.

THE ANSWER:

IF THE WALLS are in such a shape that the mortar has been washed out of the joints, such joints should be raked out and pointed up with cement mortar. Patch all defects in plaster.

I suggest that you install a waterproof cement plaster wainscoting to a height of about 4 feet above the auditorium floor. From top of wainscoting to ceiling, cover walls with sound-absorbing tiles or boards. Tiles are available with which interesting decorative patterns can be made without further decoration. I believe this to be the cheapest method of renovating your theatre successfully.

THE QUESTION:

WE ARE THE owners of a theatre that is 40x100 and about 20 feet high. The iron beams are put every 16 feet. We are expecting to put apartments above the theatre, and we would like to know what to use to keep away the noise from the apartments.

According to the provincial regulation we do not have to put a concrete floor for the apartments. What would you suggest to use that would not be so expensive and would be very good for that matter.—J. D.

THE ANSWER:

I AM SURPRISED to learn that your regulations do not require you to fireproof the floor between the theatre and the apartments above. In most cases such fireproofing is mandatory.

To prevent noises from interfering with sound in the theatre, I suggest that you lay the floor joists which rest on the iron beams, on a heavy strip of felt. Fill spaces between joists with rock wool or any sound deadening material. Such a layer should be at least 4 inches thick.

THE QUESTION:

I AM PLANNING to build a new theatre with about 350 seats and have about $5,000 for the building. Do you have any plans or suggestions that I could use? I will have to have a balcony with outside entrance for colored patrons. —H. B. B.

THE ANSWER:

IT WOULD BE impossible to construct a theatre with a seating capacity of 350 seats for $5,000, even without a balcony. I doubt if you could build such a theatre for $20,000.

This department cannot furnish any working plans; an architect should be engaged for that purpose.

THE QUESTION:

I PLAN to build a new theatre. Would like to have bowling alleys in the basement and theatre on the ground floor. I thought of having the alley pits to extend beyond the main building about 12 feet. Do you think this could be done so as not to interfere with the movies because of the noise? I would of course use all materials that are sound proof. Would you recommend the two amusements in same building?—B. H. H.

THE ANSWER:

THERE ARE several theatres having bowling alleys in the basement; in fact, I have designed some myself and have never experienced any interference with good sound in the auditorium. Of course, such alleys should be carefully planned, especially great care should be taken to eliminate any vibration. Of course, the ceiling over the alleys would have to be suspended, and special spring clips used for suspension hangers.

It is well to have the pits extend beyond the building, since besides the vibration caused by the rolling of the balls, the largest amount of vibration and noise is due to the pits.

Manufacturers of bowling alleys will gladly give you information as to how the alleys should be constructed in order to eliminate as much vibration as possible.

THE QUESTION:

I HAVE a building 45½ feet wide by 120 feet deep and two stories high. The building formerly has been a theatre, seating close to 500. I intend to use 23 feet of this width, by 120 feet deep, for a new store room. That will then leave me a space of 22 feet wide by 120 feet deep in which I wish to construct a theatre. I have the facilities at the back end of the theatre for the heating and cooling plants, and it was my thought to set the box office approximately on the lot line, recessing the entrance and exit doors approximately 3 feet, or even with the back of the box office; then a small foyer and then a center aisle. Will you please give me a general outline to follow in my construction if the meager information listed above will help any at all.—M. R. B.

THE ANSWER:

THE ARRANGEMENT of the box office and entrance doors, as suggested, is satisfactory. I presume that you intend to eliminate the lobby and enter directly into a foyer. In this case, you should install solid panel doors between foyer and auditorium. I suggest that you make this foyer at least 10 feet deep. This will leave about 150 feet for the auditorium.

By using a center aisle there will be left room for eleven 20-inch seats across the width of the auditorium. If it is possible to increase the width of the auditorium to 23 feet it would be better to do so, as the center aisle could then be wider. You may obtain a seating capacity of 385 seats.

For box office and entrance doors you will require a width of at least 15 feet, hence not very much room is left on each side of the foyer for lounge or toilet rooms. Therefore it may be better, if possible, to place toilet rooms in the basement. There should be a lounge between the two toilet rooms, reached by a stairway from the foyer.

While you do not require a stage, it would be well to provide for a platform about 12 feet deep. Place the screen not less than 5 feet from the rear wall; the rest of this platform will occupy part of the necessary distance between the screen and first row of seats. You will require two exits, one on each side of the stage.

I think the largest picture you will be able to project is one 13½ feet wide. This is according to the arrangement of exits. The proscenium arch should be at least 16 feet high, and the floor of the platform should be 3½ feet above the lowest point of the auditorium floor.

THE QUESTION:

WE ARE GOING to remodel our theatre. It is an old Opera House (wood) 34 x 82 feet. Level floor. Stage 16 x 32 feet. Has a balcony. Has no basement. Ceiling 21 feet.

How high should ceiling be? What size should lobby be? What size should foyer be? How much slope for floor?—E. L.

THE ANSWER:

I REGET that you have not given sufficient information, especially about dimensions of your theatre, for me to give a comprehensive answer. If you intend to remove balcony, the ceiling should be 18 feet minimum, above high point of auditorium floor.

Not knowing the seating capacity, I am unable to give you the sizes of foyer and lobby. The minimum depth of lobby and foyer should be 12 feet.

To determine the slope of the auditorium floor, you could use the following method: Divide the distance from stage to standee railing into 15-foot sections, starting at rear. Construct front section (from stage), level; slope next section 9 inches, the next section 12 inches, and so on, increasing each successive section by 3 inches. This is minimum.

Enamelled Panels For Interior Walls

ENAMELLED tiles, having a wood-fibre base, which are applicable to theatre wall treatments, particularly for wainscoting and foyer and lounge panelings when strict economy must be observed, has been placed on the market by the Tylac Company of Monticello, Ill., under the names Tylac and Tylite. Each type is supplied in panels ⅛-inch thick, 4 inches wide and 5, 6 or 8 inches long, and are available in all standard colors.

Tylas differs from Tylite in being grooved to represent ceramic tiles. Both materials are laid directly on the wall with a special cement, and the decorative effect may be further modified by the use of metal mouldings.

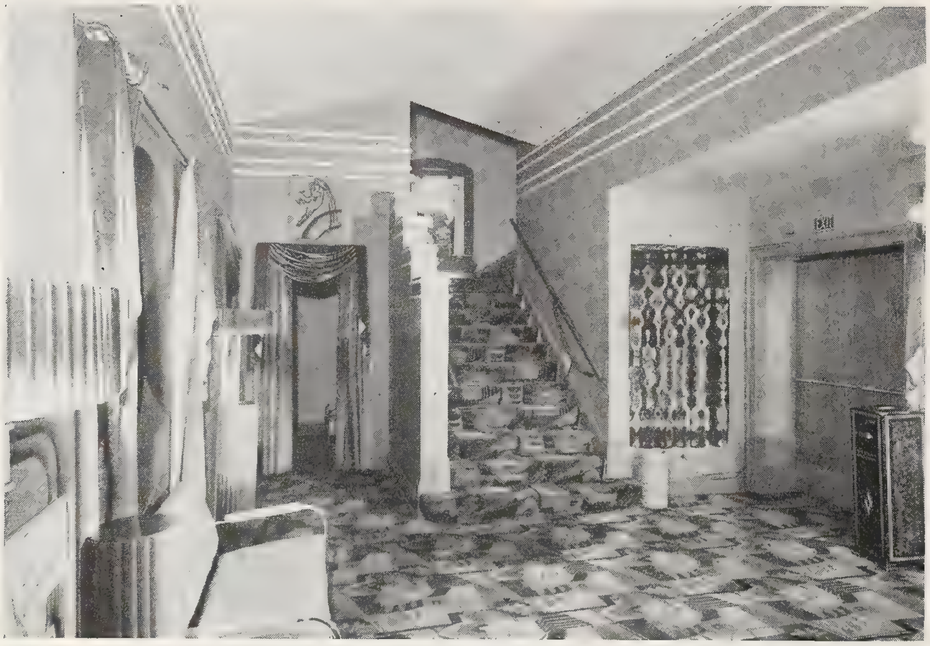
Converting an Old Store Building



View of foyer, looking toward stairs to mezzanine.

- How the Uptown theatre in Sedalia, Mo., was fashioned within the walls of an existing commercial structure — as described by the architect

By ROBERT O. BOLLER

THE UPTOWN, a new theatre recently opened in downtown Sedalia, Mo., as the sixth unit in a group of Central Missouri motion picture houses owned and operated by J. T. Ghosen, was constructed within the walls of an existing store and office building. Patrons for the Uptown are drawn not only from the 23,000 inhabitants of the local community, but also from a large trade territory surrounding the city, for Sedalia, located at the intersection of Federal Highways 50 and 65, is fortunate in the possession of fine concrete roadways extending in all directions.

The interior partitions, floors and roof of the original buildings were removed, only the four brick walls being left for use in the new construction. Over-all dimensions were 44 x 120 feet. Side walls for the altered structure were reinforced with a new steel frame built into channels cut into the old walls at strategic points. The owner secured an interest in the three party walls surrounding his property, and after extending the front wall upward with brick work, a new roof was built approximately 6 feet above the one removed from the original structure.

The front was built up still further in a dominant central feature consisting of three distinct set-backs. The altered exterior is treated in panels of light cream stucco with the central offsets finished in a deeper shade of cream. The middle panel is of smooth cement, decorated in a classic modern design of blue and gold, with white striping. Small panels between windows in the side walls contain harmonizing designs. Cast stone ornament consists of capitals and beltings of sandstone color on the upper portion of the front and a base around the vestibule and store fronts simulating pink granite.

Vestibule floors are of tile, carrying out the same diamond shaped patterns accentuated in the red, yellow, and black cement panels set into the sidewalk in front of the theatre.

A V-shaped marquee (constructed by Neo-Art Neon Company, Butler, Mo.), contains the theatre name and two attractions boards; it is trimmed with luminous gas lighting. No vertical sign is used.

The front portion of the building contains two shops, each 12½ x 20 feet, with entrances at the extreme sides of the front. All four front piers are utilized for display frame space.

The vestibule, which measures 16 x 4½ feet, contains a box office attached to a series of doors opening into the lobby. The lower section of the box office is of smooth cement plaster, in shades of blue, trimmed with bright metal mouldings, with a tile base of glossy black. Narrow panels of etched glass add a decorative note to the upper portion of the box office. Doors to the lobby are painted dark blue, striped with gold.

The particular advantage of this type of exterior for a remodeled building is its economy and workability. The old and new constructions are blended into one by the stucco treatment, and the central panel of decorated cement offers the owner an opportunity to give a complete change of atmosphere to his theatre periodically, at the very nominal cost of redecorating with new designs and colors.

LOBBY

The lobby, measuring 16½ x 10 feet, has side walls consisting of a series of offsets painted in shades of blue, which darken as they advance toward the central panel. The ceiling is of golden yellow and also features ascending structural breaks. Bright harmonizing colors in a stenciled frieze and a base of glazed black tile complete the color scheme. Recessed rubber mats are bordered with floor tile.

All wood trim in this space is lacquered with a blue metallic finish, striped with gold. Side wall and ceiling fixtures carry out the moderne note in opaque glass and chromium, with three-color effects.

FOYER

The foyer is 16 feet in depth from lobby doors to the partition separating foyer from auditorium, and is laid out on a T-shape plan. Side walls are of sand finish, painted a henna shade, with ceiling and decorative mouldings of bone white. Contrasting draperies of blue and gold silk velour, and a carpet of intermingled shades in a moderne design provide color notes. The foyer is used as a general lounge, and is furnished with moderne seats in leather and chromium finish.

Draped archways at either end of the foyer open into individual lounge and toilet

Stairways ascending at either end of the foyer divide at half-story landings, from which point one stair continues to the balcony seating, and the other leads to the unfinished mezzanine space, which is planned to accommodate an additional large lounge, toilets for men and women, and manager's office, to be completed at a later date (note mezzanine plan).

AUDITORIUM

The auditorium of the Uptown is 42 feet at its widest point, with a depth of 72 feet from the rear wall to the stage. Rust-colored walls of acoustical plaster ascend to a ceiling composed of natural color Temlock tiles, bordered by heavy beams decorated in a light shade of henna. Side wall mural frames, with overlay of ropes and tassels, are of white.

The proscenium opening is 26 feet x 21 feet and features an unusual corbeled spandril treatment. The stage is 17 feet in depth, without loft, but is large enough to accommodate an act-in-one. The maximum screen width is 22 feet; the image is 13½ feet wide.

Auditorium draperies are of blue and gold silk velour. Spandril and stage curtains are ornamented with a scintillating overlay of glass ornaments applied directly to the draperies. Ornamental painted designs in the stage end of the auditorium are executed in blue, white and gold, brightened by touches of rusty red, in classic moderne patterns.

Painting and decorating throughout the theatre were in charge of Norman E. Palmquist, theatre decorator of Kansas City.

The seating capacity of the entire theatre is 804. There are three banks of fully upholstered chairs (by Ideal Seating Company) in colorful patterns on the main floor, which seats 520. There are 284 balcony seats, of which 154 chairs behind the balcony cross aisle are reserved for colored patrons.

PROJECTION

The projection room measures 10 x 18 feet and is located at the rear of the balcony, with auxiliary room adjacent. Toilet and washroom facilities are provided in the projection room proper, and ventilation is provided by an exhaust system to the roof. Walls and ceiling are painted slate gray. Equipment includes two Simplex projectors, one Brenkert spotlight, and RCA sound system with Shearer two-way horns. The theatre is also equipped with an RCA public address system.

AIR SUPPLY

An automatically controlled air-conditioning system (by Carrier), with three 15-horse compressor units, serves the theatre proper. The ventilating system has a capacity of 30 cubic feet per seat per minute. An indirect system of steam heating is fired by an Auburn automatic coal stoker. The main ceiling of the entire building is insulated with a 4-inch layer of granulated rock wool.

THEATRE ACOUSTICS TODAY:

1. Auditorium Form Factors

• Beginning a series of articles comprehensively dealing with acoustical considerations in theatre planning, construction, remodeling and decoration

By C. C. POTWIN

HOW SHALL I PLAN my theatre for good acoustics? Today this is a question of vital importance to every exhibitor. He may build or modernize his theatre to provide the utmost in comfort for his patrons and an interior which appeals to their aesthetic tastes, but he cannot operate that theatre successfully with the handicap of poor acoustics. The public has become more "sound conscious" as a result of progressive improvements in sound recording and reproduction, and now demands good hearing conditions in those theatres it patronizes.

Many advances have been made in the science of acoustics since the early days of talking pictures. Extensive research in both the theoretical and practical aspects of the problem has led to the development of new and more efficient methods of sound control. These newer methods have contributed in no small measure to a higher standard of sound quality in theatres. The purpose of these articles is to explain and to stress the importance of the various factors affecting the design and acoustic treatment of modern motion picture theatres (and here the writer should like to declare his indebtedness to Mr. G. T. Stanton, manager of the Technical Consulting Department of Electrical Research Products, Inc., for his very valuable suggestions relative to the material presented).

A relatively large number of new theatres are being built throughout the country today, and a great many existing theatres which have been in operation for a number of years are being remodeled to conform as much as possible with today's standards. Every theatre presents its individual problem of sound control, and the fact cannot be emphasized too strongly that acoustics must be given fundamental consideration in both new design and modernization.

ACOUSTICS BASIC

The exhibitor knows that certain fundamental factors, such as the requirements for correct seating, good vision and effective projection, must be determined in the design of any theatre before the detailed work of architectural planning can be undertaken. He cannot overlook the fact that acoustic requirements must also be determined in the original design stage. The size and shape of the auditorium are fundamental factors affecting the control of sound in theatres, and they influence the quantity and distribution of the sound-absorbing material to be installed; consequently acoustics becomes an important consideration even at the time the lot is selected.

Too frequently the detailed plans for a new theatre are drawn and the decorative scheme is established before any consideration is given to acoustics. If an analysis then indicates that the shape will be unfavorable, or that the acoustic treatment actually required will not conform with the proposed decorative scheme, radical changes in the detailed plans may be required. If these changes cannot be made readily, it may become necessary to effect a compromise between the best method of sound control and the proposed design. Needless to say, such compromises frequently lead to a definite sacrifice in both sound quality and appearance.

Today, the exhibitor is "selling" sound in a highly-competitive field and he cannot afford to allow a sacrifice in any phase of the engineering problem when such a sacrifice may ultimately affect his box-office receipts. If careful consideration is given to acoustics in the early stages of either new design or modernization, unnecessary compromises of this nature can be avoided. The theatre may then be planned in such a manner that the architectural design, the decorative scheme and the acoustic treatment combine to present an interior which is not only highly pleasing artistically, but also affords the very best hearing conditions for the patrons. Giving full consideration to all factors affecting the control of sound in theatres, it will also be axiomatic that to plan for good acoustics in the original stages of new design or modernization is far more economical than to correct for poor acoustics in the final stages of theatre planning.

THE SIZE AND SHAPE OF THE AUDITORIUM

MORE THAN 700 new theatres have been built in this country within the past three years. It is interesting to note that more than 85% of this number were designed to seat less than 800 persons. Since the majority of these theatres were built in widely separated parts of the country it is apparent that design of the more intimate theatre represents the present trend in the field of new construction.

In addition to having several aesthetic and economic advantages over the large theatre, the small theatre lends itself more readily and inexpensively to sound control. The enclosed volume is generally appreciably less than the maximum desirable limit of 150 cubic feet per seat. If the shape of the auditorium is favorable, this low volume per seat definitely limits the degree of reverberation to be encountered. When the volume per seat is high, the reverberation period is usually long and more surface acoustic treatment is required. Consequently, in the original design stage

BEST PROPORTIONS

In considering the factor of shape, it is an established principle that the best distribution of sound energy and control of reflections are obtained in theatres where (a) the length of the auditorium proper is two and one-half times the height; and (b) the width is one and one-half times the height. This ratio should determine the shape of the lot on which the theatre is to be built.

It is appreciated that in cities and in large communities where available space is limited, it may not always be possible to secure a lot which will guarantee this ratio. When the proportions deviate widely from the ideal, steps must then be taken in the original design of surfaces to offset the acoustical defects introduced by shape.

LONG AUDITORIUMS

There are two common defects resulting from unfavorable proportions; namely, a multiplicity of sound reflections between parallel surfaces, and an excessive amount of direct reflections from individual surfaces. Multiplicity of reflections is encountered principally in the long theatre, or so-called "shooting gallery," where the length is greater than twice the width. Plan A in Figure 1, shows a typical design of this type. Applying a ray analysis to this plan, it will be observed that sound reflections originating at the side wall at point X travel back and forth a number of times and in a direct path between these surfaces as they progress from the front to the rear of the theatre. Naturally, this constitutes only one very limited phase of the reflections between these surfaces.

The many other series of reflections, either originating along the side walls or reaching these areas indirectly, will also tend to reflect back and forth many times between these parallel surfaces. This multiplicity of reflections produces standing wave patterns and "flutter" conditions which tend to prolong the decay of sound in the horizontal plane and thus give the effect of a longer time of reverberation than would normally be apparent if the same theatre had more desirable proportions.

The most efficient method of offsetting the effect of multiple reflections in the original design of the long theatre is to provide for non-parallelism between the side-wall surfaces. This may be accomplished most efficiently by dividing or "breaking-up" the side-wall areas into triangular sections in the manner shown on Plan B in Figure 1. With this change in contour, it will be observed that the sound is reflected more at random from the side walls and that these reflections are not confined to a direct path between surfaces. Consequently, standing wave patterns and flutter conditions are efficiently reduced, with the result that a more normal reverberation period is effected.

The provision for non-parallelism between surfaces does not permit the elimination of sound-absorbing material from the side walls in the average case. It does, however, offset those defects explained above which would alter the correct amount and best distribution of this treatment. For example, in a long theatre with absolutely parallel side walls, it is generally impossible to provide sufficient acoustic treatment to minimize the effect of multiple reflections and still maintain the proper gradation of "liveness" from the front areas to the rear portions of the auditorium.

The excessive amount of treatment normally required to overcome these reflections not only reduces the reverberation time to a point appreciably below the minimum desirable limit, but also effects a very rapid diminution of the high frequencies as the sound leaves the source. This usually results in a noticeably "dead" condition at the rear sections of the seating area and also effects an unbalanced absorption of the low and high frequencies throughout the auditorium. Both of these conditions are detrimental to the acoustics of the theatre.

The design of non-parallel surfaces for the long theatre may take several different forms, depending upon the architectural treatment desired. The triangular scheme shown on Plan B in Figure 1, is very effective from an acoustic standpoint and has been applied to give a very pleasing architectural effect with indirect lighting.

[*In his next article, to appear in the June 26th issue, Mr. Potwin will continue his discussion of design factors, with consideration of the square-type auditorium, and in addition he will discuss construction methods in relation to acoustics. COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

Projection Needs Men Who Use Their Heads as Well as Hands

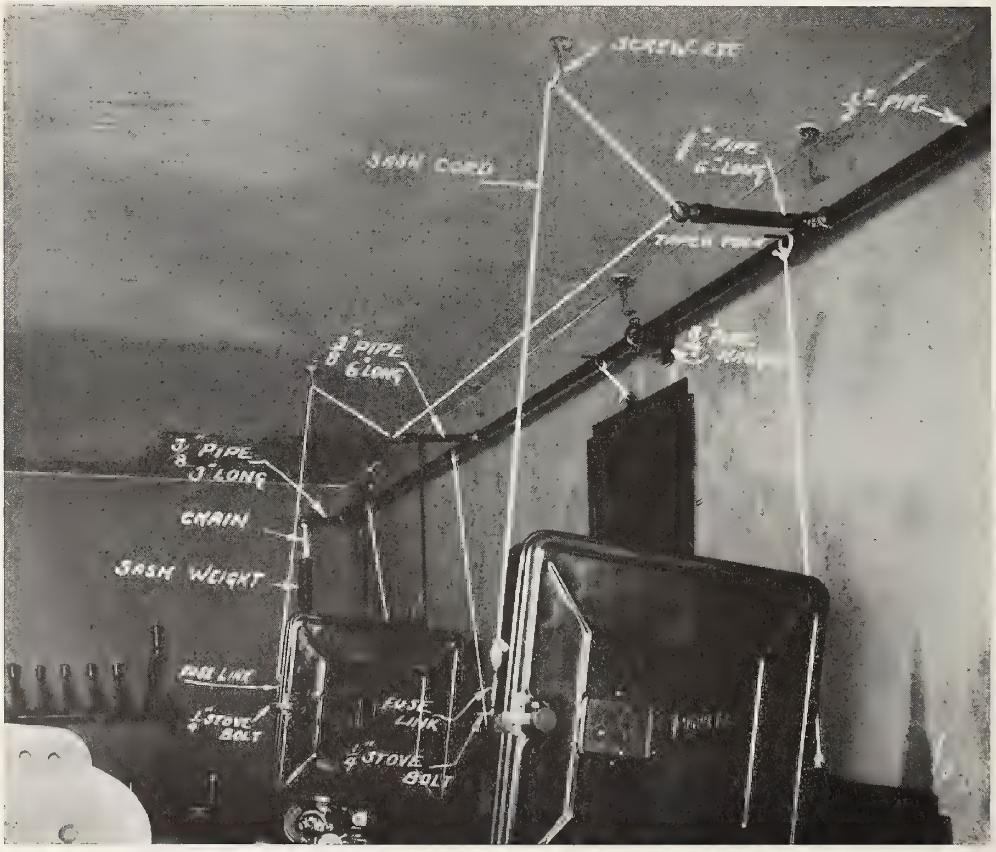
BEFORE ME as I write is a letter from a projectionist in the Middle West. Its writer had previously forwarded descriptive details of a procedure he had evolved and put into practical use in his projection room. It seemed so excellent that I prepared an article descriptive thereof for publication. However, not being certain I had correctly interpreted all details, a copy of the article was forwarded him for examination and correction in the event I had at any point misunderstood.

The article began with complimentary remarks concerning the man himself, pointing out the fact that he had applied his powers of reasoning to his work and by so doing had evolved something that would very possibly assist other projectionists and therefore the profession as a whole.

He replied promptly, assuring me my interpretation of his idea was correct, but earnestly requested that I say nothing complimentary concerning him, since did I do so it would secure for him a lot of razzing and ridicule from fellow projectionists. Said he, "In this locality one is not expected to voice either ideas or opinions."

There seems but one way in which that can be understood—men in that locality resent the attempt of brother projectionists to do anything that may attract favorable attention to themselves, even though it may lead to improved projection practices.

Ridiculing men for advancing ideas is childish. Every man worthy of calling himself a real projectionist will be glad to honor any fellow projectionist who advances an idea of possible value. Our engineers are indispensible. They have done and are doing truly marvelous work, but for the most part they are in laboratories, working more or less upon theoretical bases, which very often cannot be made to fit in with practice until all the elements of practice are fully known. Of the thousands of men in projection rooms in this country and Canada, we have a goodly number who really study their work and could present valuable ideas did they not fear being "kidded" or scoffed at by colleagues who never bother to have any ideas themselves.



Shutter control system described in adjoining article, "Shutter Control with Fuses at Magazines".

SHUTTER CONTROL WITH FUSES AT MAGAZINES

WHILE I AM opposed to metallic fuse control of projection room fire shutters, holding they cannot possibly be made to "let loose" quickly enough to serve the purpose of maximum safety requirements, I must admit the officers of the Connecticut police, who have charge of theatre matters in that State, have devised an excellent scheme employing that type of fuse. I present it, with the recommendation that authorities of other States and of cities study its details. It is rank nonsense to locate fuses near the ceiling when safety demands action in, at most, two or three seconds.

Common sense tells us that to insure safety against panic, no theatre patron must be able to glimpse either blaze or smoke. To bring that about it is absolutely essential that port shutters fall in three seconds after a fire starts.

Examining the accompanying picture, we see that the fuses are located on the front of the projector magazine, which is perhaps as close as they may be placed to the seat of an aperture film fire, as things now are. If I may be permitted to say so, it has long seemed to me that projector manufacturers might, without adding substantially to cost, arrange for the location of a fuse inside the upper magazine at a point where the blaze would contact it as soon as it reached the magazine interior.

Another important and highly commendable point in the Connecticut arrangement is that the fuse is attached to a metal ring, to the opposite side of which the master cord is attached. This ring is slipped over a headless stove bolt attached to the magazine, so that by a mere flip of the finger the projectionist may instantly slip it off the bolt, thus releasing all shutters. I compliment the Connecticut authorities upon their development of the plan.

IMPROVED PROJECTION ROOM LIGHTING

J. LYDON, projectionist of the Hamilton theatre in Dorchester Mass., writes interestingly as follows:

"Dear Pop: Following your advice I have the entire front wall of my projection room painted black. Not only that, but the other walls are black up about one quarter of their height. The ceiling and rest of the walls are painted with aluminum.

"Just at the rear of the projectors, one located halfway between them and one somewhat to their right and left, three 60-watt incandescent bulbs are suspended from the ceiling, 8 feet from the floor. These bulbs are in half-round, opaque shades, so fixed that their open sides face the rear wall. They are for use when projection is in progress and supply fully adequate illumination for every ordinary need. They are wholly out of view, so that there is no interference with the view of the screen. I find this plan of lighting by reflected light to be very easy on the eyes.

"A similar lamp is over the rewind table, under an opaque shade, the edges of which are below the eye level, and the lamp itself is wholly hidden from view. It is kept burning only when work is being done at the rewind table.

"For use before the show starts, or in case of emergency when brilliant lighting is required, I have a 100-watt lamp installed near the ceiling, at its right, front corner. This, in conjunction with the other lights, supplies brilliant illumination to all parts of the room, the latter lamp having a flood reflector in back of it. This lamp supplies excellent emergency or working light even when the other lamps are not burning.

"And now another suggestion: It is quite possible to install, at very low cost, most excellent emergency lighting that will flood all parts of the auditorium should the juice fail or a main fuse blow. It is working perfectly in this theatre. From some automobile dealer, secure as many second-hand auto headlights as may seem desirable, the number varying with dimensions and conditions in different auditoriums. One or two at most, should be sufficient, in small theatres having no balcony. In such an auditorium install one such lamp in upper rear corner—or two, one in each rear corner—set at full flood. If there is a balcony, it will, of course, be necessary to install one or two to illuminate it, and one or two below.

"Wire these lamps to a suitable switch conveniently located in the projection room. They may be equipped with either 6- or 12-volt lamps, depending upon the battery voltage it is desired to apply. We have RCA sound with 12-volt batteries.

"The lamps in question should cost no more than one dollar each. When properly installed, the projectionist may, in case of emergency, flood the whole auditorium instantly and adequately."

My compliments, Brother Lydon. Your projection room lighting apparently is an excellent modification of the plan described and recommended in the Bluebook of Projection. It represents common sense and good practice in projection room lighting. Just why those planning theatre projection rooms continue to impose a heavy handicap on projection, flooding the projectionist's eyes with white light emanating from brilliant spots of light wholly exposed to the projectionist's eyes, surpasseth understanding. It would seem easy to comprehend the utter impossibility of obtaining a critically sharp view of a distant screen through an opening of restricted size that is surrounded by a well-illuminated surface, particularly after the eyes have gazed (as in most cases they must do) at a brilliant spot of light over the projector, or immediately at its rear.

The proposed emergency lighting scheme appeals to me as very practical. Certainly, as Lydon says, it may be very cheaply applied.

Long ago, before any of us had studied projection problems at all, it was the custom to flood the projection room with light. When large theatres were built, following custom, they flooded the projection room with light, whereupon that practice became fixed. Any man who will stop to consider the matter cannot possibly fail to see that it is wholly wrong, yet prying men away from custom is some considerable job. Even at this late day we find architects who should know better, planning projection room lighting that is not at all suited to the operations of the projectionist.

I have said, and do now repeat, that projection rooms should be lighted, during projection, wholly by light reflected from the rear ceiling and upper part of the rear wall. Any competent optician will tell you this will enable the projectionist to have a very much more critical view of the screen, and therefore be able to obtain and maintain sharp focus and to observe minor faults appearing upon the screen much more clearly. There is no reasonable reason why such illumination cannot be made to serve every requirement very well indeed, brilliant room illumination being made available when an emergency arises.

TREATMENT FOR REAR SOUND REFLECTION

JOHN L. MENNIFEE of Kansas City, Kan., presents this problem:

"My eldest son owns a small-town theatre not far from here. He built the house after his own ideas and has the following difficulty, which has been present ever since he opened last year. At a point about 25 feet from the screen, the sound is very much louder than it is anywhere else in the auditorium. The excess sound diminishes as one moves in any direction away from this point. It is so bad that when the sound is at what he calls the right level at this point, it is much too low at sides or rear.

"Another trouble is that at any volume level, at the point named, the sound is not clear, although it is elsewhere. Side walls and ceiling have been soundproofed, but the rear wall has not. It has a hard, smooth finish. The rear wall extends in a curve, and I have an idea it somehow forms the crux of the matter, although I have been unable to make my son believe it. He follows your Comment closely, usually accepting what you say as fact. Will you not, therefore, examine into this matter and give us the benefit of your views."

Sound is reflected from smooth surfaces in the same manner as light. That is to say, its angle of reflection is equal to the angle at which it meets the reflecting surface. I agree with you, the curved wall is probably—in fact, I might say undoubtedly—the source of the trouble. I believe it forms the arc of a circle, the center of which is the point of greatest sound loudness, or concentration.

This diagnosis of the trouble is corroborated by Mr. C. C. Potwin of the acoustical engineering department of Electrical Research Products, Inc., to whom the problem was referred with respect to an effective remedy. He replies:

"There is no question but that the rear wall is the source of major difficulty in this house. A highly efficient treatment, such as 1-inch reinforced rock wool blanket mounted on 2 x 2-inch furring, will be required for the entire area, extending down from the ceiling to a 4-foot wainscot, to reduce substantially prominent first reflections originating at this surface.

"The use of a trial treatment of draping material to prove that sound absorption is essential for this surface is an acceptable scheme, providing, of course, the drapes are of heavy weight velour or the equivalent, hung at approximately a 50% gather and at a point several inches out from the rear wall surface. In consideration of the curvature and concentrating effect of the rear wall, the draping material must be heavy to indicate even a small degree of improvement. Drapes alone should not be considered as a permanent form of treatment, since they do not provide the full amount of sound absorption required for this surface."

MOISTENING DRY BRITTLE FILM

ORVAL E. SELLERS of the Board of Education in Akron, Ohio, salutes me, "Dear Pop," and goes on to say:

"My job includes the booking, handling and repairing of both the 16- and 35-mm. film subjects used in our public schools. As a rule these prints are on a series of circuits, reaching my office for inspection and repair only about once in two weeks. They are projected from four to eight times daily on projectors equipped with from 750- to 1,000-watt lamps. The film cans have a humidor in the base of each. In lieu of water we have been using two different solutions, one made in New York City, the other in Chicago. We place blotters moistened with one of the solutions in the humidors, but find the prints lose their flexibility, becoming dry and brittle notwithstanding. I wrote what is supposed to be a very high seat of film knowledge, but their answer was not so hot. I therefore come to the Old Reliable, asking what, if anything, can be done to relieve the situation described."

The can humidor method is ineffective for the reason that, while in the can, the film, being wound more or less tightly into a roll, has only its outer layer and edges exposed to the moist air created by the solution or by water.

I have employed two methods with excellent effect. There is no danger of injury to the emulsion with either, provided common sense be used and the film not be rewound until it is thoroughly dry.

Method number one: Construct a cylinder, 6 feet in diameter by any desired length, eight feet being ample to contain a 2,000 foot reel of film. This cylinder may have solid ends of board, with a center one to prevent excessive sagging tendency of the slats. Around these "wheels" nail ordinary "lattice" strips (about 3/8-inch thick by 1 1/4 inches wide) spaced their own width apart. Mount this cylinder so that it may be rotated and attach to one end a suitable crank for that purpose. To hasten the drying process a small motor might be connected to rotate the cylinder slowly throughout the drying period.

In front of this cylinder place a shallow, water-filled pan; attach one end of a dry film to the cylinder circumference near one end of same, and by rotation of same draw the film through the water slowly enough so that in the process the emulsion becomes impregnated with water, all oil having first been thoroughly cleaned off. Wind the film on the cylinder, emulsion side out, of course, and leave until the emulsion is thoroughly dry. Then mount upon the reels.

The other method requires less preparation, but takes more time. Obtain clean full-size barrels. In the bottom of each place a gallon or so of water, over which place a suitable guard (chicken wire, for example). Unwind a reel of film loosely upon this guard, cover the barrel tightly and leave until the film becomes suitably pliable.

Either of these methods may be tried out on a piece of dry film about 2 feet long; note the time required for results, as well as the effect. They are the only two methods I know of that have proved effective, reliable and very low in cost, and that may be applied anywhere by anyone.

OIL LEVEL IN SIMPLEX INTERMITTENT

RAY LE ROY, projectionist of the Granada theatre in Port Isabel, Texas, inquires, "How full should the standard Simplex projector intermittent oil well be? Have heard various ideas concerning the proper oil level. On my single bearing, front shutter Simplex, the only guide is a small hole near the top of the casing. The projectionist here before me advised that I carry the oil level up to this hole. Another projectionist, who has had twenty years' experience, advises an oil level that will just cause the star to contact the oil as it rotates; in other words, an oil level below the star shaft level. There is a lot of leakage in the wells, so I am of the opinion the latter is correct. How can I tell when the oil has that level?"

You evidently have a very old model Simplex; probably one that does not have the oil retention grooves in the intermittent shaft which later mechanisms are provided with. I quote from the Simplex instruction book:

FIRST MAN LICENSED IN NEW YORK CITY

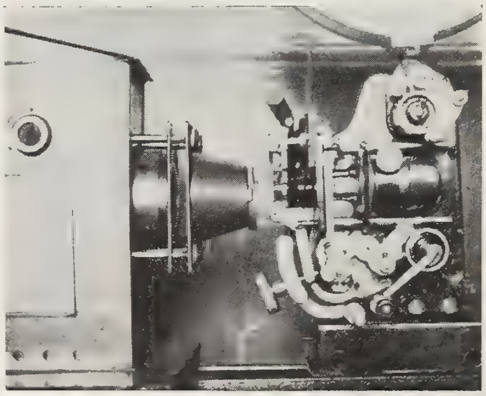
At the American Projection Society banquet in October, was a guest, Charles A. Burton, who was, according to documentary evidence, the first motion picture projectionist to be licensed in the City of New York. More than that, Burton was a theatre manager and film distributor away back in 1898. Still further, he was instrumental in the enactment of the first of the New York City ordinances concerning safety of patrons.

SCOTCH—A BLEND OF MANY PARTS

He mighta spent his time aplayin' the bagpipes. But projection was James A. Farmer's hobby as well as his vocation, so he made himself a projector for use at home.

That was when Brother Farmer lived in Scotland. Now he's projectionist at the Hollywood theatre in Niagara Falls, Ontario, from which he writes, sending the pictures reproduced here. Says he:

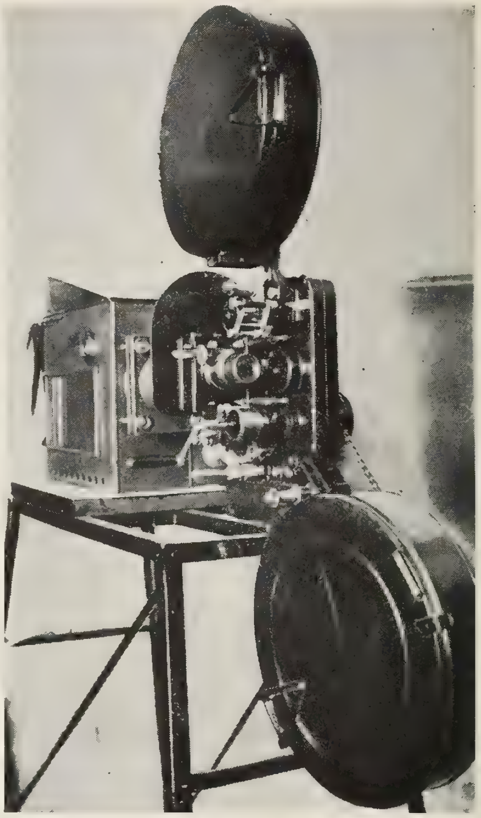
"While looking through an old projection book, I came across a couple of snapshots of a projector which I built as a hobby a number of years ago in Scotland, and maybe it would be of interest to fellow projectionists who have hobbies of a similar nature.



Mechanism of Mr. Farmer's projector.

"The mechanism is part of an old Kamm projector; the shutter, lens holder and pressure pad I made myself. Note the large sprockets, a valuable asset in the days of mangled prints! The raising and lowering of the intermittent sprocket effects framing. The top magazine is part of a Gaumont projector, while the lower magazine with chain drive and slip clutch is home-made.

"The lamphouse is a 'Butchers, Jr.' and is equipped with an acetylene gas jet, which I devised myself. The jet is composed in part of a copper tube tapped to receive six 32-litre burners, each placed in line with the other. The gas from the generator is fed to the lamp through a gas bag. The projector stand is made of angle iron and stabilized with steel rods.



All set up and rarin' to go!

"I spent many happy hours working on this machine, which finally became a source of enjoyment to us all at home."

And a nice-looking job it is, Friend Farmer, everything considered. Also, it shows that your work means more to you than a mere meal ticket, which is well, for when a man's job does mean more than that to him, he's sure to get a lot more fun out of life.

STILL ANOTHER JITTERS CASE

Earnest W. Patrick, chief projectionist of the Plaza theatre in Great Bend, Kan., has had the jitters—or his projector has. He writes, "I am interested in the Redding, Calif., case of 'jitters.' The Plaza, where I work, seats 640 people. Use Bausch & Lomb lenses to project a picture 20½ feet wide. Light sources are Ashcraft low-intensity, projectors are Simplex, sound is Western Electric. Have been on the job here nine years. I am trying to get friend manager to install Ashcraft suprex arc lamps, Mirrophonic sound and Super-Simplex projectors, but have not made the grade yet, though here's hoping!

"And now for the jitters matter: As you will recall, back in front shutter days, many projector mechanism frames were warped out of shape, the aperture plate thus being pulled out of true. The gate, or trap door, itself was not always affected, and, of course, would no longer fit the warped plate properly. There was, in bad cases, a very considerable clearance between portions of the tension shoes and plate tracks when the trap door was locked shut, and this sometimes produced exactly the effect Brother Champney described.

"About half a year ago a 'jitter' appeared on my screen. Both my boss, who is himself a projectionist, and I, worried over it without success until the above described warping and its effect came to mind. Next morning I removed the upper magazine, firetrap assembly and the fire trap door (as it now is called by many) and laid a steel rule upon the trap shoes. Could hardly believe it, but I was able to slide a thin, worn dime under it. I immediately ordered new parts, selecting the new castiron film trap, T-171-E, and installed the same, whereupon Mr. Jitters made his exit, the picture being steady as the proverbial rock.

"I doped Champney's jitters case, in which the trouble only appeared after considerable film had been projected, thus: New, waxed film against cold steel would develop considerable resistance, which would tend to hold it steady. When the steel warms up to normal temperature, as after one reel is projected, there is less resistance, whereupon the jitters movement occurs."

I thank Patrick for his description of jittery things he has encountered. Discussion of cases such as this by working projectionists has great practical value.

DISTANT FIELDS FOR GREENER GRASS!

FROM THE Midwest comes this letter, the name of the town being, for obvious reasons, withheld:

"While it is true we are separated by distance, we have been friends since the old Moving Picture World days, for I have had 24 years of experience in projection, during all of which time I have been your friend and pupil. I now seek advice, with full confidence that you will give all aid possible.

"I take pride in the fact that I have served one company for many years, finally winning advancement to the post of supervisor of projection for the company, which owns and operates a circuit of theatres. My duties include the selection and purchase of all projection equipment; also, I have general charge of all projectionists.

"I feel, Mr. Richardson, that so far as this company is concerned, the top of the ladder has been reached, since it would be impossible for me to be further advanced. I therefore would like to make a change, and the most practical method, it seems to me, would be to contact some company in a foreign country that would be able to use a man of my experience. If, therefore, you know of any such possible opportunity, will you please advise me."

My reason for publishing this is that similar requests are received from time to time. Quite recently one of similar nature came from a Western projectionist who wished to contact steamship companies that employed projectionists as part of their ship crews.

Because of my regard for this man I did make an effort in his behalf, but it failed, and for a very definite reason: Such companies always have available a number of projectionists in cities where their offices are in. They therefore are able to secure recommended men whom they can contact personally and decide whether or not they seem suitable in matters other than projection skill. It may be readily understood that it is a serious matter to have men come from some distant point, only to find a bit later that, while possibly very competent projectionists, they still are otherwise unacceptable. For that reason companies usually insist upon employing only men whom they can contact personally before availing themselves of their services, under which condition refusal to take them on causes no embarrassment.

But when it comes to foreign service, the matter is still further complicated. I believe all English-speaking countries now have a supply of projectionists competent to fill any position offered. This may be equally true of non-Englishing-speaking countries, but if it is not (and I believe some such countries are quite backward in this respect) it would be very difficult, if not impossible, for one of our men to succeed if unable to speak the language of the country, while it is likely he would have to handle strange equipment and work with other men of very different psychology.

"THE CLIQUE"

The following bit of "potree" is culled from the IATSE Eleventh District BULLETIN, edited by my good friend, good union man and able projectionist, Arthur Milligan, up in Toronto, Ont. It is by Brother F. W. Cooper, member of Local 56, Montreal.—F. H. R.

What is "The Clique?" 'Tis a body of men,
Who attend every meeting, not just now and then;
Who don't miss a meeting unless they are sick,
These are the men that the grouch calls "The Clique."

Who don't make a farce of that sacred word, "Brother."
Who believes in the motto—"Help one another";
Who never resort to a dishonest trick,
These are the men that some call "The Clique."

The men who are seldom behind in their dues,
And who from the meetings do not carry news;
Who attend to their duties and visit the sick—
These are the men that the crank calls "The Clique."

We should all be proud of members like these,
They can call them "The Clique" or whatever they please.
But there are some people who always find fault,
And most of this kind are not worth their salt;
They like to start trouble, but will seldom stick;
They like to put all the work on "The Clique."

A MACHINE TO PUNCH NICE HOLES IN FILM!

SEVERAL LETTERS have arrived recently protesting against a certain film punching machine now being marketed. Kenneth W. Hanson of Leesburg, Fla., says, "Examining an advertising sheet being put out by a New York City corporation, the general catalogue of which quotes, on its inside cover page, a letter from you commending the said company, I find advertised for sale a machine for punching changeover cue marks in film. Attached find a sample clipped from a three-reel serial, each reel of which bore these changeover punch holes, none less than four and some with double that number. From their uniform locations it is evident that the holes are punched by some such device as that advertised. I reported the matter to the exchange at once. Surely something should be done to promptly stop this abuse."

The film clipping contained ten of these marks. Presumably there were more, since from the illustration in the sales sheet, the machine punches four at a clip. I immediately took this matter up with the firm issuing the bulletin, who replied, in part:

"The device in question is manufactured by the Chicago firm that puts out the reel end alarm and several other patented devices, some of which serve to make the lot of small town projectionists more comfortable. . . . We, for one, will gladly cooperate with you in soft pedaling this gadget if it does any particular harm. We believe, however, an article in your widely read Comments in BETTER THEATRES, together with a hint to the other companies now selling the device would serve a very useful purpose."

For years we have struggled to eliminate such abuses as film mutilation, to the end that multiple reel subjects might be projected with perfect continuity. No projectionist should be allowed to punch holes in film merely for his convenience, with a machine or any other kind of implement.

CARBON LENGTHS BASED ON RUNNING TIMES

RAY HOLTZ of the Bonham theatre in Fairbury, Nebr., writes, "I am at present assistant manager and assistant projectionist at the Bonham theatre. Started training for projection work in 1929, at the age of 15. Have studied your Bluebooks of projection and your enlightened Comments in BETTER THEATRES, both of which have taught me to work with my head as well as with my hands. I am a licensed amateur transmitter, call letters W9FJL (160 meter fone, 40 meter CW).

"In your Comments, May 1st issue, I noted the trouble a California projectionist is having with carbon stub waste. Have checked burning time of carbons and think I may have a possible solution to the carbon waste problem.

"Our positive carbons are 12 inches long. Allowing one minute for the burning in of new carbon crated, positives (we use 50 amperes) will serve to project 4000 feet of film (two double reels), leaving a stub 4⅝ inches in length.

"If it would be possible to induce the carbon manufacturers to add, say 1½ inches to positive carbon length, it would then burn 61 minutes and permit the projection of 6000 feet of film, leaving a 2½-inch stub, the ½-inch remaining in the carbon holder. I have checked this very accurately and find these stubs to be about the same for all 50-ampere, 35-volt arcs. What, may I ask, do you think of this? The negative is okay, with a 3-inch stub on four double reels, or 81 minutes of time."

I think enough of it, brother, to forward your letter to Mr. E. R. Geib, manager of the Arc Department of the National Carbon Company.

SMALLER SHIPPING CASES FOR BIG REELS

EDMUND M. BURKE, projectionist, of Fort Plain, N. Y., offers the following suggestion: "Why not have shipping cases to hold one, two and three double reels, thus making those heavy cases holding four and five double reels unnecessary? It would not only make things more easy for the express men, but for the reels as well. The 2000-foot reel is here, let us hope to stay.

"The great majority of projectionists favor their use. Those who are responsible for their introduction deserve a lot of credit. But four- and five-reel shipping cases is something else again. I have myself watched expressmen drop one of them off a truck upon a brick pavement. Believe you me, it struck with some considerable thud. With the cases I have suggested, a five-reeler would be split up in one three- and one two-reel package, and so on, thus easing up the strain all around. Myself and others would like your comment."

Frankly, I am not well posted on shipping packages now in use, but certainly it seems quite reasonable that 6000 feet of film should be maximum. There is too much weight in a larger package, as Edmund suggests.

UNCLE SAM PRESENTS

THE other day Mr. Brooks Atkinson, dramatic editor and critic of the distinguished New York Times, went over to the Adelphi and saw the Federal Theatre Project's presentation of "The Revolt of the Beavers", incurring thereby some poignant reactions. It is to be remembered that Mr. Atkinson, while certainly not red, has put himself often enough on record with opinions that classify him as an advanced liberal, well advanced. However, it would appear that he, like some of the rest of us, considers too much is too much.

Speaking of the Beaver piece as "a revolutionary bedtime story" of Mother Goose fantasy, Mr. Atkinson finds the Works Progress Administration offers to the kiddies of New York "now unschooled in the technique of revolution . . . an opportunity, at government expense, to improve their tender minds".

The Beaver tale is a yarn about how the workers revolted with machine guns and readjusted society, reshaping the world to their hearts' desire by violence.

"The newest adventure of the WPA theatre ought to improve our diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia," thinks Mr. Atkinson.

This epic of Marxian art is the collaborative work of Oscar Saul and Lou Lantz with "an ideological score by Oscar Waller".

AND, while we are reviewing the Times — Mr. Simeon Strunsky, in "Topics of the Times" on the editorial page, discusses the relative world fame of the names of Rockefeller and Edison. He observes that probably the kerosene can, supplying the light, has penetrated farther into remote corners of the earth than the graphophone and the motion picture. It might also be observed that the same laboratories at Menlo Park and West Orange brought forth the incandescent lamp which might have wrought devastating influences on the map of Standard Oil had not petroleum become power instead of light for the industrial world. No industry is really independent and in a world of its exclusive own — conspicuously the motion picture.

FAME CONSUMES

THE recent passing of Mr. William Gillette, ripe with years and rich in memories of attainment, brings realization there has gone with him and his like a quality and kind of distinction special to the stage of yesterday and its people.

By the laws of inevitability, we shall ever have many actors of high fame and some of great capacity. But it is unlikely that today's media and methods of distribution will conduce to the making of careers so especially founded in a single creative personality dominating the product. William Gillette's presentations were substantially all Gillette.

The most nearly equivalent order of performance that has occurred in the world of the screen appeared in the lone, isolated instance of Mr. Charles Chaplin. And no similar type of creative contributor has appeared in the score and four years since he began.

What is left of the stage tends ever to swift service of seasonal whims and trends with blazing single season successes and then forthwith a transmutation into cinema. And the motion picture, making and devouring fame, is inescapably beyond individual creative domination in any such degree as the stage of the period when Gillette rose to triumphs, repeated year after year. Once again it would seem that the machine and its technologies tend to overwhelm the individual.

Fame flames on, burning higher than ever, demanding an unending flow of the fuel of genius and personalities. Only the fame is constant, enduring. The people are consumed.

GORGE LIFTERS

"THE crass doctrine of volume production and mass scale may make one's gorge rise, but it makes it rise even higher to realize the ways in which the motion picture industry has taken, from the hands of its creators, the tools of the drama and has applied them for volume production."

So spoke Mr. Paul Hollister, executive vice-president and manager of advertising matter for R. H. Macy & Company, big New York department store, before the convention of the American Theatre Council last week.

Mr. Hollister is an able showman in the merchandise field, and one wonders how far his gorge rises at Macy's appropriation of the tools of the circus with its Thanksgiving Parade, etc. Also he might lift his gorge some more considering how Macy's have taken the tools of selling "from the hands of its creators" such as the pack peddler and the town crier.

[Besides, the screen has taken no tools. It is in fact the first real tool and instrument for the finished production of what the stage did "by hand" and never twice alike.]

MR. WALPOLE'S ESCAPE!

"THE pretty characterless face of Hollywood" is the title that World Film News of London found for an interview with Mr. Hugh Walpole, back home from a writing sojourn with the American cinema.

"The men with ideas, whether they are stars, actors or writers, are finding it extremely difficult to develop the cinema as an art form," observed Mr. Walpole.

It is to be presumed that his distinction between stars and actors was just a fortunate inadvertence.

"There are a score of first rate directors over there, but they are prevented from making any real progress by the financial dictators, who, often as not, know nothing of films and direct proceedings from their offices in Wall street. So the real enthusiasts, who know and have learned to love films, find themselves castrated."

Mr. Walpole is obviously tremendously more of a maker of fiction than a reporter of facts. That does not, to be sure, detract from the obvious merit of one of his ideas.

One wonders if he left Hollywood in time.

This Week

HOLLYWOOD'S studio strike fizzled on Tuesday to flare again Wednesday of the week chosen by two companies for expounding to sales staffs convened in the production capital the merits of some 120 features announced for 1937-38. Sylvestre Zeffarino Poli, one time owner of the nation's largest independent theatre circuit, died in respected retirement as organized exhibitors put finishing touches to a "chain store" tax bill such as he dreamed not of in his combat years. Four corporations reported dividends and one a net loss. Reported progress in the field of television was reflected in radio but not motion picture activity. French expression with reference to certain understandings between Germany, Italy and Japan as to films of American and other origin was mixed, not to say contradictory, but none of the cameras trained upon 41 productions in work on Hollywood stages missed a silenced click. Summer set in and school let out, over most of the country, and J. C. Jenkins found exhibitor Waltons pretty well pleased with things in general.

20th-Fox Lists 66

John D. Clark, Twentieth Century-Fox general manager in charge of distribution, revealed to the company sales staff in convention at the Hotel Ambassador in Los Angeles Tuesday titles of 60 of the 66 features to be released for the 1937-38 season. Fifty-two of these are to be produced in Hollywood under supervision of Darryl F. Zanuck. Of the remaining pictures, one will be the last Martin Johnson production, four will be Will Rogers reissues and three will be made in England.

"Chain Store" Bill Passes

The Pennsylvania legislature on Wednesday passed a bill imposing a tax ranging from $1 to $500 each on "chain stores and theatres." The measure provides for levying of the tax on a sliding scale and resembles in many respects the Louisiana act recently held valid by a supreme court ruling. The Pennsylvania measure also establishes a penalty of from $50 to $100 for each day a store or theatre may operate without a license. An appropriation of $151,517 for the department of revenue to collect the tax is also provided. It is expected that Governor Earle will approve the measure.

Earlier in the week the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors made available a draft of the "chain store" bill studied at its convention in Milwaukee as a model for proposed legislation. This bill would levy fees on a seat basis, ranging from 50c to $5 per seat.

The Allied draft is submitted on page 29.

"Growing Pains"

Harry M. Goetz, of the Max Gordon Plays and Pictures corporation, told New Yorkers on his return from Europe Tuesday that motion picture production in England is suffering from what he chose to describe as "growing pains." Mr. Goetz named as the first offering of the Gordon company the current Broadway play, "The Women," which he said will go into production next summer for release in the 1938-39 season. He defined the company policy as largely confined to production of plays which are susceptible to screen adaptation. "The Women," according to critical and lay report, is susceptible to quite a bit of it.

Republic Announces 54

J. J. Millstein, Republic vice-president in charge of sales, outlined to the company convention at the Hotel Roosevelt in Hollywood Tuesday the 1937-38 program of 30 features, 24 westerns and four serials.

Frels Jury Disagrees

A jury in the federal court at Dallas, Texas, was discharged without reaching a verdict in the case in which Ruben Frels, Victoria theatre owner, sought damages totalling $655,000 from the Jefferson Amusement company, East Texas Theatres, Paramount, Columbia, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Universal, Vitagraph, Sol Gordon, J. C. Clemons and J. G. Long, charging the withholding of films from his South Texas theatres. The jury found for one defendant, but reported it could not agree as to the others. U. S. District Attorney John Earhart, who has a similar case pending in which he charges the Interstate Circuit with violation of the Sherman anti-trust act, watched the case interestedly.

Selling by Screen

The General Electric company signalized the beginning of its third year as a user of motion pictures in sales promotion by exhibiting its latest production, "From Now On," in the Center theatre, New York. The company will exhibit the picture throughout the country in dark or rented theatres, restricting the exhibitors to morning hours to avoid conflict with box office hours, company officials assert.

More about the picture and the company's plans for it will be found on page 53.

Tax Study Asked

President Roosevelt asked Congress to authorize investigation of personal holding companies, inter-family corporations and other types of financial structures described as devices for avoiding income tax responsibilities and proposed legislation, to be predicated on the results of such investigation, to curb future practice in kind.

The matter is dealt with on page 17.

WPA Talent Protests

Some 10,000 Works Progress Administration workers employed in the agency's theatrical enterprises in the New York area vacated their assignments in a one-day demonstration against proposed reductions in the federal relief appropriation for the next fiscal year. The gesture, which included picketing, extended so far as to suspend puppet shows at four public schools and a settlement house.

Organizations participating and things they did are revealed on page 14.

Noah Beery, Sr., father of Wallace and Noah Beery, Jr., died in Hollywood at 83.

Independents' Cause

Demands for protection of the independent exhibitor through legislation, specifically through anti-block booking laws, theatre divorcement measures and "chain store" taxation; a proposal for a national combine, and strong protests against the buying of pictures by number rather than by title and against special sales drives highlighted the fifth annual Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors in Milwaukee. "We are a stronger group than ever before," Nathan Yamins, president, proclaimed as the meeting concluded.

The convention agenda is reported in full on page 29.

International Bloc

An account in the April 17th Motion Picture Herald of the bloc formed by Germany, Italy and Japan to "war" on Hollywood and other film sources brought Central European attention to focus upon the international film situation. French officialdom and trade, desirous of inducing American companies to attend the International Film Congress, were inclined to shrug aside the existence of such a bloc, but the French press continued to manifest complete credence.

The matter is thoroughly gone into on page 12.

Television Plans

Spurred, possibly, by announcement of a new tube reported capable of projecting pictures upon a screen 8 feet by 10, the National Broadcasting company, Columbia Broadcasting System and Mutual Broadcasting System proceeded with plans for taking care of television when and if it becomes commercially practical. NBC announced its intention to install television transmitting apparatus in the new building under construction for KYW in Philadelphia.

Developments on the television horizon are recorded on page 72.

Austria's Quandary

The motion picture problem of Austria is also one for America, writes Hans Lorant from Vienna. The season just closing found too many American pictures released, with a consequent indifference of the theatre-going public. At the same time, Austrian producers found themselves blocked by Germany's control of the market and meager concessions in the Kontingent, and the producers' association appealed to the Government for help.

The story is on page 27.

British Films Act Due

Dr. Leslie Burgin's statement to distributors in England that their percentage under the Quota must be lower hereafter is regarded in London as a significant development, writes Bruce Allan. The first draft of the new Films Act is to be received on June 8th by the trade bodies representing the three general branches of the industry. The new bill, it is understood, will contain several provisions which were not suggested by the trade groups.

Mr. Allan's story is on page 62.

Production Eases

Hollywood stages held 41 pictures in production as 7 were placed before the camera and 13 taken to cutting rooms. Both the finishing and starting groups were regarded as mine-run material.

Gus McCarthy gives titles and personnel on page 41.

Four Profits and a Loss

Dividends were declared by Paramount Pictures, Radio Corporation of America, Columbia Pictures and Pathe Film corporation. International Cinema, Inc., in Hollywood, reported a loss.

Poli Passes

Sylvestre Zeffarino Poli, 77, once head of the country's largest independent theatre circuit, died at his home near New Haven, Conn., Monday. Born in Italy, Mr. Poli entered the industry by way of the Eden Musee in New York and developed theatre holdings sold to William Fox in 1928 for a reported $30,000,000. Many of these properties still bear his name.

Highlights of Mr. Poli's career are sketched on page 22.

The Chinese View

Chinese views with respect to the filming of Oriental subject matter in Hollywood and elsewhere were clarified for Occidental eyes when the Central Censorship Committee issued a permit for exhibition of "The Good Earth" minus three brief and readily dispensable incidents. Reasons given for the eliminations told puzzled producers more about the Chinese policy than a ream of printed regulations.

The story appears on page 50.

Chance Games Again

A survey of the chance game matter in the Greater New York area revealed that independents not only have failed to discontinue them in conformity with the example of the major circuits but are prone to give as their reason for failing to do so the allegation that competitors have forced them to retain the custom by retaining it themselves.

This and other aspects of the giveaway business are discussed on page 36.

Production at Cost

Frontier Films corporation, described as an "independent and non-profit" producing and distributing company, was formed in New York by a group of writers, directors, playwrights, actors and cinematographers with the announced intention of producing pictures at cost for groups desiring to screen works based on "progressive" themes. Announced, too, is a monthly short of the news variety to be called "The World Today" and to follow in a general way the March of Time pattern.

Personnel and declared purposes of the new organization are reported on page 40.

Okay in Czechoslovakia

Thirty-four of the 79 motion pictures passed by the Czechoslovakian Board of Censors at Prague in the first three months of this year were American productions.

The figures for this period and the corresponding period of 1936 are given on page 53.

FRANCE SPLIT OVER NAZIS' INTERNATIONAL FILM BLOC

Strategy of German - Italian - Japanese Film Alliance, Revealed in "Herald" Article, Brings New Complications

Publication in Motion Picture Herald on April 17th of the formulative details and intended strategies of a Nazi-Italo-Japanese film bloc aimed at Hollywood, and at "all 'liberal' and communistic motion picture influences of the world," is now bringing into focus, in Central Europe, the international problems of the motion picture.

The French film industry has begun to deny the existence of any such "bloc," while at the same time the French press virtually verifies its existence, complaining that "Nazi influences" are hurting French films.

It now appears that because the next International Film Congress, July 5th to 9th, is, for the first time, to be held on French soil, under purported French sponsorship, the French Cinema Confederation is extremely anxious to obtain official representation from and the support of the American motion picture business for the Convention. The French trade, therefore, principally the French Cinema Confederation, seems to be engaging in a campaign to belittle the German - Italian - Japanese anti-Hollywood film bloc, realizing that England and Hollywood are aware that the Nazis have controlled the previous International Congresses and the International Film Chamber sponsoring the meetings.

The French are pointing out, both to the United States and England, that the Congress will be held this year in Paris, and not in Berlin, and that France for the next two years will hold the International Chamber presidency, not Germany, as heretofore.

"So, we hope that the United States and England will understand that Berlin is not at all leading the Chamber," asserted an official of the French Confederation.

Says Germany Still Pulls Strings

Regardless, an official spokesman for the American motion picture industry, who insisted on anonymity for obvious reasons, declared Tuesday that "Germany still is pulling the strings in the International Chamber and will run the show at the International Congress."

He charged that "Germany and her 'ideological' allies in the international film bloc aim to 'gang up' on the American film business, despite anything the French may say to the contrary in their attempt to get America into either the International Chamber or International Congress."

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America denied that any official film representative will be on hand at the Congress from the United States.

"Too presumptuous," said the MPPDA to the statement in Agence D'Information Cinegraphique that "it is nearly surely sure Mr. Hays will send us an observer."

ITO DEMANDS FILMS HELD BY PARAMOUNT

The Independent Theatre Owners of California has demanded of Paramount Pictures Corporation that the ten pictures held out of the 1936-'37 contracts be replaced. Members of the organization passed a resolution condemning Paramount's action, at a recent meeting.

A later communication said:

"It is quite obvious that if a distributor is allowed to establish a precedent by selling pictures in their top group, making lavish promises to the exhibitor in order to influence them to buy their pictures for any one season, and then later remove said pictures and place them in the top group the following season, they are undermining the faith that they have established in the minds of all exhibitors heretofore. It is a real violation of a trust the exhibitors have had in Paramount for many years and it is hard to understand that a distributing company would so far forget its moral obligation to its contract holders as to perpetrate upon them such an obvious wrong."

Adolph Zukor's defense of Paramount's policy, before Allied States Association's convention, appears on page 30.

The Motion Picture Herald's Nazi-film-bloc story of last April, which the French press is now pleased to deny, said: "An international motion picture trade 'war' is in the making, Germany firing the first salvo when it moved to form a film 'bloc' made up of the Nazis' ideological allies for propagandistic and 'cultural' cooperation to fight their most powerful rival, the Hollywood industry, and all non-Nazi motion picture influences in the world."

Italy and Japan were the first two countries to ratify the film alliance with Germany, continued the Herald, adding: "Austria and France have had motion picture trade pacts in existence with the Nazis for some time."

Now the French industry appears to be split as to whether "friendly" feelings actually exist between France and Germany.

Mr. Pierre Autré, correspondent in Paris of Motion Picture Herald, in reporting now on the international motion picture problem in Europe, concludes that "a time may come—very soon—when France will have to turn herself to the British and the American sides to defend their common interests in the Central European markets."

France, with Film Congress on Her Soil, Deprecates Anti - Hollywood Bloc and Germany's Control of Chamber

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

The French Confederation of the Cinema last week called in the press to give information on the International Film Congress, July 5th to 9th, and did not hide its disappointment that the English-speaking countries—meaning the United States and Great Britain—have always refused to belong to the International Film Chamber and will not be represented at the Congress.

"We understand that the main reason why America and England have never become members of the International Film Chamber was the fact that headquarters of the Chamber were in Berlin, and because it was presided over by Germans ever since its inception, two years ago. (Dr. Lehnich, president of the Reichsfilmkammer, was Chamber president from 1935 to the present.)"

Conceded by Federation Spokesman

This much was admitted at the French Cinema Federation press Conference last week, in Paris, by a Confederation spokesman.

"In America and England," he continued, "the International Film Chamber is said to be under 'Nazi' influences and is intended to form a real bloc of Continental film industries against English-speaking films.

"Now," he added, "these reasons will no longer be available, for the headquarters of the International Chamber will for the next two years be situated in Paris, and will have a French president.

"Indeed, regulations of the International Film Chamber are that the presidency and headquarters belong for two years to each of the Chamber's members. The first two years were for Germany, 1935-36 and 1936-37; the next two years will be for France, 1937-38 and 1938-39, etc.

"So," concluded the French Confederation spokesman, "we hope that the United States and England will understand that Berlin is not at all leading the Chamber."

A Sensation in Paris

A sensation was produced in France in the French official, press and trade circles by the article published in Motion Picture Herald on April 17th, entitled: "Nazis, Italy and Japan Allied for Film 'War.'"

This article was reproduced in highlights in La Cinematographie Francaise on May 7th, followed by remarks by the editor:

"We think that the Motion Picture Herald considers things under a too special angle. It is France who organizes the next Congress of the International Film Chamber, and it is also France who will have for the next two years the presidency of this International Chamber.

"We are convinced that our (French) delegates would be delighted to welcome the American and British adhesion to this organization (and convention) which now has 20 countries in its membership."

"Senseless Gossips"

In the mimeographed daily trade paper, Agence D'Information Cinegraphique, the editor, J. P. Coutisson, who carries on a policy which seems directed in favor of the French film producers, and very often against American companies, wrote his editorial article of May 14th about this question.

"It is distressing that a trade paper as serious and as circulated as the MOTION PICTURE HERALD has published such senseless gossips concerning a pretended 'cinema common front' organized by Germany, Italy and Japan, to compensate the democratic and communistic cinema influences.

"But things become more serious—and also more comical—when our American colleague pretends to discover suddenly that a 'film war' may break out in the near future. Just the same as if this war had not always existed—to wit: competition—and just the same as if this war had not always increased since the time when the Warner Brothers (first commercializers of sound) had thought it was useful to add words to the silent film."

"Why," M. Coutisson asked, "riddle with arrows the next International Film Congress?"

"It is not only awkward," he continued, "but also unfair. It is not a reason because the all-powerful American film industry does not want to associate itself with our European efforts that it must run counter to our plans.

"There is no point of Nazi, fascist, popular front or communistic bloc. It is only a matter of cinema and it concerns nothing but the collaboration of all European countries."

"We agree with Americans if they want to keep out of this business at which they look from afar with an amused smile," asserted M. Coutisson. "But, some of these days they will be a part of the Chamber, and, according to their old custom, they will take the 'lion's share.'

"With regard to our neighbors, the British, it is not so sure they will not come very soon. I cannot say yet why they want to be absent, but I know that they will come soon."

Cites Fanck Picture

The HERALD'S article on the Nazi-Italy-Japan bloc next took the attention of Le Merle Blanc, a weekly publication edited by Marcel Lapierre in cinema matters. The sympathy of Le Merle Blanc for the extreme "left" is well known in Paris, and M. Lapierre, besides being its cinema editor, is also the cinema correspondent for the Trade-Unions official paper, the daily Le Peuple.

"The coming presentation in France of a Japanese picture, 'Terre Nouvelle' (New Land) has been announced," wrote M. Lapierre. "It has been directed by a German, Arnold Fanck. At first sight this looks just like an ordinary piece of news of no importance. But . . .

"Arnold Fanck is also the author of many mountain pictures of which the star was Leni Riefenstahl.

"Leni Riefenstahl is in some kind the 'favorite' of Hitler. (EDITOR'S NOTE: Leni Riefenstahl was placed by Adolph Hitler in complete charge of all filming at last year's Olympic Games in Germany, including control over American newsreels' activities at the Games.)"

"This little Fanck-Riefenstahl fact already gives some color to the story," continued M. Lapierre in his article in the Parisian Le Merle Blanc.

"Now," he suggested, "let us look at the American papers. They (MOTION PICTURE

Complete Representation and Program For International Film Congress

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

Originally scheduled for June 7th to 12th, the International Film Congress, sponsored and conducted by the International Film Chamber, will be held instead in Paris, from July 5th to 9th. Reason for the change lies in the delay of the Paris International Exposition with which the Congress is this year connected.

Some 15 European nations — America and England will not attend — have already announced that they would be represented at the Congress, as follows:

BELGIUM—represented by the Association Cinématographique de Belgique; the Association Nationale du Cinema Educatif de Belgique (Educative Cinema Association), and the Union Nationale Cinématographique Belge (Belgian National Cinema Union).

DENMARK—represented by the Biograftheater Foreningen Kobenhavn Og Emegn.

GERMANY—by the Reichsfilmkammer (Reich Film Chamber).

FINLAND—by the Suomen Biografiliitto.

FRANCE—by the General Confederation of the Cinema.

ITALY—by the Federazione Nazionale Fascista degli Industriali dello Spettacolo (National Fascist Federation of the Entertainment Industries).

YUGOSLAVIA—by the Bund der Lichtspieltheater des Konigreiches Jugoslavien (written in German, meaning Cinema Exhibitors Association of Yugoslavia).

LUXEMBOURG—by the Vereinigte Lichtspiel Theater Luxemburg (written in German, meaning Cinema Exhibitors' Association).

NORWAY—by the Kommunale Kinematografers Landsforbund.

AUSTRIA—

1. Gesamtverband der Osterreichischen Filmproduktion (Film production).
2. Gremium der Lichtspielunternehmungen Osterreichs (Theatres).
3. Osterreichische Filmkonferenz (Government Cinema Branch).

POLAND—by the Superior Council of Cinema in Poland.

SWEDEN—by the Sveriges Biograf och Filmkammare (Swedish Film Chamber).

SPAIN—

1. Camera Española de Cinematografia (Spanish Film Chamber), with headquarters in Barcelona.
2. Societad General Española de Empresarios de Espectaculos (Spanish General Society of Cinema Exhibitors), with headquarters in Madrid.
3. Asociacion de Empresarios de Espectaculos Publicos (Association of Public Entertainments Exhibitors) with headquarters in Barcelona.
4. Asociacion Nacional de Productores Cinematograficos (National association of cinema producers), with headquarters in Barcelona.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA—

1. Verband der filmproduktion in der Csr. (Film Producers).
2. Zentralverband der Kiontheater in der Csr.

HUNGARY—

1. Bund der Ungarischen Filmindrustriellen (Cinema Hungarian Industry).
2. Bund der Ungarische Kinobesitzer (Hungarian Film Exhibitors).

Four countries, Austria, Poland, Germany and Italy, will send to the Congress official government representatives rather than cinema delegates.

The Congress will open on Monday, July 5th, when there will be held the first meeting of the committees which compose the International Film Chamber:

1. Executive Committee and Board.
2. Cinema Economy Committee.
3. International Federation of Cinema Exhibitors Associations.

On Tuesday, July 6th, the Congress will be officially opened by a general meeting which will be held at Le Havre on board the French liner Normandie.

On the evening of July 6th, the delegates will be brought back to Paris where they will attend a "Cinema Festival," at the Paris Exposition. French stars will be present.

On Wednesday, July 7th, meetings of the following commissions will be held:

a. Juridical Commission, of which the President is Raymond Lussiez, President of the French Exhibitors Association. This commission has in charge all affairs concerning copyrights, and records all the cinema operations between the countries belonging to the International Film Chamber.

b. Committee of Cinema Economy, presided over by Dr. Meydam, an official of the Nazi U.F.A. This committee has in charge all matters of customs, quotas, censorships, shipping, and payment.

c. Commission of Cultural and Educative films: Presided over by M. de Feo, (president of the Educative Cinema Institute, Rome).

On the evening of July 7th, a "Cinema Gala," including a French film and a music hall show, will take place at the Marignan-Pathé Theatre.

On Thursday, July 8th, the concluding meeting of the Congress will be held, followed by a dinner.

On Friday, July 9th, delegates will visit the French studios and the Paris Exposition.

At the same time the Congress of the "FIPRESCI" (Federation of the Cinema International Press) will also be held in Paris.

FRENCH SPLIT OVER NAZI CONTROL

Herald) inform us that Germany, Italy and Japan have formed a 'cinema bloc.' This is a result of the famous 'cultural agreements' between these three countries."

"In what way do they want to use this bloc?" queried Le Merle Blanc, which answered its own question: "To put into practice a lovely program that we will tell you about—to propagate by means of the cinema the Hitlerian ideas and culture. At the same time it will battle the 'liberal' influences of Hollywood and Paris, and the 'bolshevist' influences of Moscow."

'But that is not all," continued Le Merle Blanc.

"France has signed a cinema agreement with Germany. Is it with the purpose to send us regularly all the fascist productions of the bloc?

"It is very possible. And (the Japanese) 'La Terre Nouvelle' may be the first arrival to result from the combination."

"Just as a chance," Le Merle continued, "an International Film Congress will be held in Paris. Just as a chance, the President of the German Film Chamber is the leader of the Congress organization committee. Just as a chance—also—England and the United States will not be among the members of this Congress.

"So, we ask, will the representatives of the French cinema be once more 'bamboozled'?

"These so-called (French cinema) 'representatives' have missed the mark so many times when they could have brought renown to the French cinema.

'Will they (the French cinema representatives to the Congress) keep smiling and hook their car to the anti-democratic cavalcade of Mussolini and Hitler?"

Film Relations Muddied

Officially, there has not been a statement issued by the French Cinema Confederation or by the French Foreign Office on the Herald's story of the Nazi-Italian-Japanese film block. But the article did make a sensation at the cinema bureau of the French Foreign Office, and, if there has not been any official statement, it has been unofficially declared that under no circumstances will French cinema organizations be "taken in tow" by any foreign country, by Germany or any other one.

On the other hand, motion picture relations between France and Germany are not presently going so well. And France's interest in the "Nazi-Italian-Japanese film bloc" seems to be the same as America's and England's.

Negotiations between France and Germany to renew their film agreement have been stopped for some time. French producers had asked a reciprocal agreement between the two countries. In 1936 German films made more than 12,000,000 francs in France, while French films had received no more than 700,000 francs in Germany. As a result, the French producers are claiming that there should be created a "clearing fund" which would save the difference between the money made in France by German films, and the money made in Germany by French films. This difference—11,300,000 francs in 1936—would remain at the disposal of French producers to produce in the French studios German versions of French films.

Besides, the agreement would include a stipulation which would guarantee the importation and the exhibition of these German versions in German territory. It is understood that this idea up to now has not had the backing of the French Government.

Fighting French Advance

French films produced last season have gained ground in such countries as Austria, Roumania, Yugoslavia, and Hungary, which heretofore were the real "fief" of German motion pictures. In Central Europe, especially, French films are taking, little by little, the place of German films, which now are looked upon as containing too much Nazi propaganda.

But. it has been disclosed that German authorities are trying by all means to stop this big advance of the French film.

It was reported a few days ago that at Zagreb, in Yugoslavia, a French film, entitled "Les Loups Entre Eux," which relates the battle between French and German secret service, was banned, after three days showing, on the request of the German consul. This film was taken off the bill specifically by police order and its showing has been forbidden in the whole Yugoslavian territory. After an investigation, it was made evident that four other French films, of which the stories also concern Germany, will likewise be banned in Yugoslavia. These films are "L'Homme A Abattre," "Marthe Richard, "La Grande Illusion" and "Soeurs D'Armes."

There was no surprise at Germany's banning of "L'Homme A Abattre," because Germans are shown in it in an unfavorable light. But, "La Grande Illusion" and "Soeurs D'Armes" are still in production!

German Interference

It is obvious that Germany's interference officially with French motion pictures actually exists in countries where the Nazis have political influences.

It is reported that the German Government would try to do the same in Italy, and in other Central European countries, which is an obvious confirmation of the Motion Picture Herald's article of April 17th.

It is expected that all these questions may be the subject of stormy discussions at the Paris International Film Congress.

And this may change many things in the International Film Chamber. A time may come —maybe very soon—when France will have to turn herself to the British and the American sides to defend their interests in the Central European markets.

Technicolor Officers Named

All officers of Technicolor Corporation were reelected at the annual meeting of the board of directors of the company in New York this week. Officers are Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president; J. A. Ball, George F. Lewis, F. R. Oates and G. F. Rackett, vice-presidents. F. F. Bryant is secretary-treasurer.

No Roadshows in Canada

Regardless of the initial presentation policy in the United States, "Captains Courageous" will not be played as a roadshow attraction in Canadian cities, it was said in Toronto this week. The picture will be given general release on a continuous performance policy in Canada in about two months.

Commonwealth Convention

Economy in theatre operation was stressed at the two-day convention of 27 managers of the Commonwealth circuit, which ended last Wednesday night in Kansas City. C. A. Schultz, head of Commonwealth, outlined the circuit's 13-week "King of the Sun" campaign which opens this week.

Workers Stage a Protest Against WPA Relief Cut

More than 10,000 Works Progress Administration workers in New York left their posts last Thursday in a one-day demonstration against proposed reductions in the federal relief appropriation for the 1938 fiscal year. All Broadway performances by WPA actors and musicians were cancelled and the offices of the art and writers' project were closed Thursday noon.

Meanwhile, Harold Stein, administrative officer of the music, art and writers' projects assured the strikers that reductions in personnel were unlikely before the end of June and promised to give the workers as much notice as possible before the cuts went into effect.

The writers formed a picket line in front of their headquarters, which also houses the art project. Employes of the theatre project, which has offices in the Chanin Building on 42nd Street, were represented in the same picket line. They decided not to picket their own office since a clause in the Chanin Building lease provides for cancellation in the event of picketing.

Marionette shows at four public schools and a settlement house were also cancelled.

Organizations which sponsored the demonstration included the Workers Alliance, the New York Newspaper Guild, Local 453 of the American Federation of Teachers, Local 1,199 of the Pharmacists Union, the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians; the Bookkeepers, Stenographers and Accountants Union, the Writers Union, the Artists Union, the Dental Technicians Equity and Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians.

Exhibitor Outing Set

The Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York will hold its annual outing in July with the choice now narrowed down to a boat ride to Bear Mountain or a day at Briarcliff Manor up the Hudson. The affair will be arranged by David Weinstock, John Manheimer, Stanley Lawton and L. Meyers.

Copyright Bars Music

The popular Gilbert and Sullivan music will not be heard as the musical background for the picture, "The Girl Said No," when it is released in Canada because of copyright difficulties, according to the Grand National office in Toronto. Different music will be supplied if the picture plays Canada.

Sam Shumer was named story editor of Grand National this week to take the place of Sidney M. Biddell, who resigned last week to enter independent production with his own company.

FILM LABOR ORGANIZATION QUIET; UNION VETOES STRIKE SETTLEMENT

Department of Labor Conciliator Arranges Conference Between Painters and IATSE Officials, but Crafts Reject Pact

Decoration Day brought calm and indications of a permanent peace on the Hollywood strike front and reports of labor organization in other departments of the motion picture industry carried a quiet note.

Edward Fitzgerald, conciliation commissioner for the Department of Labor, unofficially sponsored negotiations looking toward a settlement of the jurisdictional dispute between the remaining units of Federated Motion Picture Crafts, chiefly the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, which were still on strike and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

The painters' union, however, on Wednesday rejected the proposed agreement by a vote of 640 to 276 and repudiated an earlier announcement of a strike settlement. They demanded a written guarantee of a closed shop and wage increases.

The executive board of the American Federation of Labor, to which Federated Crafts last week submitted its complaints against the IATSE, had not yet taken action.

The nationwide drive sponsored by the IATSE to organize film exchange employees was continuing and expanding to include theatre employees.

The studio labor strike, instituted April 30th by Federated Motion Picture Crafts, flared again on Wednesday when the strikers rejected a proposal made after a meeting arranged by Mr. Fitzgerald and attended by George Browne, president of the IATSE; William Bioff, his aide; Joseph Clarke, vice-president of the painters' union, strongest unit of Federated Crafts; and Pat Casey, acting for producers.

Under the proposed agreement makeup men, draftsmen, service artists and hairdressers would have contracted on the terms previously offered, a closed shop and salary increases of ten per cent. Members of Federated Crafts overrode their officers to repudiate the settlement.

William Cullen, president of Federated Crafts, last week submitted charges of strikebreaking and proselyting by the IATSE before the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, with which both organizations are affiliated.

Jack Y. Berman, president of the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California on Monday appealed to major distributors to use their influence upon the producers for a quick end to the studio strike, claiming that many independent theatres were operating at losses because of picketing.

Over the holiday weekend pickets were transferred from the studios, to Hollywood and Los Angeles theatres.

The first cases of writer-producer difficulties under the new Screen Playwrights code were settled last week when RKO-Radio and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer apologized to the playwrights and the individual writers concerned for omitting their names from trade paper and billboard advertising. The pictures were MGM's "Captains Courageous" and RKO's "Shall We Dance?" The omissions were inadvertent, the studios explained, because the billboards and advertisements had been made up before the final determination of the writing credits.

175 PLAYS ENTERED IN UNION'S CONTEST

More than 175 full-length plays have already been entered in the $3,000 play contest of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union by dramatists in all parts of the country, the union claimed in New York this week.

The contest, which is offering a first prize of $2,000 and a second prize of $1,000, is the first to be sponsored by the union and aims only "to stimulate the writing of good plays of social conflict in America."

The Screen Writers Guild of the Authors' League of America, revived at a mass meeting on Tuesday in Hollywood, announced plans for collective bargaining with producers along lines deisgned to supersede the code recently arranged by the Screen Playwrights, Inc.

The arbitration machinery of the Screen Actors' Guild and the producers, under the Guild shop contract which went into effect June 1st, has been ironed out in the free lance player field. Producers will name one representative, the Guild another, and both of them will appoint a third member.

No annual convention will be held by the IATSE locals this year. At the last session of the union organizations it was voted that the meeting usually scheduled for June be held bi-annually instead of every year.

An announcement was expected this week from Local 306 of New York on a complete unionization of major and independent exchange employees in the New York territory. Agreements whereby union employees in Boston and Philadelphia exchanges are to be recognized by distributors have been approved. New Haven will be the next center chosen for negotiation. An organization meeting in that city on Monday to unite ushers, doormen and cashiers under the AFL banner drew an attendance of 75, representing major circuit houses and independents and IATSE officials have scheduled another meeting with John Gatelee, international organizer.

Similar organization meetings were held in the last two weeks in New Orleans, Kansas City, Memphis and Cincinnati.

In Buffalo a 30 minute strike of film exchange employees last Friday was ended with an agreement to negotiate at a conference in New York this week.

Local 802, American Federation of Musicians in New York this week joined the picket line at the Max Fleischer studio, charging unfair treatment of musicians and synchronizers. The cartoonists' union has been picketing the Fleischer studio for two weeks. Local 806, IATSE, also intervened in the situation and asked Paramount, distributor of the short subjects, to end the strike or risk having the projectionists regard the company as guilty of an "unfriendly act."

Paramount Group To Leave Sunday

Paramount Pictures' home office delegation to the company's annual sales convention to be held at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles on June 10-12 will leave New York Sunday afternoon. Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales, will head the party, which will include Charles Reagan and J. J. Unger, division managers; R. M. Gillham, director of advertising and publicity; G. B. J. Frawley, Alex Moss, Herbert Lorber, Arthur Dunne, Knox Haddow, Fred Leroy, Jack Roper, Larry Flynn, Robert Moriarty, John Belde, George Weltener, of the foreign department; Fred Lange, head of the Paris office; John Day, head of the Buenos Aires office; Albert Deane, of the foreign department; A. J. Richard, head of the newsreel; Lou Diamond, head of the short subjects department; Russell Holman, in charge of production in the East; Louis Phillips, of the legal department, and A. O. Dillenbeck, of Buchanan and company.

Freeman To Participate In Olympia Transfer

Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount vice-president in charge of theatre operations, left New York Wednesday night for Boston to participate in the formal transfer of Olympia Theatres' assets to the New England Theatre Corporation. The $4,000,000 cash bid of the Martin Mullin and Samuel Pinanski company for the Olympia assets, which consist principally of 30 theatres in Massachusetts, was approved by the courts several weeks ago. The transfer will formally conclude the five-year receivership of Olympia, one of the important Paramount theatre units and the last affiliate of the company remaining under court jurisdiction. New England Theatres will absorb and operate the Olympia houses.

Funeral Rites Held For Percy R. Kent

Funeral services were to be held at the Pierce Brothers' chapel in Los Angeles Friday for Percy R. Kent, 47, brother of Sidney R. Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox president. Mr. Kent died of spinal meningitis last Saturday in St. Luke's Hospital, New York, following an emergency operation for mastoiditis. He was formerly vice-president in charge of real estate for Fox West Coast Theatres and recently had been doing similar work in New York for National Theatres.

"Ecstasy" Order Signed

District Court Judge Rine in Omaha Saturday signed an order restraining city officials there from interferring with the showing of "Ecstasy," Jewel Productions announced in New York Wednesday. The film had been booked at the Town.

KORDA AND GOLDWYN GET OPTION ON UNITED ARTISTS FOR SIX MILLIONS

Option on Partnership Franchises of Mary Pickford, Fairbanks and Chaplin in the Company Hold Until December 31

Deal Would Not Affect Selznick or Wanger, Both Having Distribution Agreements Only with United Artists

Alexander Korda who came to the United States two weeks ago with the avowed intention of obtaining better distribution for his British productions is returning to England with an option, held jointly with Samuel Goldwyn, for the purchase, at a reported price of $6,000,000, of the United Artists' partnership franchises of Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin. The option may be exercised at any time up to next December 31st.

Granting of the option took place at the meeting last week of the five United Artists partners in Hollywood. Dr. A. H. Giannini, president of the company, in a brief announcement said the deal would not affect Selznick International or Walter Wanger Productions, both of which have distribution agreements only with United Artists, nor would it affect existing U.A. releasing contracts and the production plans announced last week.

Mr. Korda, in New York on his way back to London, barred the press from his suite in the Sherry Netherlands Hotel and refused to make any comment on the deal. Further information than the bare announcement was also refused at the offices of O'Brien, Driscoll and Raferty, attorneys in New York for Miss Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks and at the offices of Schwartz and Frolich, attorneys for Mr. Goldwyn and Mr. Chaplin.

An exercise of the option, it was reported, would involve an equal participation by Mr. Goldwyn and Mr. Korda, each contributing $3,000,000. Dr. Giannini has no participation in the agreement but it was understood he will remain as president for the present. He was reported to have opposed the granting of the option.

Indications were that Mr. Korda's British financial backers, the Prudential Assurance Company, likewise was not involved in the deal and that the option price may be advanced by American financial interests entirely.

Dissatisfaction Seen

Granting of the option followed closely on an announcement last week by Mr. Goldwyn that he had abandoned black and white motion pictures for Technicolor exclusively. John Hay (Jock) Whitney of Technicolor is closely identified with Mr. Goldwyn and United Artists through his large holdings and management participation in Selznick International.

Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president of Technicolor, was in London this week reported to be supervising plans for expansion of the company in England. In an interview with London reporters Dr. Kalmus placed British color negative capacity at six features a year. A three reel picture of the coronation in Technicolor will be released this month, it was announced recently.

PROTESTS AGAINST MUSIC IN CHURCH

The oft-repeated complaint against motion picture theatres competing with churches to the detriment of the latter's attendance appeared in Atlantic Highlands, N. J., this week in reverse form when Mrs. John McNamara, wife of the manager of the Atlantic theatre, told police officials that the playing of a trombone by Albert Woodruff at open air gospel meetings Saturday nights near the theatre made it impossible to hear the actors on the screen speaking their lines. The police then suggested the prayer meeting be moved to another location.

In Hollywood the option was understood to have been the culmination of Mr. Goldwyn's dissatisfaction with the United Artists corporate agreement under which all five partners participated equally in the company's earnings, and Mr. Korda's dissatisfaction with the American reception given his pictures. Miss Pickford, Mr. Fairbanks and Mr. Chaplin have been more or less inactive as producers for several years.

Mr. Fairbanks who was to produce "The Adventures of Marco Polo" for release in the 1937-38 season recently sold his rights in the production to Mr. Goldwyn. Mr. Chaplin has announced that he will produce one picture during the year. Under the terms of the option any pictures produced by the three retiring partners would be distributed by United Artists through separate agreements.

When he arrived in New York from England on his way to attend the United Artists meeting Mr. Korda told reporters that he was dissatisfied with returns from his pictures in this country, particularly from the major circuits. "While I am here I will look into the matter," he said. "Just what I will do, I have no idea. I may stop making pictures for the American market and instead of Denham Studios producing 17 films a year, we will make only 12."

The British producer denied at that time that he was here to secure finances and added that the Prudential Life Assurance Company was still backing him. He said he planned to spend $8,500,000 for the 17 pictures this year and believed about 12 would be released in the American market. London Films, Mr. Korda's company, is financially interested in all 17 pictures but will release about eight with the company's name.

Three in Technicolor

Mr. Korda also said at that time that three of the pictures would be produced in Technicolor. One is now in work, a second will be started this month with Merle Oberon and the third in October.

At the conclusion of the United Artists meeting and before any news of the shift in control, Dr. Giannini announced that the matter of the proposed new British Quota Act had been discussed in detail and plans had been worked out for meeting and requirements of the new law, thus giving United Artists producers the maximum in protection. According to the company president also, a plan had been prepared for cooperation and an exchange of talent between the coast studios and Mr. Korda in England. Announcement of the granting of the option followed the next day.

Mr. Goldwyn was admitted to membership in United Artists in 1926. The company was founded in 1919 as a cooperative venture by David Wark Griffith, Miss Pickford, Mr. Fairbanks and Mr. Chaplin to distribute their pictures. Mr. Griffith withdrew from the company in 1933 and Mr. Korda became an owner-member in 1935. The company has always been a closed corporation, with the owner-members holding all stock.

The company's total production budget for 1936-37 will be $26,000,000, George J. Schaefer, vice-president in charge of sales, announced last week after the meeting. Of 20 films to be produced by Mr. Goldwyn, Selznick International and Walter Wanger, at least nine will be in Technicolor.

RKO Sales Force Ready to Meet

More than 100 Radio Pictures home office representatives and eastern delegates will leave New York June 12 for Los Angeles, via the southern route, for the company's annual sales convention which will open at the Ambassador Hotel June 16. Stopovers will be made at several points where local sales forces will join the convention special.

Harry Cohen, western division manager, now in New York discussing a product deal with Fox West Coast executives, will accompany the eastern contingent.

Ned E. Depinet, vice-president in charge of sales, will also have returned from Texas in time to leave on the home office special.

Open Winnipeg Office

The establishment of a complete western headquarters for Famous Players Canadian Corporation at Winnipeg has been concluded with the appointment of Sylvester Gunn, formerly manager of the Royal, Port William, Ont., as chief booker for Winnipeg. With the exception of the Alberta district, which will continue to be supervised by John Hazza at Calgary, western theatre activities will be directed from Winnipeg under the direction of Frank Kershaw, who has been brought back from Vancouver.

CONVENTION VOTES A TEN-POINT PROGRAM TO RESTORE THE STAGE

$100,000 Promotional Fund Proposed; Subsidies for Dramatists Would Supplement Five Fellowships Announced by Golden

The American Theatre Council concluded the first convention of the stage in New York last Thursday with the adoption of a 10-point program for the rejuvenation of the legitimate theatre which is intended to revolutionize theatrical trade practices and relations between the paying public and the stage. The convention was held at the Hotel Astor, in the heart of the Times Square theatrical district.

As detailed by Frank Gillmore, president of Actors' Equity Association, which had been one of the prime sponsors of the American Theatre Council, and in that position one of the leaders in arranging for and conducting the convention, the Council's board and the convention board voted to take the following steps:

1. Present an American theatre festival in New York in August, 1938, at which time, if not earlier, the second convention would be held. Call an international convention in 1939, the year of the World's Fair.
2. Raise a $100,000 fund for promotion of the legitimate theatre industry, the money to be obtained by assessments on theatres and possibly by special benefit performances.
3. Investigate the feasibility of hiring a promotion manager who would not be an industry "czar".
4. Further the establishment of subsidies for dramatists to supplement five $1,000 fellowships announced by John Golden, producer.
5. Sponsor trial performances for younger players and directors so they would have a chance to be seen by managers and casting directors.
6. Form a "pool" of actors who would be hired by a group of managers at guaranteed annual salaries and create a managerial "clearing house" to finance plays.
7. Raise curtains early at one evening performance a week for the convenience of suburbanites.
8. Investigate the following proposals:
    - (a) Increased ticket sale by telephone.
    - (b) Central air-conditioning for theatres.
    - (c) Perfection of sound apparatus for legitimate-theatre use.
    - (d) Co-operation with the WPA theatre.
    - (e) Promotion of Federal legislation for theatre.
    - (f) Promotion of revival, children's, one-act and rotary stock theatres.
9. Publication of all speeches delivered at convention.
10. Limitation on length of speeches at next convention with increased sampling of public opinion.

John Golden's creation of five fellowships for promising young dramatists was the first concrete result of the convention. Sidney Howard, president of the Dramatists' Guild, who discussed the idea of fellowships last Wednesday, said the recipients of Mr. Golden's fellowships would be chosen by an impartial board consisting of a drama critic, a magazine editor, two dramatists and a producer, presumably Mr. Golden. The names of the committee will not be announced until they have all accepted appointment. It was also learned that 10 additional fellowships for promising dramatists had been assured, but would not be announced for some time.

The highlight of the final day of the convention was an address by Mrs. Hallie Flanagain, national director of the WPA federal theatre, supporting the protest of WPA theatre workers against any cut in relief roles. However, she took what she said was an "objective" position on the strike which was then in progress.

William P. Farnsworth, deputy WPA theatre director, asked for harmony in the commercial theatre. Morris Ernst, attorney, criticized Paul Moss, License Commissioner of New York, for withholding licenses to former burlesque operators who now want to present musical productions. J. Howard Reber, of the American National Theatre and Academy, reported that the theatre had lost 80 per cent of Philadelphia theatregoers because managers used the city for try-out purposes. Daniel Frohman, president of the Actors' Fund of America, was among the other speakers.

NEW ORLEANS BETTER FILMS COUNCIL ACTIVE

The work of the New Orleans Better Films Council is being pushed by its officers. Committees have been appointed to visit the first-run theatres in the city and report back to the chapter the value of any pictures shown. These reports are filed and members and their families then consult the recommendations which are on file in the office of the secretary.

Encourage Young Players

The encouragement of younger actors and actresses to remain in the theatre and improve their talents in it was urged by Blanche Yurka, Margot Stevenson and Teddy Jones, each of whom suggested various ways in which this might be accomplished.

The cost of repertory production was discussed by Jasper Deeter, director of the Hedgerow theatre at Moylan-Rose Valley, Pa., who said that "the greatest cost you must face in repertory is the cost of success." Personal success, said Mr. Deeter, is "the American theatre's greatest competitor." He cited the experience of the Provincetown Theatre in New York, which was a "happy organization until it became successful with 'Emperor Jones.'"

Theresa Helburn, a director of the Theatre Guild, also discussed the problems of the permanent acting company, concluding that they are "great things for the theatre family," but are difficult to manage from a practical point of view.

The final day's morning session was devoted to a discussion of "Technical Crafts and State Employes." Speakers were Fred Marshall, business representative of the United Scenic Artists; Theodore Mitchell, president of the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers Union; J. T. Stanton, Electrical Research Products, Inc., and others. James J. Brennan, vice-president of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes, presided.

On Way from Lisbon

Alberto Armando Pereira, owner of Alianca Films, Ltd., of Porto, distributors for RKO-Radio Pictures in Portugal, is on his way to New York from Lisbon to visit the home office and later the studios.

Study of Holding Companies Looms

Personal holding companies of motion picture personalities may be investigated by a Congressional committee as part of the administration's court and legislature drive against devices used by a small group of wealthy persons to evade income taxes, it was indicated in Washington this week as Department of Justice and Congressional leaders prepared to push a joint legal and legislative drive against tax evaders.

The drive is sponsored by President Roosevelt, to whom administration officials had submitted data which, it was said, demonstrated that the tax evasions were part of the cause for the failure of revenues to meet expectations by some $400,000,000. The campaign will include both prosecutions by the Department of Justice and legislation designed to bar further use of devices which have been uncovered by government men.

For the present it is expected the drive will be confined to personal incomes, since insufficient time has elapsed for the studying of corporation returns filed last March under the new corporation levies. Later, however, it was indicated, practices followed by some of the country's largest corporations to reduce their tax liability will be examined.

Interstate Managers Discuss Operation

Various phases of theatre operation were discussed during the convention of the managers and executives of the Interstate Circuit in Galveston, Texas, which ended last Thursday with the opening of the new Martini, built by the circuit and A. Martini, local theatre operator. Karl Hoblitzelle, president of the circuit, presided over the sessions, which were conducted as open forums.

Approximately 150 of the circuit personnel were present, as well as Ned E. Depinet of Radio Pictures; Joe Weil, Universal; Monroe Greenthal, United Artists; Claude Ezell, Republic franchise holder in Texas; Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount theatre head.

Pathegrams Revived For Home Use Films

Pathe has revived Pathegrams after a number of years and is back in the non-theatrical field with 16mm and 8mm films for home consumption. The idea, according to O. Henry Briggs, president, is to get out as many special news events for home projectors as possible.

"Hindenburg Explodes" is the first subject and is now being sold over the counters in every large New York store. The subject is available both in silent and sound versions. The second is "England's Coronation."

REMEMBERING

NOAH BEERY, SR., OF OLD LEAVENWORTH OUT ON THE "ROLLING RIVER"

THE other day Noah Beery, Sr., father of Wallace and Noah, the actors of picture fame, died in his eighty-third year, in Hollywood.

Thirty years ago, Noah, Sr., was the proprietor of an establishment known as the Commercial Hotel in picaresque Cherokee Street in Leavenworth, out in Kansas, the town known to history as "the mother-in-law of the army", because of its relations to the great military post north of the city.

Noah's bar-and-garden was a rendezvous for adventurers, soldiers, fishermen bound for the adjacent waters of Platte county over in Missouri, and newspapermen and correspondents, ever passing in the affairs of that strange, frontier-model town, surrounded by a ring of "single men in barracks", the fort, the Federal prison, the Military prison, the Soldiers' Home and the State prison. Government payroll gold flowed and Leavenworth was a town of color and action, long after "Bleeding Kansas" had become elsewhere a state of piety and prohibition.

Fort Leavenworth was founded to guard the traffic of the Santa Fe trail. Ever thereafter the settlement was, in its fashion, true to the tradition of those untrammeled days.

Congressman Dan Anthony, of the Military Affairs committee, was the political boss of the region and Noah was a faithful adherent. At election time it was surprising how many voters turned out from the little two-story red brick Commercial Hotel.

ABOUT Noah's garden, where the schooners were the biggest in Cherokee Street, veterans of all the wars, and the wars to come, sat in dalliance with the hours and swapped tales from Gettysburg and Shiloh to San Juan Hill, Manila and Mindanao.

There old men in blue and young men in khaki showed their medals and sang "Tenting Tonight", "Damn, Damn, Damn the Filipinos" and "Heigho, My Nancy". Nancy was the girl on the "wild Missour-eye, the rollin' river", long before the army discovered "Mademoiselle de Armentieres".

Noah's Commercial Hotel garden had a zoo, of native fauna. Sometimes under the pressure of the fiestas and song, the pets escaped. Raccoons, foxes and coyotes dashed about throwing the guests into excitement, while the girls from adjacent caravanseries mounted the tables and screamed.

Noah, tall, solemn-visaged, three hundred pounds of lean strength, was gruffly genial and generous to all his motley of patronage and guests. He was of the mould of those lusty pioneers who had hewed and fought their way to the Missouri country along the Boone's Lick Trail just a generation before. He was proud indeed of his sons and spoke often of them "back East on the stage".

THEN one day, about 1907, when Wallace was an understudy to Raymond Hitchcock, that distinguished star got into an argument with the authorities which detained him downtown past show time, for several days, so the understudy went on in his role in a current Broadway musical comedy hit.

The next day the press, including notably the New York World, acclaimed Wallace Beery's success. The papers turned up on the exchange table of Dan Anthony's Leavenworth Times, where Terry Ramsaye, now editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, was news editor. He spread the story in Leavenworth the next morning under the familiar headline of "Hometown boy makes good".

Noah, in deep appreciation, presented a case of the best St. Louis beer. The editor was out for the afternoon, so Noah put the case on his desk. It was a hot day and the case was packed with ice.

The savour of its tradition has gone out of old Leavenworth now. The roof of Noah's hotel has fallen in, and cottonwood sprouts, from windblown seed, grow in its crumbling walls. The spot where a certain soldier pinked out a four-leaf clover pattern with his service "38" still stands. He was sore about Nancy.

T. R.

Charles Waldron, Mullin and Pinanski projectionist, who is also head of the Motion Picture Operators' Union in Portland, Me., has been nominated as a candidate for Commissioner of Labor on the Republican ticket there.

Foreign publicity heads of major companies in New York have sent out warnings to be on the lookout for two imposters seeking funds, one of whom claims to be a cousin of Alexander Korda, now in New York.

Four Companies Vote Dividends

Four motion picture companies this week announced the intentions of paying either regularly quarter, or, in one case, extra dividends.

They are, Paramount Pictures, Inc.; Radio Corporation of America, Inc.; Columbia Pictures Corporation and Pathe Film Corporation. International Cinema, Inc., in Hollywood, reported a net loss.

The board of directors of Paramount voted the regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 per share on its first preferred stock and the regular quarterly dividend of 15 cents per share on its second preferred, these being payable July 1 to stockholders of record on June 15. David Sarnoff, president, announced that quarterly dividend number five on the outstanding shares of RCA's $3.50 cumulative convertible first preferred stock had been declared. The dividend amounts to 87½ cents a share and will be paid to holders of the stock issued after June 10 and prior to July 1.

The board of directors of Columbia declared an extra dividend of 50 cents per share on the common stock and voting trust certificates, payable June 22 to holders of record at the close of business June 11.

Pathe Film Corporation also declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the $7 convertible preferred stock, payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 22.

International Cinema, for the fiscal year ending February 28, last, reported an operating profit of $4,039.82 with interest, discounts, financial and other expenses of $19,540.50 accounting for a net loss of $15,500.68.

Bondholders Group Approves Roxy Plan

Daniel W. Blumenthal, counsel for the Adler first mortgage bondholders protective committee in New York this week submitted briefs to Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey in which he said that his committee favored the proposed amended plan of reorganization for the Roxy Theatre Corporation. Mr. Blumenthal declared that the Adler committee had originally opposed the plan, but that provision for an increase in the interest rate and amortization led to approval.

Mr. Blumenthal added that Twentieth Century-Fox had made an "extra plan provision" of $1 per share for Class A stockholders of the Roxy upon the insistence of Special Master Addison S. Pratt. It was also said that although the committee had desired further changes he became convinced as the hearings progressed that if the Twentieth Century-Fox offer were withdrawn the result might be detrimental to first mortgage bondholders.

Canadian Exports Increase $225,000

Exports of motion picture film to the Dominion of Canada during the first year of the trade agreement increased over $225,000, the Trade Agreement section of the Department of Commerce announced in Washington this week. In 1935 the United States exported to Canada $502,000 worth of film while in 1936 the figure was $751,000, an increase of $249,000 in but one year.

POLI, $30,000,000 EXHIBITOR, DIES AT 77

Studied Sculpture as Apprentice in Paris; Reclaimed Theatres from Fox Corporation

Sylvestre Zeffarino Poli, born in Lucca, Tuscany, Italy, some 77 years ago, pioneer in the exhibition of motion pictures, died Monday afternoon at his home, Villa Rosa, at Woodmont-on-the-Sound, Conn. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

The son of a church organist, Mr. Poli was apprenticed at an early age to the Museum Craven in Paris, where he studied sculpturing and modeling in clay. Three years later he came to New York and joined the Eden Musee on 23rd Street and within a few years was in business for himself as proprietor of similar museums in Troy, N. Y., and New Haven, Conn., featuring a "Chamber of Horrors" in wax figures. In New Haven he leased the Music Hall, renamed it Poli's Wonderland, and launched a career destined to carry him to the top ranks of American exhibitors, which position he relinquished in 1928 when he sold his theatres to William Fox for a sum reported to have been $30,000,000.

First Exhibitor in New Haven

The showmanship of Mr. Poli often caused associates to compare him with P. T. Barnum. He showed the first motion pictures ever seen in New Haven and bought a theatre building exclusively for that purpose. From New Haven he continually expanded his holdings, leasing theatres in Waterbury and later acquiring houses in Bridgeport, Hartford, Springfield, Mass.; Scranton, Pa.; Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Baltimore and Washington until he controlled houses employing 3,000 persons and with a total seating capacity of over 45,000.

Mr. Poli sold his circuit of theatres in 1928 to a company headed by William Fox. Mr. Fox's company, however, went into receivership a short while later and Mr. Poli reclaimed control, serving as adviser to the receiver. He retired two years ago, leaving the theatres again prosperous, and this time in the hands of Loew's, Inc.

Specializing in vaudeville at the traditional prices of 10, 20 and 30 cents, Mr. Poli became known as one of the most astute judges of talent in the industry. Once, he and Mrs. Poli heard two sisters singing in a New Haven restaurant. He decided to book the two girls, who were Rosa and Carmella Ponselle, later to become known as Metropolitan Opera stars.

Al Jolson was in an act with two other performers who played the Poli circuit for many weeks. The total salary of the act was $90. Mr. Poli suggested that Mr. Jolson put on blackface acts. Mr. Jolson agreed, and it was only a short time before he was on his way to stardom.

Hired Newspaper Reporters

Mr. Poli knew the value of self-advertisement in show business. He was tall, handsome and of distinguished carriage. Often he would occupy the head of a table at one of the principal hotels in Palm Beach, just so, as he said, persons might ask:

"Who is that distinguished man with the pince-nez?"

Mr. Poli attributed a major part of his success to the selection of competent subordinates. He preferred to hire newspaper reporters, he said, "because they, for the most part have carriage, pep, conversational ability and imagination.

Mr. Poli had often been warned, and especially of late, by his physician that his heart would not stand strain of any nature. So he lived quietly in his castle of Italian design, built above the rocks of a jutting cove of Long Island Sound, surrounded by his family, his lifelong friends and former business associates. Occasionally he visited New Haven for a preview, a musical treat or to attend a legitimate theatre production.

Last Friday he attended the wedding of an old friend in Danbury Conn., stood in the rain and returned home chilled. On Sunday pneumonia developed. He suddenly sank from heart complications.

Survivors include his widow and four daughters, Lillian, the Marchesa Gerini, of Italy; Mrs. Adeline Poli-Leonard, Mrs. Walter M. Sheaman and Mrs. Lorina Poli-Nolan.

Funeral services were to be held from Villa Rosa Thursday morning and from St. John's Roman Catholic Church, New Haven.

Will Hays Vacationing

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., left New York Tuesday night for his home in Sullivan, Ind., on his annual vacation. He will attend the graduation of his son, Will H., Jr., from Wabash College at Crawfordsville, Ind., next week and then return to New York, from where he will leave for Hollywood.

ITO Guests at Studios

The Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California held the first of a series of social gatherings at various studios as guests of Charles R. Rogers of Universal this week. The organization plans to hold each month at least one luncheon at one of the studios.

Intermountain Has Gain

Increased attendance and generally improved conditions throughout the intermountain territory were reported by managers of the 25 houses comprising the Intermountain Theatres, Inc., in Salt Lake City this week.

New Monogram Exchange

Monogram Pictures opened its new New York exchange at 630 Ninth Avenue Thursday. Edward A. Golden, general sales manager, and J. J. Felder, branch manager, acted as hosts at a party celebrating the opening.

Warners Deny Acquisitions

Warner Theatres denied this week that they are taking over four I. A. Roth theatres in Madison, Morristown and Summit, N. J.

Industry Denies Italian Boycott

The heads of the foreign departments of large distributing companies in New York this week declared they were "mystified" over the origin of news reports from Rome declaring that the American industry was threatening to boycott the International Film Exhibition in Venice this summer because of renewed restrictions on American film operations in Italy.

Several of the large companies, while making no secret of their dissatisfaction with the prevailing and indicated trade regulations in Italy, said that, in all probability, they would participate in the Venice exhibition. Others declared that no consideration had been given the matter as yet, as the exhibition will not take place until August.

It also was reported this week that American producing companies were conferring with Italian authorities in Rome over a proposed increase in dubbing fees which would increase the cost to American companies doing business in Italy.

It was reported via news services this week that Americans were complaining that the Italians were not living up to the agreement which Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., negotiated some months ago. They were reported to have said the Italian Government had announced its intention of again applying a quota on American films after July 1, that American film business was being impaired by an increase in the dubbing tax, that censorship often was "stupidly" applied, destroying the value of many films, and that obstacles were being placed in the way of American producers in their efforts to withdraw accrued royalties from Italy.

Thompson Given McCarthy Post

Lester Thompson was selected this week as director of the Advertising Advisory Council of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., to succeed the late J. J. McCarthy.

The selection was made at a meeting of the council which is charged with supervision of the advertising code. Mr. Thompson, who has had long experience in various motion picture executive posts both in America and abroad, had served as assistant to Mr. McCarthy since the organization of the council in 1934. Since Mr. McCarthy's death in February, Mr. Thompson has been acting director of the council.

Fulton Wins Contest

Robert K. Fulton, manager of Tri-States theatres in Waterloo, Ia., and acting manager of the Paramount in Des Moines, has been awarded a week's stay in Hollywood as the guest of Adolph Zukor for winning first prize in the Tri-States managers' 17-week Adolph Zukor drive.

TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX TO HAVE 66 FEATURES, 204 SHORTS IN '37-38

52 Will Be Produced at Beverly Hills Studios; 4 Westerns and 2 Tarzans from Sol Lesser; 3 from London

A program of 66 features for release during 1937-38, "including a greater number of specials than the company has ever undertaken," was announced by John D. Clark, general manager of distribution, at the Twentieth Century-Fox annual convention which opened at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, on Monday. In addition to the features there will be 204 one and two-reel releases, including the Movietonews reels.

Of the major pictures, 52 will be produced at the company's Beverly Hills studios under the supervision of Darryl F. Zanuck, Mr. Clark told the 500 delegates. The other releases will include four western and two Tarzan pictures to be produced by Sol Lesser, three features to be produced in London, four reissues of Will Rogers pictures, and "Borneo", the last film made by the late Martin Johnson and his wife.

The program as announced will include major historical pictures, musicals and musical comedies, adventure stories, and vehicles for Shirley Temple and the Dionne quintuplets.

Titles include:

REPUBLIC ANNOUNCES 30 FEATURES, 24 WESTERNS, 4 SERIALS FOR '37-38

Three Groups of Features Will Include 4 "Anniversary Specials", "Jubilee 10" and 16 "Showmen's Money Makers"

Republic Pictures franchise holders in the United States and Canada, home office and studio executives and all sales supervisors, gathered at the Hotel Roosevelt, Hollywood, on Tuesday, heard J. J. Millstein, vice-president in charge of sales, outline the company's program of 30 feature productions, 24 feature westerns and four serials.

The 1937-'38 product schedule calls for three groups of features headed by four "Anniversary Specials" on which the company will center all its production resources. The second group is the "1937-'38 Jubilee Ten" and the third will include 16 "Showmen's Money-Makers".

Eight pictures starring Gene Autry will head the 24 westerns to be produced. Others will be eight "Three Mesquiteers" westerns, based on ideas by William Holt MacDonald, and eight others from Bob Steele.

Phil Regan, singing star, will have leading roles in four productions. The comedy team of Alison Skipworth and Polly Moran is set for two, as are Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson. The company plans to use Max Terhune, ventriloquist of "The Hit Parade," in more important roles during the season.

Barry Perowne, creator of "Raffles;" Mildred Cram, Everett Freeman, William Colt MacDonald, William Chester, Lucian Cary, Armstrong Sperry, Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson and Ann Lawrence are among the authors whose stories will be screened.

The complete program and all available credits follow:

"Anniversary Specials"

Manhattan Merry-Go-Round; Phil Regan starring vehicle based on the popular radio program. Musical romance.

Wagons Westward; Book by Armstrong Perry. The best available stars will be engaged for this story of the old west.

The Rangers Are Coming; Texas Rangers story.

The Fighting Devil Dogs; the United States Marines in action.

It was pointed out by Mr. Millstein at the convention that all titles are subject to change but every effort will be made to retain the names as sold, he said. On Wednesday the delegates participated in an open forum at which the franchise holders expressed their views and ideas in connection with the program.

The Republic franchise holders on Tuesday heard at their business session the plan of Arthur Bromberg of Atlanta, who placed his salesmen on a partnership basis. The consensus was that others would give the proposition a trial. Other speakers were William Underwood and Claude Ezell, of Dallas, J. T. Sheffield of Seattle, B. Berkowitz of Buffalo, Moe Siegel, E. E. Schnitzer, Max Roth of Chicago, and Grover Parsons of San Francisco.

At the conclusion of the meeting Wednesday night Mr. Millstein and a number of franchise holders and district managers left Hollywood for San Francisco where the first of four regional meetings was to open on Friday. A second regional meeting will be held in Chicago on June 9th and two others will be convened in New Orleans on June 11th and in New York on June 14th.

Berle Entertains at Ampa Closing Session

With Milton Berle as master-of-ceremonies, the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in New York last Thursday closed their seasonal activities with a luncheon at Sardi's Restaurant off Broadway. Mitzi Green, Patsy Kelly and others entertained.

Trade advertising awards were made to Moe Kalish and Donald Gibbs of Paramount. Paul Gulick, head of the auditing committee, reported that the books kept by Herbert Spencer Berg, treasurer for the past two years, were "in good shape."

Kann Back in New York

Maurice D. (Red) Kann, editor of Motion Picture Daily, has returned to New York from an extended stay in Hollywood.

AUSTRIA COMPLAINS OF TOO MANY HOLLYWOOD FILM IMPORTATIONS

Claims Lack of Limitation of Product to Local Tastes Is Cause of Public Indifference to Pictures from America

by HANS LORANT
in Vienna

The 1936-37 motion picture year just closing in Austria was not one of unalloyed progress. American distributors sent entirely too many pictures into the market, neglecting to select on the basis of native entertainment tastes; and the last months of the season in domestic production were virtually a failure.

May marked the end of the season 1936-37 in Austria. All big feature films have been released and only less important ones left over for the summer. The American companies have shown many pictures here during the season; perhaps even too many. They inundated the local market with more films than it was able to consume and in their eagerness to import as many pictures as they could, they forgot to consider the specific taste of the local public. If they had imported fewer but more carefully selected films, they might have made better profits. A list of American and British film failures and successes may serve as an illustration for American film distributors of the types of film suitable for the Austrian public.

United Artists' biggest success was "Toumai, the Elephant Boy." The more discriminating public also liked "These Three" and "Rembrandt." This distributing company, which imports the best Korda (London Film) pictures as well as American products, suffers most from the overdose of American imports.

The Vienna public is getting tired of American pictures and it turns eagerly to French films which are a novelty here. Only a small number of French films are imported, but they all score roaring successes, in contrast to American films, which do not always come up to expectations.

Three films of United Artists, for example, which did well in other countries, were not much of a success in Vienna. They were "Dodsworth," "One Rainy Afternoon" and "Gay Desperado." They were victims of excessive American importation. "Fire Over England" failed because its whole outlook was strange to local tastes and also because the characters were considered too coldly drawn. "Dark Journey" and "The Man Who Could Work Miracles" also scored weak results.

Warner Bros. achieved great success with the following films: "The Charge of the Light Brigade," "The Story of Louis Pasteur," "Bright Lights," "Walking Dead." Other pictures, such as "White Angel" and "Petrified Forest," which were successes in Anglo-Saxon countries, did not do good business here because atmosphere was foreign to the local public. "Road Gang" was banned by the censors. Warner Bros. purchased remake rights to the two most successful Austrian films, "Episode" and "Maskerade."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's biggest successes in the last season were "Camille," "San Francisco," "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "The Great Ziegfeld." Receipts from "Gorgeous Hussy" were a great disappointment to MGM. The public was not interested in the film with its American history for its background, a chapter of history unknown to most people here.

Metro plans to bring in thirty-five to forty films next season. The company has taken over the Schweden Kino, one of the smartest Vienna first-run theatres, seating 700, for the showing of its own product. This is the first case of an American company owning its own theatre in Vienna. Max Bernstein, local Metro manager, plans to release the big Metro hits after advertising them on a large scale. This will be a new departure, since local theatres do not pay sufficient attention to publicity and leave it entirely to the distributing firms. Metro's theatre will be a pioneer of American methods of publicity.

Metro decided not to release its best product during the Salzburg Festivals, although two of its pictures last year attracted quite a lot of publicity and were also financially successful. The reason for this decision is that, whereas last year Metro was the only firm to make this experiment, this year nearly every American film company plans to show films in Salzburg during the Festivals.

Two Vienna Stars Signed

Two Vienna stars got American contracts through the local branch of Metro: Arthur Rieck and Ilona Hajmassy, a Hungarian actress, members of the Vienna Staatsoper, a beautiful woman with a fine voice. The company also purchased the remake rights of the film "The Emperor's Candles," adapted from a novel by Baroness Orczy.

RKO opened its branch in Vienna only a comparatively short time ago, but its business results so far have been excellent. "Follow the Fleet," "Swing Time" and "Mary of Scotland" were the biggest hits. This latter was the first American feature film synchronized into German in Vienna. Although the dubbing expenses came to 5,000 schillings, the film justified all financial and artistic expectations. Owing to clever propaganda the film yielded high receipts also in provincial towns, a great achievement since provincial audiences don't usually care for American films. Sol Lesser was here in January and contracted composer Oskar Strauss for a Bobby Breen film to be made for RKO.

Universal showed only a few films during the past season. Among these "My Man Godfrey" was the biggest hit. Another success was "Three Smart Girls." Its producer, Joe Pasternak, had been very popular while he was in Vienna.

Eight Weeks for "Deeds"

Columbia has no local branch in Vienna.

Association of Producers in Vienna Appeals to Government for Help as German Control Restricts Its Outlet

Its pictures are distributed by the local "Star." Its greatest success and the smashing hit of the season was "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," which ran for eight weeks in first-run, a very rare occurrence in the case of American pictures. "If You Could Only Cook," a typically American film, was not at all popular here. "Sissy" was banned by the Austrian Censors because of its subject matter.

Paramount had no outstanding success in the past season. "The Plainsman" and "Texas Rangers" were the most successful.

Twentieth Century-Fox had its greatest successes with pictures dubbed into German in Germany. Eight such films were shown in Austria and each yielded satisfactory receipts. The two Shirley Temple pictures, "Poor Little Rich Girl" and "Captain January" topped the list.

Austrian Production Lags

From the point of view of Austrian film production, the season has been a disastrous failure. Only two pictures have been shot in the three Vienna studios during the last three months and even these two were not new undertakings. At present the studios are empty and only very few plans have been made for new local films.

This standstill induced the Union of Local Producers, ("Gesamtverband der Osterreichischen Filmproduzenten), to present a memorandum to the Ministry of Commerce and Industry in which they set forth the desperate state of Austrian film production. The greatest problem lies in the fact that Germany, the chief market for Austrian films and without which market a German-speaking picture cannot hope to bring in even as much as production expenses, is in a position to force producers to make films according to the Aryan Paragraph. Austrian producers, of whom the majority are not Aryans, are compelled to accept the German terms or else fail to make their films pay. In this way, although many Austrian films are made with Jewish capital, it is nearly impossible for a non-Aryan director, talent and technical staff to get jobs on locals films.

Handicapped by Germany

Even so, only Austrian films may be imported in Germany annually without Kontingent tickets. The rest of the Austrian films do not get any privileges; they have to pay the price of the Kontingent ticket and are treated just like other foreign films. Recently, in the course of German-Austrian film negotiations, the Austrians strove to have this quota increased, but failed.

Germany's power over the Austrian film market increased a few months ago when the biggest Austrian producing and distributing company, Tobis-Sascha, got into financial difficulties. Fifty per cent of the shares were taken over by the Austrian bank, Credit-Anstalt, which never had dealt in the film business before. The other shares were bought by the German film industry. So it is now really Germany that controls the policy of the firm. The result is that Tobis-Sascha, which hitherto had the highest output, does not produce new films at all at present. Smaller German firms which had produced films in Vienna in the past, have also stayed away from Vienna studios of late. The films they made in Austria used to sell more easily in countries antagonistic to the present German regime than the ones made in Germany. But apparently this situation has changed because, for the present at any rate, no German-made films are being produced in the Vienna studios.

Reasons Given for Suspension

According to the memorandum, the reasons for the suspension of Austrian film production are as follows:

1. Expenses at the studios are far too high in Austria. The indoor work of an average film costs about 200,000 schillings. The daily fee for hiring the studio comes to 6,000 schillings alone. In Hungary and Czechoslovakia, the hiring of the studio costs only one-third of this sum, and wages, as well as all other production expenses, are much lower. That is why some Austrian producers prefer to make films in these countries rather than at home.

2. Money transfer conditions between Germany and Austria are not satisfactory. At present German debtors owe Austrian film producers a debt of one million marks, and the three Vienna studios a debt of one million, two hundred thousand marks. Although the Germans have promised to find a quicker and more satisfactory way of settling these blocked debts through a private clearing system, the results are far from being satisfactory.

3. The total receipts from Austrian film exports have greatly decreased, owing to the following reasons: (a) Many countries which in the past had been excellent customers of the Austrian film industry have now developed a national industry of their own and therefore buy a smaller number of Austrian films. Chief among these countries are Hungary, Czechoslovakia and the Scandinavian states. (b) A few countries, e.g. Holland, Switzerland and France, have devalued their currencies and therefore the receipts from these countries are much smaller. (c) American and British films have gained considerably in the European market so that the predominance of German-speaking films on the Continent has ceased.

The memorandum states that although the German-Austrian clearing deal has slightly improved the situation, the advantages granted have so far not shown material results. Austrian producers cannot hope to get any financial help from Germany before starting on a film, and so, burdened by the German terms, they think twice before starting production.

Urge Government Action

In order to save Austrian production and to avert the ultimate collapse of the once blossoming industry, the producers in their memorandum urged the Government to take all measures that lie in its power. They ask for production costs to be lowered, studio fees cut down and a Government loan to be available for producers at a reasonable rate of interest. They ask for distributing offices to be established abroad in order to facilitate the export of Austrian films, and demand that the money transfer between Germany and Austria should be taken into the hands of the Government and exercised under Government control and guarantee.

Prospect of New Large Market in China Now Looms

Plans of the Chinese government for opening the vast and populous interior of that country with railroads and electrical service in the future will provide an immeasurable opportunity for the expansion of theatres and motion pictures in the Orient, Morey Marcus, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer manager for China, now in New York for his first visit in four years, said in an interview this week.

The immense, untapped territory in the interior, with its hundreds of millions of population, is regarded by American distributors in China as a potentially fertile field for pictures, which are now barred by the absence of transportation systems and electrical service.

China's 300 sound theatres are limited to the large coastal cities. They are flourishing at the present time, Mr. Marcus said, with admission scales ranging from 20 to 90 cents, American currency. Political conditions are fairly well settled in China, he reported, and added that business there since the early part of the year is the best it has been in the past four years. Political conditions are an accurate barometer to business conditions in China, Mr. Marcus explained.

American distributors, despite the fact that Hollywood product is played in Chinese theatres in approximately the same proportion to the films of other nations as is the rule in the United States, are not plagued either by monetary or legislative restrictions, Mr. Marcus added. Censorship, too, is on a fair basis, he said, with few official objections being raised to anything which is not offensive to nationalism.

Mr. Marcus plans to remain in New York for about three months.

manager of short subjects and news; H. Lawrenson, foreign editor; Lowell Thomas, chief commentator; Ed Thorgersen, sports, and Lew Lehr, humorist. E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Pictures, and Jack Skirball, sales manager, also spoke. Following the speaking program, prizes were distributed to winners in the fourth S. R. Kent drive, by J. P. O'Loghlin, Kent drive leader, and William C. Gehring, central division manager.

Tuesday's program opened with a meeting in the Fiesta Room of the hotel. The 1937-'38 product was discussed by Mr. Clark and Col. Jason Joy, public relations counsel. The afternoon session was addressed by Mr. Zanuck.

Wednesday morning's session was devoted to product sales policy and to conferences on publicity and advertising. Addresses were made at this meeting by Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity; Harry Brand, studio publicity director; Arch Reeve, advertising; Earl W. Wingart, publicity, and Lee D. Balsly, manager of ad sales.

Later in the morning addresses were made by Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors; Sidney R. Kent, president; Spyros Skouras, vice-president and general manager of the National Theatres Corporation, and Herman Wobber, coast district manager.

Distribution department meetings occupied Wednesday's afternoon session, with separate conferences for branch and district managers, managers, salesmen and bookers and ad sales forces.

Schenck Speaks on Advertising

Mr. Schenck, speaking to the delegates on the general subject of advertising, said newspaper exploitation is one of the most important factors in the world distribution of motion pictures.

"A large part of our sales and theatre attendance has been traced directly to newspaper advertising," he said, "proving conclusively that this medium is far superior to any other which we use."

The board chairman also announced an expansion program.

Guests and theatre men who attended the convention included Dan Michalove, assistant to Mr. Kent, New York; Joseph Pincus, eastern talent scout, New York; William and Edward Wobber, brothers of Edward Wobber, San Francisco; Frank Underwood, eastern story manager, New York; Charles P. Skouras, president Fox West Coast Theatres; William T. Powers, film buyer, Skouras Theatres Corporation; George P. Skouras, president Skouras Theatres Corporation; Matthew Fox, film buyer, Skouras Theatres, New York; Alfred McNeill, Skouras Theatres Corporation, New York; Ted Kirkmeyer, district manager, Fox Intermountain Theatres, Butte, Mont.; Miss Hettie Grey Baker, censorship department, New York; Rick Ricketson, president, Fox Intermountain Theatres, Denver, Colo.; Elmer C. Rhoden, president, Fox Midwest Theatres, Kansas City, Mo.; Jack Hamrick, and A. L. Rosenberg, Evergreen Amusement Corporation, Seattle, Wash.

ALLIED DEMANDS FULL PROTECTION FOR ALL INDEPENDENT OWNERS

National Buying Combine Proposed at Milwaukee; Labor Affiliation Avoided; Zukor in Letter Defends Sales Policies

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH

in Milwaukee

"We are a stronger group today than ever before," said Nathan Yamins, of Fall River, Mass., president of the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, as he concluded the three day convention of Allied members at the Hotel Pfister in Milwaukee last week.

Mr. Yamins' attitude was that of many other Allied members who, in their fifth annual convention, felt that they had found ways and means of furthering their interests. These included strong protests against buying pictures by number rather than by title, and against special sales drives; demands for protection of independent exhibitors through legislation, specifically through state "chain store" or circuit taxes; and a proposal for a national buying combine.

The opening day was Wednesday, May 26th, the convention hall the Hotel Pfister's Fern Room, decorated with banners and other devices, one of which was a boxing ring giving the impression that when words would not suffice the opposing parties could settle their differences in the prize ring. As it turned out the ring was to be used for entertainment in the evening.

Mr. Yamins opened the first session following a meeting of the national board of directors.

In his opening address the Allied president listed the organization's principal objectives as passage of the Neely-Pettengill measure outlawing block booking, the theatre divorcement bill, and the proposal to tax circuit theatres, based on the recent decision of the United States supreme court in the Louisiana case.

Although "emancipation of the little fellow" is occurring generally through enactment of new laws such as the Robinson-Patman act forbidding price discrimination, the lot of the independent exhibitor has not improved, Mr. Yamins said. Attacking distributor policies he described as "the number racket" the practice of "selling pictures by number rather than by title, author, play or star."

The official also attacked the distributor affiliated circuits for expansion moves which he called "a mad rush to acquire theatres of every description. If this is permitted to continue," he said, "there soon won't be enough independent exhibitors left to form an exhibitor association, much less hold a convention."

Allied Prepares Draft of Model Bill For State 'Chain Store' Taxation

Following is the draft of a proposed "chain store" taxation bill studied by the Special Defense Committee of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors at the convention in Milwaukee:

Section 1. Definitions. Unless the context otherwise requires, the words defined in this section, whenever used in this act, shall have the meaning herein ascribed to them, viz:

(a) "Person" means any individual, partnership, firm, corporation, association, trust, or other form of business enterprise.

(b) "Theatre" means any theatre, auditorium, building, tent or other enclosure wherein motion pictures are publicly exhibited and an admission price is charged.

(c) "Theatre chain" means any group of two or more theatres owned, controlled or operated, in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, through stock-ownership, ownership or lease of realty, partnership contracts, booking or buying contracts, or otherwise, by a person or an affiliated group.

(d) "Affiliated group" means a number of persons each of whom operates a theatre or a theatre chain and are connected with each other and/or with a common parent company, either directly or indirectly, through stock-ownership, ownership or lease of realty, partnership contracts, operating contracts, booking or buying contracts, or otherwise.

(e) "Stock ownership" means the ownership directly or indirectly by a person, theatre chain or affiliated group of at least ——— per centum of the outstanding capital stock of any other person, theatre chain or affiliated group.

(f) "Total number of theatres in the chain or in the affiliated group" means the total number of theatres in the continental United States connected with any such theatre chain or affiliated group, either directly or indirectly through stock ownership, ownership or lease of realty, partnership contracts, operating contracts, booking or buying contracts, or otherwise.

Section 2. License tax. Beginning on the ——— day of —————, 19—, and on the ——— day of ————— of each succeeding year, every person engaged in the operation of a theatre or theatres in this State shall pay as and for a license fee for the right to conduct such business, a sum of money for each chair or seat regularly provided and maintained in said theatre or theatres for the occupancy of patrons in viewing exhibitions of motion pictures, which sum shall be graduated in accordance with the competitive ability, buying power and economic resources of the theatre chain or chains or affiliated group or groups with which such theatre or theatres may be connected, as set forth in the schedule of rates in Section 3, which schedule has been found and is declared to be fair and reasonable.

Section 3. Schedule of fees. The bases of fees shall range from 5c to $5.00 per seat.

(Add administrative provisions in accordance with State practice.)

Sales Survey Read

Following Mr. Yamins' address H. M. Richey of Detroit read the report of the sales survey which had been prepared from reports from approximately 500 exhibitors in 29 territories including Detroit, Boston, Los Angeles; Dallas and Oklahoma City; Indianapolis; Cleveland and Cincinnati; New York and New Jersey, and St. Louis and Kansas City.

"Based on our experience with this survey," Mr. Richey said, "we are prepared to recommend that the effort to obtain for buyers definite information as to selling conditions prevalent in different parts of the country should be made each year until the exhibitors have learned the value of it and regional associations have gained greater confidence in the movement."

After commenting on numerous reports from the territories covered, Mr. Richey's statement concluded that there is no such thing as a "national sales policy," that the greatest single factor in the sale of pictures is the weakness of the exhibitor, and that mounting film rentals, increased percentage, compulsory block booking, admission price control, and designation of playdates constitute the real menace to exhibitors.

Charges Promises Not Kept

After Mr. Richey completed his report P. J. Wood, of Ohio, said various companies had promised to deliver pictures on certain dates but had not kept their promises. Mr. Wood pointed out the vast profits shown by Paramount, Warners and Loews and intimated that the desires of the major companies to maintain and increase these profits, prompted their demands for more rental on next season's product. He cited a wire to Abram F. Myers, stating that Adolph Zukor did not own a single share of Paramount issues according to the last SEC report on file.

Mr. Wood was followed by P. J. Harrison, of Harrison's Reports, who told the delegates that circuits were buying theatres all over the nation in an attempt to get a stronger hold over exhibition. Mr. Harrison pointed out that an analysis of the Paramount contract showed that it was so written that the company could deliver only the product which it desired. He suggested to Mr. Yamins that a committee be formed to seek an explanation from Columbia as to just why they indulged in certain "unfair" practices.

"Night Must Fall" and "Marked Woman"

were cited by Mr. Harrison as two pictures that would never have been made if the Neely-Pettingill bill had been in effect. Harrison said both were good pictures but not the type for juvenile consumption.

Labor Committee Named

The Wednesday afternoon session closed with the appointment of two committees. One, a labor committee, was appointed at the suggestion of Mr. Myers. Fred Herrington of Pennsylvania was named chairman and M. J. McWilliams of Wisconsin, Aaron Saperstein of Illinois, Martin Smith of Ohio and Frank Wetzman members. Mr. Myers outlined to this group a number of communications he had received regarding the labor question.

The sales survey prepared by Mr. Richey was studied by a committee consisting of Sidney Samuelson of New Jersey, M. A. Rosenberg of Pittsburgh, Fred DeLodder of Michigan and P. J. Wood of Ohio.

A committee on resolutions and other matters which did not reach the floor of the convention was named. Col. H. A. Cole of Texas was chairman. Other members were: Lee Newberry of New Jersey, E. L. Peaslee of Minnesota, I. R. Holycross of Minnesota.

This concluded the business session for the first day and the evening was devoted to a "Monte Carlo Night." Free beer, wrestling matches, vaudeville acts and games of chance with "free money" supplied to all guests, made the occasion a festive one.

Labor Affiliation Avoided

On Thursday morning an executive session was held at which the labor situation was discussed. The outcome of this meeting was the decision to have each state group handle labor matters in the manner they saw fit. Suggestions that Allied join the CIO in order to combat producer-distributor members with IATSE-AFL affiliations, were rejected. Individual territories demand individual attention and joining the CIO or the AFL was a matter dependent upon the state groups, it was said.

Mr. Myers reported on the Wagner Act from a legal aspect and suggested various means of operating under the many state labor laws which have been modeled on that law.

The first business of the Thursday afternoon session was the selection of a committee to discuss and report on suggested action Allied should take regarding radio. This committee was headed by Arthur Price of Maryland, with J. B. Fishman, Wilbur Peterson, Henry Greenberger and Edward F. Maertz as members.

H. A. Cole of Texas, reporting as chairman of the resolutions committee, revealed that this group had been evenly divided regarding a plan for the organizing and developing of a national buying combination. A vote of the membership on the matter was 74 affirmative and 60 negative.

The plan outlined by Mr. Cole would make it mandatory for all Allied members to relinquish full control of their film purchases to the proposed national combine. This combine would be set up as a separate company controlled by Allied through regional associations affiliated with the national body of directors in the contemplated buying combination. These directors would elect officers of the buying company, the support of which would be guaranteed by payment of each subscribing member of three percent of his annual film rental. Mr. Cole made it clear that in theory he thought this plan would be exceptionally good. But, he said, the differences in the committee vote, which stood two for the plan and two against, one member being absent, had developed over the feasibility of selling the idea to the members of Allied.

The 74-60 vote was not on the plan as Mr. Cole outlined it, but was a general approval of further study of the idea and for the submission of the findings to the delegates at a later date.

RADIO APPEARANCES PROTESTED BY ALLIED

Exhibitor organizations, including the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, were joined by Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors in protesting the appearance of Hollywood stars on radio programs at intervals frequent enough to endanger their popularity and at times which conflict with theatre attendance hours. The convention adopted a resolution "vigorously protesting unfair radio competition".

Resolutions Adopted

Next in the order of business, often disrupted by members going out after free packages of popcorn which a popcorn machine vendor graciously supplied, was passage of many resolutions. Sidney Samuelson as chairman of the committee on film buying submitted five, all of which were adopted unanimously. One, concerning sales, attacked percentage bookings, compulsory playdates, weekly payment on shorts whether used or not, the practice of distributors in holding out product sold on one season's program as an inducement to sell the following season's and the reallocation of product at the distributor's discretion with the result that percentage brackets underwent changes and the exhibitor found himself spending more money on film than he had calculated. The text of the resolution also called upon all independent exhibitors regardless of association affiliation to help these points by stiffening sales resistance and, by less mutual distrust and more cooperation, to avoid falling into the distributors' hands when the selling season gets under way.

Full publicity for these aims was provided in the final section of this lengthy resolution which called upon participating exhibitors to acquaint the public with their objectives through trailers, programs and public groups. Its complexities also embraced support of the Congressional probe of the industry as well as enlisting support for passage of the Neely-Pettengill bill.

The second of Mr. Samuelson's five resolutions provided for the continuation of a sales survey next year such as the one made by Mr. Richey this year. The third resolution condemned Paramount for its "ruthlessness" in holding out for this year's program six pictures sold to exhibitors. Its text endorsed similar condemnatory resolutions passed by the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association. Mr. Samuelson here read and repeated what he deemed high points of a letter sent by Adolph Zukor explaining why these pictures were not to be delivered.

The fourth resolution again condemned Paramount, this time on its accessories plan. Included by amendment was Vitagraph for a similar plan, while the future was taken care of by a supplementary phrase applying to any other distributors who may adopt identical plans. This resolution at the same time called upon the Allied membership to aid independent poster exchanges and endorsed the action of the Twin Cities exhibitor group along such lines.

While Paramount bore the brunt of Allied's fire, Columbia came in for an attack as well. In Mr. Samuelson's fifth resolution Columbia was scored for withholding "Lost Horizon" from this season's schedule under what he described as "the tricky roadshow clause." The text went on to say that the chief reason for exhibitor deals with Columbia this year had been the Capra picture which they now will not get. Samuelson urged theatre owners to bear "their Columbia losses" in mind when they made their 1937-'38 deals with that company.

Zukor Defends Company

Failure by Paramount to deliver six pictures sold on the 1936-37 schedule does not constitute "unfair play" Adolph Zukor, chairman of the Paramount board of directors, said in a letter read to the convention before the voting on the resolutions.

"Our method of selling for years, as you know, has been to deliver pictures according to release year," Mr. Zukor wrote. "If the pictures were generally released in a given year they were covered by the contract. If they were not so generally released, the exhibitor had no claim to them. Of this, the exhibitors have been well aware and no one has been fooled about it.

"I know exhibitors throughout the country are appreciative of the insurmountable difficulties which we have had to overcome and of the progress we have made in delivering these fine pictures. We were hopeful, indeed, that we could deliver all of the pictures which we planned to release for the 1936-37 season, but contingencies arose beyond all human expectations and it is surprising that we obtained the results we did."

Following Mr. Samuelson, Abram Myers took the rostrum. He pointed out various parts of the Zukor letter as being contradictory and described it as "utterly insincere."

"You found in Mr. Zukor's letter," said Mr. Myers, "an estimate of your intelligence. His statement regarding 'insurmountable objects' would, it seems, be more worthy of Goldwyn, such is its meaning."

Mr. Myers said the independent exhibitor was a partner of the distributor when he played percentage pictures, whether he wanted to be a partner or not. He said a group like Allied should not tolerate conditions such as existed today and that unless Allied members could work things out so they could operate at a reasonable profit there was no use in their continuing in business. He pointed out that through legislation Allied could gain a great deal and said that recent Supreme Court decisions have opened new vistas for the independent exhibitor. In territories where the exhibitor wanted to strike a lusty blow at their opponents they would now have the support of thousands of other retailers in other fields, he added. He cited the Louisiana chain store tax case and told the assemblage he had conferred with other groups before coming to Milwaukee and that these groups were planning aggressive campaigns for anti-chain legislation.

Mr. Myers said it was the experience of Col. Cole last winter which led to the introduction of House Bill No. 160, calling for a wide probe of the entire motion picture industry. This action, he added, paved the way for the present Congress to handle the many problems which have been hanging fire for years as regards the interests of the independent exhibitor. The intense interest in the Supreme Court situation was holding up action on the Neely-Pettengill bill, Myers thought, but he felt sure that the bill would have proper attention before very long.

"There should be no flagging of interest on these bills," Mr. Myers concluded, "the important thing is that unless there is a wider display of interest by exhibitors and more determination to carry out the program already outlined, the delay will be most harmful."

Sales Drives Discussed

Following his talk it was decided to have a committee appointed to investigate sales drives which have the enforced participation of the exhibitor. The personnel of this committee was to be kept secret and the distributors will be asked to submit applications for the right to conduct such drives in the future. This committee is designed to pass on petitions and endeavor to prevent Allied members from participating unless the committee sanctions it.

At this time also a closed executive session was decided upon at which W. A. Steffes presented a draft of his proposed "model chain store tax" for state legislatures.

Mr. Steffes, chairman of the Special Defense Committee, told of the progress that had been made with the theatre-divorce bills in the various states, especially North Dakota. Following his speech the various state groups gathered in different parts of the hall and all unanimously decided to support the theatre divorce bills and chain tax bills by introducing one or both in their various state legislatures. At the same time the groups unanimously decided to pledge the raising of whatever funds would be needed for the advancement of these plans.

Among the states represented were New England, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Iowa, Texas, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota. No specific quotas were announced this year but amounts will be determined after the committee in charge has investigated the situation further.

An emergency meeting of the board of directors was held immediately following this session and it was decided that Allied must expand to take care of the many plans for the coming year. The strong support shown during the afternoon session prompted this action.

Banquet on Thursday

The annual banquet held Thursday night was attended by more than 600 persons. Headline speaker of the evening was Governor William Langer of North Dakota who told of the progress his state had made during the past twenty years. Governor Langer spoke about the theatre-divorce bill and said that he expected it would be attacked by those opposed to it in an attempt to have it held unconstitutional. In that regard the Governor said, "But don't you worry, we'll fight your enemies through any court, because in North Dakota we see to it that our laws are properly upheld." He added, too, that he had no doubt that the theatre-divorce law would be held constitutional regardless of the strong opposition against it. The delegates present stood up and cheered the Governor's remarks.

Mr. Meyers was toastmaster for the evening and other speakers he introduced were Oscar Erickson, Insurance Commissioner of Minnesota, Attorney General Duben of Wisconsin and Edward Golden of Monogram Pictures. President Yamins made the closing speech of the evening. His white summer tuxedo among a row of black tuxedoed speakers made him a thing of sartorial splendor. Such a revelation was it that Yamins spent his speaking time explaining he thought Miami winter styles would be appropriate spring styles in Milwaukee.

CONVENTION CITY SELECTION DELAYED

Although several cities were reported bidding for the 1938 Allied States convention, the place and date will not be fixed until the board of directors holds its annual meeting next January. The annual election of officers also takes place at the board of directors meeting.

The balance of the evening was spent in playing Ten-O-Win, entertainment and dancing. Three of the four state goverors expected to attend were unable to do so.

The final session of the convention was held Friday morning. First to report was Arthur Price of the radio committee who presented a resolution, unanimously adopted, stating that Allied vigorously protested the appearance of motion picture celebrities on radio programs that were in any way competitive with the interests of the motion picture exhibitor.

Tax Measure Read

Mr. Richey reported that a chain theatre tax bill had been worked out along the lines of the Louisiana measure and that it provided for the licensing of theatres and the imposition of a tax from five cents to $5.00 per seat. No organized schedule of rates had been set up, Mr. Richey said. He asked that undivided support be given chain tax legislation when it was sponsored by the various Allied groups.

After Mr. Richey concluded, "Fighting Al" Steffes took the platform.

"The time has arrived, I believe, when we can sit down across the table from the various producer-distributor theatre operators for the purpose of ironing out the difficulties the independent theatre owner is confronted with," he began. "I have in mind a meeting of the defense committee with such men as Barney Balaban, Adolph Zukor, Nicholas Schenck and other producers—not their hirelings, such as Hays, Pettijohn, and others,—to talk this situation over in a manner beneficial to all concerned."

Mr. Steffes outlined various reasons why such a conference would be of much value at this time. He also said that if such a conference was held, the producer-distributors would be asked to stop building "spite" theatres, and to close those which they now operated.

"Square Deal" Asked

"We wish to perpetuate ourselves in this business to earn a reasonably fair profit," Mr. Steffes said. "The day of 40-60 per cent pictures has to be stopped. We don't want to destroy the producers or distributors and put ourselves on top—but we want a square deal. Unless the producers and distributors agree to some of our requests more legislation will be forthcoming in dozens of states within the next few years." And if it is passed, Mr. Steffes added, it will drive the producer out of the exhibition business.

Another thing Mr. Steffes brought out regarding the proposed conference was that before it could be held the independents must be assured by the producers that what they agreed to do in the conference they would carry out. Steffes also thought that one result of such a conference would be the disbanding of the MPTOA and that the opening of Allied to all affiliated theatre groups would result in a united industry—prepared to fight its common enemies.

The speaker emphasized the point that something had to be done to curb the expansion of independent theatre chains which were as great a menace as the producer-distributor operated theatres. The chain tax bill idea, he felt, would help in this regard.

He said the conference he had in mind was not a "Kuykendall conference—one that took two years to happen," but one that would get going right away.

Regarding the theatre chain tax bill Mr. Steffes said he expected the Minnesota group would propose a chain tax bill on theatres at this session of the legislature.

After his talk it was decided to let the defense committee use discretionary powers in the arranging of a conference with the producer-distributor operators of theatres and to report results of this action.

An attempt by Sidney Samuelson to have the matter of the conference discussed another time as many members had left for their homes the previous night, brought a protest from Mr. Steffes who said that this was a regularly scheduled meeting and if the entire membership was not present it was their own fault.

Censorship Resolution Fails at K. of C. Meet

Delegates to the 42nd annual state convention of the Knights of Columbus at Geneva, N. Y. this week failed to vote on a resolution demanding "much more severe state and national censorship of motion pictures." The organization, however, will continue its fight against Red propaganda in motion pictures, pledging "unalterable opposition to atheistic communism" as the meeting drew to a close.

A resolution, which was passed, said, "The New York council reiterates unalterable opposition to atheistic communism, to its alleged principles, its aims, purposes and methods and requests members of the Knights of Columbus, wherever situated, to oppose communism wherever and in whatever form it may be manifested."

R. H. Rubin Goes West

Robert Hitchcock Rubin, son of J. Robert Rubin, general counsel of Loew's, has resigned from his post in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer New York scenario department and has left for Hollywood, where he will join the studio in a production post. Mrs. Rubin accompanied him. His father, now in Europe, is due back this month.

IN COURTS

Action Sought on Fox Contempt of Court

A request for the speeding up of the contempt of court proceedings against Eva Fox, wife of William Fox, and Herbert Leitsteen, Fox family bookkeeper, has been filed with the United States circuit court in Philadelphia by John Lloyd, Jr., counsel for the Fox creditors.

The two defendents had refused to testify in the New Jersey bankruptcy proceedings against Mr. Fox. They have appealed from the order of Judge John Boyd Avis of Camden, who held them in contempt.

RCA Intervenes in Suits Over Records

Seeking to establish a precedent preventing radio stations from making unauthorized use of platters, the RCA Manufacturing Company has filed a motion to intervene in the federal court at Los Angeles in the suit of Wayne King, orchestra leader, against Warner Brothers' Broadcasting Company in which an injunction is sought against the use of his Victor records.

RCA attorneys have also filed a similar motion in the suit of the American Society of Recording Artists against Warners in the superior court over alleged use of Jan Garber discs.

Suit Against Atlantic

Atlantic Film Productions, Ltd., of London is named defendant in a $30,000 suit filed in the New York supreme court by George McLeod Baynes, who claims that on January 15, 1936, he executed a contract with the defendant whereby he was to arrange for distribution of the Atlantic picture, "Thunder Over the City" and for his service he was to receive 10 per cent of the gross income. He further asserts that he arranged for the distribution of the picture here and in Canada through Columbia.

Windsor Sues Keller-Dorian

Windsor Productions, Inc., a Deleware corporation, and Leo Lipp and S. C. Grimson, color experts, have filed suit against Keller-Dorian for $7,800, charging breach of contract. The plaintiffs alleged that Keller-Dorian had broken a contract under which Mr. Lipp and Mr. Grimson were to have each received $300 a week for their services in connection with the use of Keller-Dorian color for two Grand National productions.

Chaplin Suit Shifted

The suit of Films Sonores Tobis Society Anonyme against Charles Chaplin and United Artists has been ordered transferred from the New York supreme court to the United States district court. The plaintiff claims the defendant infringed in his "Modern Times" on "A Nous La Liberte" and seeks an accounting of profits as well as damages.

Manny Reiner, formerly at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has joined the publicity and advertising department of Monogram in New York.

New York Chance Games Continuing

Despite the elimination of all chance games in Greater New York by major circuits, independent theatres this week were still continuing the practice with no indication of stopping in the near future. Several independent circuit heads have, time and time again in the past few months, expressed a willingness to discontinue the practice of giveaways, but they still contend that numerous efforts to have competitive houses follow suit are of no avail.

Meanwhile, upstate at Buffalo, chance games were finally legalized this week in the opinion of Corporation Counsel Gregory U. Harmon, which ruled Bank Night legal if customers sign a register book.

At the same time in Omaha, some theatres, but not all, were abandoning their chance games because of an injunction obtained by the state attorney general. Admission was made by County Attorney James English, joint petitioner with Attorney General R. C. Hunter before the Nebraska supreme court for the injunction, that no legal method is available to hold Bank Night until the court acts.

In Baltimore, Joseph Kane, manager of the Royal for colored persons, was found not guilty of conducting a lottery by a jury in the criminal court. The trial was based on the operation of Bingo at the theatre. A previous conviction was set aside by the supreme court, which ordered a new trial.

Two cases contesting the legality of "guarantee insurance" for theatre Bank Night awards are still pending in Dallas, Texas, according to District Attorney Andrew Patton. A case now on trial before the court of criminal appeals in Austin is expected to determine the legality of theatre chance games in Texas.

Theatre operators in three Upper Peninsular cities in Michigan, Marquette, Ishpeming and Negaunee, upon request from John Voelkner, Marquette county attorney, have agreed to discontinue Bank Night and other games in which money prizes are awarded patrons.

Suit has been filed at Middletown, Ohio, in the common pleas court by Sarah Stein against the Southio Theatre Corporation, operating the Paramount, and Roy Peffley, manager, to recover $500 exemplary damages and $2.10 for admissions paid. This is the first suit involving theatre games to be filed in that territory.

Ray Kaplan, chief of detectives of Delaware County outside of Philadelphia, this week rescinded his order of last week outlawing Bank Night and Bingo. Following conferences with exhibitors he suspended his order until a decision is handed down in a pending suit to test the legality of the games. He will be guided by the court's ruling.

In Quitman, Ga., the manager of the Ilex has discontinued Bank Night after vigorous recommendations concerning that and other giveaways by the Brooks County grand jury, and in Springfield, Ill., Mortimer E. Berman, manager of the Orpheum, was fined $100 on his plea of guilty of the charge of violation of the state lottery laws in connection with the operation of Bank Night at his theatre.

OBITUARIES

Hal Grady, Lindsey Manager, Dies Suddenly

Hal B. Grady, 29, manager of the Lindsey Theatres in Lubbock, Texas, died there last Monday of pneumonia which set in following an operation for the removal of his tonsils. Funeral services were held at Hugo, Okla., Tuesday. His widow and a young daughter survive.

Mr. Grady, who won the January Silver Plaque in the Quigley Awards competition conducted by the Managers' Round Table Club of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, entered the industry with the Griffith Amusement Company at Stillwater, Okla., where he worked at the theatres and attended Oklahoma A. & M. College. Following his graduation he served as manager in Wellington, Texas; Pampa, Texas, and Hugo, Okla. He went to Lubbock in 1934 to take over the Lindsey houses.

F. E. Ives, Process Inventor, Passes

Frederick Eugene Ives, inventor of the halftone photo-engraving process and a pioneer in color photography, died last Friday at his home in Philadelphia. He was 81 years old. A son, Dr. Herbert Ives, head of the Bell Laboratories, survives.

In 1885 Mr. Ives made the first production of panchromatic photographic plates, with chlorophyl and eosine sensitizing and glass sealed dyed gelatin and collodion screens for orthochromatic photography. Then he produced the first cross-line screen halftone process now in general use, but did not patent the process.

Joseph E. Martin

Joseph E. Martin, 78, secretary and treasurer of the Southern Real Estate and Financial Company, owners of the American, Orpheum, and Schubert theatre properties in St. Louis, died at St. John's Hospital there of heart disease last Thursday. He resided at Kirkwood, a St. Louis suburb.

Arthur Rowland, former owner of the White Star theatre at Hamtramck, Mich., suburb of Detroit, and a vaudeville booker for about 20 years, was buried Monday at Rochester, N. Y.

Marshall W. Taylor

Marshall W. Taylor, executive secretary to the Philadelphia Sesquicentennial Exposition in 1926, and well known in industry circles, died Monday night at the Skin and Cancer Hospital Hospital there. Mr. Taylor, who was 69, had been ill for several months.

M. Lebovitz of Grand Amusement Company of Chattanooga, Tenn., is in New York for a short visit.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Here we've been having the world's champion pass collector right in our midst of MOTION PICTURE HERALD editorial colleagues, and never knowing a thing about it, until reading in Rockefeller Center weekly—the community magazine for us Rockefellerites—that Gertrude Merriam, secretary of our Managers' Round Table Club, has collected some 2,000 passes, in Greek, Italian, French, Chinese, Japanese, German, Hungarian and Yiddish and Spanish (both Rebel and Red). That makes her the world's biggest collector of motion picture theatre passes. Which is equivalent to a Kentucky Colonelcy—which she has, too.

If Pass-Collector Miss Merriam happened to be in Soerabaja, Java, and one always runs that chance, she could walk into the Sampoerna Theatre and get two on the aisle. She could go to any show of the Shyam Talkies in Jubbulpoer, India, or sit in the dress stall at the Capitol Theatre in Karachi. Gert has passes in leather cases, passes of cardboard, passes for one night and passes for a season. As a matter of fact, a lot of members of the Managers Round Table Club have been making passes for her for years.

Whitney Bolton, the Beau Broadway columnist of New York's Morning Telegraph, has been vacationing in Hollywood, away from Broadway, for so long he's getting wistful.

Whitney writes back to his paper that 'twas a sad, sad sight, indeed, he witnessed the other night at the Brown Derby—a "heart tug," he called it. There, at a little side table, sat a man, alone, ignored—"It's a wonder his dinner didn't stick in his throat," cried Bolton, "as one by one, they passed his table, looked, averted their faces, and went on."

"But he took it with his chin up," chortled Mr. Bolton.

The sad, sad subject of Whitney Bolton's sob story was none other than William Fox, who sold out Fox Film to the bankers for $20,000,000, and then went and cleaned up another $20,000,000 in the stock market.

Warner Brothers have received a flat and definite cancellation on "Flyaway Baby," from the Royal theatre in Columbus, Ohio. The picture not only has not been shown for inspection or otherwise, but it hasn't even been finished, and so, receipt of the cancellation notice perplexed them. Their questioning of the "sight unseen" refusal of the Royal was answered when they found that the name of the objector to "Flyaway Baby" is Mr. Stork, owner of the house.

Motion picture theatre owners started "Bank Night" merchandising. But the butcher, baker and candlestick maker have since taken on the game widely. Some have benefited, others have not, as witness the following advertisement appearing last Sunday in The Star, in Lawrence, Mass.:

> E. Louis Ganem, Manager of Ganem's Market, announces that amongst those attending the 'Bank Day' were a crowd of thieves who stole a large amount of bacon, oranges and bananas. Therefore there will be no more 'Bank Days' at Ganem's Market.

"The Star Spangled Banner" should be played in Twentieth Century-Fox's "Nancy Steele Is Missing," but isn't; the American flag should be displayed, but isn't.

When Director George Marshall ordered the national anthem sung during the filming of the picture, as part of the situation incident to the entry of the United States into the World War, the Fox studio instructed him to substitute "America" because of rules in certain foreign countries which prohibit its rendition. He was also compelled to vary from realism in court scenes by foregoing the display of the American flag—a legal requirement in American courts—because it, too, is barred on the screen in certain other countries.

A rattlesnake with screen ambitions caused a near panic and broke up a story conference when it wandered into Buddy DeSylva's bungalow-office at Universal Studios in California. The snake was finally subdued by a barrage of scenarios, music rolls and the harsh words of scenario writers. It will hang later, after taxidermist treatment, in Mr. DeSylva's office, as visible evidence that there really was a snake in a Hollywood studio.

From the towering headquarters of Paramount Pictures, Inc., overlooking Times Square, in New York, comes this formal and official announcement:

> "A new set of bedside controls is being installed at the Paradise (California) ranch of Cecil Blount DeMille, so that the producer-director can start and stop a giant phonograph, a giant radio, or a huge automatic pipe organ at will after he has retired."

The day was when Mr. DeMille went in for faucets. Now it's Faust.

"Dripping," and not "gripping," is the word air-conditioning engineers use to describe a melodrama "thriller" that has theatre customers sitting on the edges of their movie seats.

Normally the average adult evaporates off about a tenth of a pound of moisture an hour, but under the influence of torrid romance or wild-firing gangster movies, this amount may increase by 50 per cent, according to Professor Axel Marin, of the University of Michigan College of Engineering.

On a summer day, if 1,000 persons are viewing a dull to medium picture, the ventilating system must take care of about 100 pounds of moisture per hour. But let G-men surround some bandits and start a convincing machine-gun battle and the air-conditioning apparatus will have to handle 150 pounds of moisture.

The New York Post, via Jimmy Fidler in Hollywood, credits a piece of cheese with starting the Jeritza-Sheehan romance which culminated in marriage.

Maria Jeritza's operatic agent had interested Winnie Sheehan, then the generalissimo of Fox production, in seeing a film test. At the same time, Mme. Jeritza was sending friends a few packages of imported cheese. Seems that the film-test and the cheese package were similar in size and shape, in cans, and they became mixed, a can of cheese going to the studio by mistake.

So when Sheehan went to the studio projection room to see the test, the projectionist sent down word from his booth that he "couldn't run a piece of cheese." That also being studio slang for "not so good," Sheehan misunderstood and said, "if it's that bad, forget it." So the can of cheese went back to Jeritza with a rejection slip. This amused the singer and she called personally on Sheehan. Together they laughed over the incident—and the road to romance was short from there.

Someone over at the offices of Acousticon, a hard-of-hearing device for private and theatre use, only now has hit upon the idea of ballyhooing the Acousticon as "The Coronation Acousticon," because the deafened Queen Alexandra used an Acousticon to aid her in responding to ceremonial questions at her Coronation 35 years ago.

On the morning when Jimmy Grainger, general sales manager, opened Universal's sales convention in the Siesta Room—what a place for a "pep" talk—of the Hotel Ambassador in Los Angeles, his opening address from the stage was interrupted by Joe Weil, who announced that he had arranged for a special broadcast from Washington for the delegates. Fiddling around with the dial of a radio set on the stage before the interested salesmen, Mr. Weil succeeded for a while in picking up static only, and then the voice of an announcer boomed: "We are now taking you to Washington for a broadcast direct to the Universal convention in Los Angeles."

"My friends," began a voice that was all too Rooseveletian, "I salute you. I salute everything you are doing, everything you are saying—but what the hell is a convention good for if you haven't got any telephone numbers."

Declaring that films have as much chance of surviving the legitimate theatre as "a celluloid dog chasing an asbestos cat through hell," Maxwell Anderson the other day fired an excoriating broadside at Hollywood, in a speech before the American Theatre Council convention, on Broadway. He further expressed his opinion that even the best movies are but "soup from the same Hollywood can," and the product of an invention that will disappear as soon as that invention has been superseded. Motion Pictures, he cracked, are a "similacrum of the real thing, a reprint series, a line of glossy, refurbished second-hand clothes."

Sam Goldwyn, or some other Hollywood producer will probably come right back at Mr. Anderson with an offer of a writing job at $63,000 a week, or something—and Mr. Anderson will probably take it.

COOPERATIVE UNIT TO MAKE POLITICAL FILMS

Announced Purpose to Make Films at Cost for Groups with "Progressive" Themes

Frontier Films Corporation, an "independent, non-profit motion picture producing and distributing organization devoted to the production of realistic films of American life," has been formed in New York by a group of writers, directors, playwrights, actors and cameramen, to place the corporation at the disposal of trade unions, educational institutions, social welfare groups, farm organizations, and the like, for the production of any "progressive" pictures these groups may desire and at a cost covering only actual production expenses.

In its prospectus, the new company says, "The movies possess an enormous power to influence habit and opinion. Hollywood has used this power to mold the minds of the nation in its own image. Now for the first time an independent movie producing organization enters the field to produce films that will wield this power consistently on the side of progress."

There are no stockholders or bondholders in the new corporation and any profit that may be derived from distribution will be returned to the production of the organization's own reel, "The World Today," Lionel Berman, executive director, pointed out in outlining his plans. Mr. Berman is the only member of the group drawing a salary and working full time on the organization's affairs.

Paul Strand, photographer who recently completed "The Wave" for the Mexican government, is president of the organization while Ralph Steiner, writer, and Leo Hurwitz, former member of the Resettlement Administration, are vice-presidents. In addition, John Howard Lawson, playwright, is secretary and Bernard J. Reis, public accountant, is treasurer. Members of the board of directors are Kyle Crichton, member of the staff of Collier's Magazine; William Osgood Field, author; Elia Kazan, member of the Group Theatre; Anita Marburg, member of the faculty of Sarah Lawrence College; Philip Stevenson, playwright, and David Wolff, writer.

The advisory board and technical consultants include Catherine Bauer, Albert Bein, Bruce Bliven, Vera Caspary, Carlos Chavez, Aaron Copland, Malcolm Cowley, Paul de Kruif, John Dos Passos, Waldo Frank, Lester Granger, Lillian Hellman, Josephine Herbst, Gardner Jackson, Arthur Kober, Max Lerner, Archibald Mac Leish, Lewis Milestone, Clifford Odets, Sidney Perelman, Edwin Rolfe, Muriel Rukeyser, George Seldes, Irwin Shaw, Claire Sifton, George Soule, Virginia Stevens, Genevieve Taggard, Leane Zugsmith.

The first issue of "The World Today," which is admittedly patterned after The March of Time, is currently playing several small neighborhood theatres in Manhattan. The picture was booked on a flat rental basis and plans are now being formulated to release it nationally. Garrison Films is handling the distribution of the first reel, but the others, which are planned for each month, will be distributed through the Frontier office.

A script on child labor is being prepared for the second reel and although Mr. Berman pointed out that the National Child Labor Committee is not actually financing the production it is assisting in every other possible way. The picture will tell "the human story of a child who works."

Mr. Berman also said that Frontier productions will be printed in 16mm size as well as on 35mm stock in order to reach a "ready and growing market for 16mm films" in schools, churches, clubs and civic organizations.

National Decency Legion Classifies Ten New Pictures

Of 10 new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the past week seven were approved for general patronage and three were listed as unobjectionable for adults. The productions and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Blazing Sixes," "Maria, die Magd" (German), "Mile a Minute Love," "Sing, Cowboy, Sing," "There Goes My Girl," "This Is My Affair," "Under the Red Robe." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Amore E Dolore" (Italian), "Kid Galahad," "Das Madchen Irene" (German).

Trans Lux Increasing Its Total of Theatres

With two new houses scheduled to be opened in a few months, the Trans Lux theatre expansion program now provides for another six houses which will bring the total to 12 by the end of the year. Two houses are being operated in New York, one in Philadelphia and another in Washington at the present. The two fall openings will both be in New York City.

Negotiations are now being completed for two out-of-town properties which are expected to be concluded in a few weeks.

Mrs. Roosevelt as Sponsor

Grand National has invited Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt to sponsor the premier of "The Girl Said No" in Washington this month. Twenty-five per cent of the receipts of the opening will be donated to any charity Mrs. Roosevelt may suggest if she accepts the invitation.

Court Cuts and Allows Two RKO Claims on Leases

Negotiations for the settlement of theatre lease claims which were filed against RKO by Karl Hoblitzelle interests and Walter Reade's Broadway and 47th St. Corporation in an original amount aggregating more than $9,300,000 were concluded in New York last Friday. Stipulations were entered into by the Irving Trust Company, reorganization trustee for RKO, and the claimants for the compromise and allowance of the claims at an aggregate $1,250,000.

A petition asking that a hearing be set on the proposed settlement was filed Saturday with the United States district court by Donovan, Leisure, Newton and Lumbard, counsel to the RKO trustee. If approved by the court, the proposed settlements will eliminate the two largest theatre lease claims, exclusive of the Rockefeller Center claim, which were filed against RKO in the company's reorganization proceedings.

The Hoblitzelle claims were brought by the Hoblitzelle Corporation, Hoblitzelle Realty Company and Hoblitzelle Investment Company and were based on defaulted leases made by RKO Southern and guaranteed by the parent corporation. Special Master Thomas D. Thatcher allowed the claims for an aggregate $492,417, exclusive of any treatment for the disallowed balance of the claims which might be obtained under an RKO reorganization plan.

Under the provisions of Section 77-B of the Bankruptcy Laws which permit claims for three years' rent on defaulted leases, the Hoblitzelle claims for rental would have amounted to $1,393,036. The proposed settlement of the claims is for $750,000.

The Broadway and 47th St. Corporation claim was filed originally for $1,893,983 for a default on the RKO lease on the Mayfair theatre. It was allowed by Mr. Thatcher at $400,000, likewise exclusive of any treatment for the disallowed balance which might be obtained under a reorganization plan. The claimant had indicated that it would appeal from the court allowance. Under the three-year 77-B limitation the claim would have amounted to approximately $890,000. The proposed settlement is for $500,000.

If approved by the court, both claims would be treated as those of general creditors under the RKO reorganization plan. The plan proposes to offer such creditors one share of new RKO preferred stock and one share of common for each $100 in claims. Thus, under the settlement, Hoblitzelle interests would receive 7,500 shares of new RKO preferred and a like number of new common, and Reade would receive 5,000 shares of each.

Sheehans to Hollywood

With definite plans for engaging in production next season, Winfield R. Sheehan, accompanied by his wife, Maria Jeritza, left New York for Hollywood this week. Mr. Sheehan had spent two weeks in New York and declined to discuss his plans other than to say he had acquired several story properties while in town and that he would return during the summer.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Hollywoodpulp

Henry Ginsberg, for the past year general manager of Selznick International was elected vice-president at the annual board meeting and will relieve David O. Selznick of business matters, freeing his time for concentration on production. Accompanying Mr. Selznick on his return from the meeting in New York were Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Mrs. Selznick, George Cukor, William A. Wellman, Ben Hecht, Robert Carson and Barbara Keon . . . George D. Lottman, New York publicity man, has opened a branch office here with Murry Weintraub and Jerry Olenick in charge . . . W. A. Bach, managing director of Western Electric in London is staying on after attending the SMPE convention to visit West Coast ERPI licensee plants . . . Ralph Ravenscroft, publicity director for Harry Sherman productions, has been made production manager of the Hopalong Cassidy series . . . Andrew L. Stone, producer and director of "The Girl Said No" for Grand National, has signed a five year producer-director contract with Paramount . . . Vance Carroll, formerly an associate of Cinema Casting, has been appointed casting director for Grand National . . . Plans for filming John Galsworthy's "The Forsyte Saga" on the scale of "Grand Hotel" are interpreted as foreshadowing a production running well beyond the two-hour mark becoming standard for big pictures.

Studio Taper Off

Studios tapered off a bit as to production load with 13 pictures finishing and 7 starting during the pre-Memorial Day week. Most of this is regarded as run-of-mill material, although two or three surprise exceptions are possible.

Three pictures moved off the stages at RKO-Radio. In "Take The Heir," Guy Kibbee, Cora Witherspoon, Dorothy Moore, Gordon Jones, Russell Hicks, Frank M. Thomas, Donald Kerr, Paul Guilfoyle, Eddie Gribbon, Al Hill, Tom Kennedy, Dudley Clements, John Kelly, Barbara Pepper, Maxine Jennings and George Irving will be seen. Edward Killy directed. "New Faces of 1937" will present a lot of new faces along with some that are quite familiar. One of those that may be a big picture, it will offer Milton Berle, Joe Penner, Harriet Hilliard, Thelma Leeds, Parkyakarkus, Tommy Mack, Bill Brady, Jerome Cowan, Bert Gordon, Hite, Lowe and Stanley Ross, Lorraine Krueger, Patricia Wilder, Richard Lane, Dudley Clements, Derry Dean, Eddie Rio and Brothers, Loria Brothers, Katherine Brent, the Chocolateers, the Four Playboys and Dorothy Roberts. Leigh Jason directed. The third production features Jack Oakie, Ann Sothern and Eduardo Ciannelli supported by Edgar Kennedy, Joan Woodbury, Alan Bruce, Bradley Page, Frank M. Thomas, Willie Best, Robert O'Connor, Philip Morris, Richard Rush, William Corson, Richard Lane, Paul Guilfoyle and Alec Craig. Ben Stoloff directed.

Columbia Completes Two

Two pictures finished at Columbia. The cast of "The Man Behind The Law" includes Otto Kruger, Douglass Montgomery, Jacqueline Wells, Thurston Hall, Nana Bryant, Gene Morgan, Marc Lawrence, Robert Warwick and Stanley Fields. John Brahm directed. In "Black Torrent," a Darmour production, Jack Holt and Mae Clarke are again teamed, with Harold Huber, Ray Walker, James Bush, Joseph Crehan and Beatrice Roberts also included in the cast. Ernest Schoedsack directed.

"LOS ANGELES TIMES" GREETS CONVENTION

"Welcome 20th Century-Fox Conventioneers" was the streamer flung across a 4-page special section added by the Los Angeles Times to copies of its May 30th edition furnished to company representatives in convention at the Hotel Ambassador. The first page carried pictures of Sidney R. Kent, Joseph M. Schenck, Darryl F. Zanuck, John D. Clark and William Goetz, whose names appeared also as by-lines on special articles, a lead-all story covering the convention straight reportorial style.

Condor completed two productions for Grand National release. "King of the Sierras" features Rex, the wild horse, and Wally Albright, Frank Campeau, Ed Peel and Les Hilton. Arthur Rosson directed. In "Love Takes Flight" Bruce Cabot, Beatrice Roberts, Astrid Allwyn, Gordon Elliot, Edwin Maxwell, John Sheehan, Grady Sutton and Ann Evers will be seen. Conrad Nagel directed.

"The Californian" was completed to Principal. Gus Meins directed and Ricardo Cortez, Marjorie Weaver, Katherine DeMille, Morgan Wallace, Maurice Black, Bud Osborne, Nigel de Brulier, Tom Foreman, Monte Montague, Ed Keane and Helen Holmes make up the cast.

Under Mitchell Leisen's direction, Paramount finished "Easy Living." Jean Arthur and Edward Arnold are starred, with Ray Milland, Mary Nash, Luis Alberni, William Demarest, Andrew Tombes and Esther Dale.

Republic crossed "Range Defenders" off its active shooting list. Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune are featured, with Eleanor Stewart, Donald Kirk, Earle Hodgins and John Merton. Mack Wright directed.

At Warners' "Angle Shooter" finished. Pat O'Brien and Joan Blondell head the cast with Margaret Lindsay, Regis Toomey, George E. Stone, Eddie Acuff, Craig Reynolds, Walter Byron, Granville Bates and Spencer Charters in support. Ray Enright directed.

Last of the completed productions, Universal's "Reported Missing" features William Gargan, Joan Rogers, Dick Purcell, Joe Sawyer and Hobart Cavanaugh. Milton Carruth directed.

Thirteen Are Completed

On the other side of the ledger, two of the newly starting pictures are credited to Universal. In "Too Clever to Live," which Lewis R. Foster is directing, Lewis Stone, Tom Brown, Barbara Reed, Forrester Harvey, Robert Gleckler and Billy Wayne will be seen. The cast of "That's My Story" includes Claudia Morgan, William Lundigan, Ralph Morgan, Jack Smart, Hobart Cavanaugh, Eddie Garr, Herbert Mundin and Harlan Briggs. Sid Salkow was assigned to direct.

Principals in Warner's "Alcatraz Isalnd" are Dick Purcell, Ann Nagel and Mary McGuire. Many more names are to be added. William McGann is directing.

At 20th Century-Fox "Too Much Limelight," a number in the American Family series, started. The cast lists Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Florence Roberts, June Carlson, Billy Mahan, Shirley Deane, Russell Gleason and Joan Marsh. Frank Strayer is the director.

"Raw Timber" is Crescent's contribution to the new work. Tom Keane is starred with Peggy Keys, Robert Fiske, Lee Phelps, John Rutherford, Rafael Bennett and Bud Buster. Ray Taylor is directing.

At Paramount, "Good Night Ladies" went before the cameras. The cast includes Lynne Overman, Johnny Downes, Eleanor Whitney, Benny Baker, Terry Walker, El Brendel and William Demarest. George Archainbaud is directing.

For Paramount release, Major started "On Such A Night." It will present Karen Morley, Grant Richards, Eduardo Ciannelli, Roscoe Karns, Milli Monit, Allan Mowbray and Esther Dale. E. A. Dupont is directing.

To See or Not to See

An annoying problem which confronts producers from day to day is whether or not actors shall be permitted to see the daily "rushes."

Executive opinion as to whether players should be permitted to see themselves or not seems fairly evenly divided, with champions appearing on both sides. The late Irving Thalberg, for example, was a staunch adherent of the "show them nothing" school. Mr. Thalberg firmly believed that acting was an actor's job and producing was a chore solely up to the producer.

On the other hand, there are many who believe in letting all and sundry in to see themselves in rushes, and these invite all, from stars to extras, in to the showings. They contend that, by following the work as it goes along, performers are in a better position to correct their faults and improve their performances in subsequent scenes.

Staunchest of the believers in seeing himself from day to day is Basil Rathbone, currently playing the romantic lead in "Make a Wish," the new Bobby Breen picture.

Dance directors, too, agree as a general rule with this reasoning. These men carry many of their dancers from one picture to the next, and many order their girls to attend the showings. Busby Berkeley, Bobby Connolley, Larry Ceballos, and Hermes Pan are amongst those who have voiced similar opinions in the past.

Last, but not least, are the producers who don't care whether the performers come to see themselves or not. These men have only one rule—come if you like, but remain quiet. And to this group belong most of the producers in Hollywood.

Les Perles de la Couronne

Pearls of the Crown

(Films Sonores Tobis)

Historical and Modern Adventures

Sacha Guitry's film, "Les Perles de la Couronne," was awaited in France as the great cinema event of the year after its record success in its exclusive first-run at the Champs Elysées Marignan theatre, Paris.

The film is something absolutely new, which reflects the strong personality of the well-known French author, director, and actor, Sacha Guitry.

Sacha Guitry is above all a man of the stage, and his father, Lucien Guitry, was also a famous French actor.

This film and "Carnival in Flanders" (La Kermesse Heroique) are the most ambitious pictures ever produced in France.

The subject matter of "Les Perles" involves four centuries, and tells the stories of seven famous pearls, given in the 16th Century by the Pope, Clement VII, to his niece, Catherine de Medici, who, after having married the son of the King of France, François I, became Queen of France, and Regent after the death of her husband, Henry II. Later Catherine gave the seven pearls to Marie Stuart, her daughter-in-law, also a widow, before she went back to Scotland.

At the death of Marie Stuart, the pearls were stolen and only four of them were found. Queen Elizabeth closed these in a secret casket where they were discovered three centuries later by Queen Victoria, who added them to the Royal Crown of England.

And this is the story of the three other pearls: The first one fell into the hands of an English family who kept it preciously from generation to generation until 1937, when the last descendant lost it at gambling and one discovers that the pearl was false.

The second pearl came into the hands of the King of France, Henry IV, who gave it to his favorite, Gabrielle d'Estrées. It later was owned by Louis XV's favorite, La DuBarry, and Napoleon's first wife, Josephine de Beauharnais. It vanished as a gift to a Madonna, during the Great War, by the Empress Eugenie, widow of Napoleon III. The third pearl, used through the ages as a "gift of love," finally reached the hands of a rich Frenchman of the South who bought it as a gift to a mistress before permitting her to go to America. But he found the girl in company of a young man, and kept the pearl. This "love pearl" finished its career where it started, in the bottom of the sea, where it was dropped from the liner Normandie.

In spite of the fact there are really four stories and that the film runs nearly two hours, it never looks long. One of its best novelties is the fact that it is spoken in three languages: French, English and Italian, with French, English, and Italian players. There is always commentary to explain what the French audience, or the British one, could not understand.

The dialogue is extremely good. It is very amusing and witty, and Sacha Guitry's own remarks in the commentary provide large laughs.

One of the most amusing scenes is that of the arrival of the Chamberlain to the Pope at the Court of the Queen of Abyssinia, in the 16th Century, concluded by Sacha Guitry's observation, "She ought not to have trusted Italians . . ."

Direction is not always up to the quality of the picture but dialogue and acting are the main features. There is a very artistic and lavish scenery, as well as splendid photography.

There is no doubt that such a picture will attract class patronages. There is an English speaking version, which will include more English dialogue than the French version.

Previewed at the Marignan-Pathé Theatre, Paris, to considerable applause.—PIERRE AUTRE

The Lady Escapes

(Twentieth Century - Fox)

Farce Comedy

While some in the audience seemed to derive considerable amusement from this picture, the majority gave no indication that it was unusually impressed. Even before entering the theatre it was evident that the preview was not one to which the producing company attached any considerable importance. Except Sol Wurtzel, just returned from an Hawaiian vacation, none of the important executives was standing around the lobby. In a way, the absence of many 20th Century-Fox officials was understandable. Preparation for a sales convention makes heavy demands on time.

The picture is sophisticated farce comedy. Constant interference on the part of "Mrs. Worthington" makes it seem that the wedding of her daughter "Linda" to "Michael Hilton" will never come off. Their eternal squabblings are momentarily halted when "Michael" effects marriage by a ruse. As they fought before marriage, they fight afterward until "Michael" decides, if he is to remain sane, he must have a divorce. "Linda" refuses to give it unless he finds her a new husband.

The search takes them to sporting events, social affairs, theatres and into night clubs without success. Eventually, after one more hectic family session, "Linda" embarks for Europe. Abroad ship, she meets "Rene Blanchard," with whom she enjoys a romantic affair in Paris and along the Riviera. Meanwhile showgirl "Dolores," whom "Rene" has jilted, engages "Michael" to institute a beach of promise suit. Averse to having a hand in this business because he has identified the other woman as his wife, "Michael" attaches himself to "Linda" and "Rene," who doesn't know that their unwelcome guest is "Linda's" husband. To the amusement of the audience the denouement comes in a battle royal between "Michael" and "Rene," a savate, or foot fighting, adept. Anyway "Dolores" gets her man and "Michael" and "Linda" decide they will try to get along together again because of the kisses and clinches that inevitably follow each and every row.

There Goes My Girl

(RKO Radio)

Comedy Melodrama

Looked upon as just another newspaper picture, this really is another newspaper picture. But considered for what it actually is, a farce comedy romance with hokum melodrama background, it is something quite novel and refreshingly different. Eliminate a few rather tiring inconsequentials, and it comes within the slam bang gag comedy category.

Gene Raymond and Ann Sothern are the stars, but the characterizations they assume and the material with which they are provided are distinctly different from that which has been available in their previous starring films. Both come up with performances of a caliber that fully justifies making their names prominent in all exploitation and publicity.

People know that in the newspaper business almost anything is apt to happen. Sometimes the incidents are framed. Sometimes they are real. The story combines the best amusement values of both. Rival reporters "Jerry" and

"Connie" stage a pre-wedding party. Present is "Tim Whelan," "Connie's" editor, who is conniving to break up the marriage. When the pair is at the altar, "Whelan" contrives a fake murder and "Connie's" reportorial instincts, overcoming her romantic urge, force her to dash helter skelter in pursuit of the story. She soon finds it's a fake, but then a real murder story breaks and "Connie," who has sworn off reporting, dashes to the scene when she learns her rival, "Jerry," is on the spot. Ensues a lot of hokum tinged melodrama during which a couple of killings occur. But crime melodrama never usurps the function of farce newspaper comedy and romance. "Connie" is shot, but when "Jerry" tries to cover for her, "Whelan" mixes the story up so that it appears as a scoop in "Jerry's" paper rather than his. Everything ends well as all the reward "Whelan" gets for butting in on love is a punch on the chin, while "Jerry" and "Connie" get married.

Previewed to a Sunday night audience in the Pantages theatre, Hollywood. Whether the crowd was in the mood for farce entertainment was not known at the start, but the more spirited the film became the more spirited was audience reaction.—G. M.

The Affairs of Cappy Ricks

(Republic)

Comedy

Exhibitors setting out to make the most of this wholly humorous production will have at their copy disposal the singularly appropriate association which places the famous Peter B. Kyne character, Cappy Ricks, in the hands of the lately acclaimed character actor, Walter Brennan, whose winning of an Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences award has been widely noted in newspaper and broadcast. Possibly that is the exploitation angle to be stressed above all others.

The story has "Cappy Ricks" returning home to find that his ancient business foe has joined with his former partner's wife to acquire a controlling interest in his shipping business and that the lady's son is about to marry his daughter, whose hand he has hoped would go to a young man of his own choice. Believing his family and associates have gone soft as a result of easy living and can be salvaged, he practically shanghais them and arranges a pretended marooning on a remote island. When this device has evidently brought them around to his way of thinking and his daughter is about to marry the man of his preference, it turns out that the marooning is genuine, but his daughter, discovering the attempted ruse, rebels. The party is rescued by his business rival and all hands start homeward on an automatic yacht with "Cappy Ricks" compelled to scrub decks for his passage. He takes advantage of a storm to regain control of the situation and obtain his ends, all things winding up happily.

Mary Brian, Lyle Talbot and Frank Shields have other principal roles. Frank Melton and Georgia Caine play slightly less important parts. The treatment is light throughout with all efforts directed toward preserving the Kyne humor.

Sing Cowboy Sing

(Grand National)

Western

With the singing cowboy, Tex Ritter, giving his usual performance, this no doubt will satisfy the star's fans. Nothing revolutionary has appeared in the script, which, excepting the singing, is a product of an earlier era in the making of these outdoor dramas, an era, incidentally, that apparently ended with the introduction of modern dress, automobiles and such incidentals as the community sings, variety show, etc.

It has, however, that more important requisite, action. From the wiping out of a wagon train and crew, a hand-to-hand struggle and an attempted stabbing, the picture builds to a last ditch encounter between law and outlaw groups on the open range. It all has to do with the obtaining of a franchise for hauling freight by wagon train. Supporting Ritter are Louise Stanley, for romance; Al St. John, side-kick; Karl Hackett, Charles King, enemies; and Robert McKenzie and Budd Buster on the side of the law and order.

Tex and his friend "Biff" (Al St. John) come upon a raiding party too late to save the men or the wagons, but they do save "Madge" (Louise Stanley). "Madge's" father had a franchise to haul freight, which will be revoked unless 'Madge" is able to carry on. Tex hauls the freight, much to the displeasure of "Kalmus" and "Red." Various steps are taken by the two outlaws to prevent Tex from continuing his aid to "Madge." Thrown in jail by a ruse, Tex escapes, gathers the ranchers together and defeats the outlaws in a battle on the range.

You Can't Beat Love

(RKO Radio)

Comedy Melodrama

There's more entertainment quality and potential showmanship availability in this picture than the sweet sounding title indicates. Subtantially the production is a wholesome comedy which includes a lot of gay amusement. Lively in dialogue and action, with the point of the theme hinging on several humorous situations, the picture moves rapidly and is shrewdly produced to avoid the pitfalls which any attempt to pad or string out might entail.

Instead of all the love and kisses than one might think would accompany such a title, the story is a humorous treatment of small town political skullduggery and romantic complications. Preston Foster appears to good advantage in a light comedy role, and Joan Fontaine gives further proof that she is a future star. In support Herbert Mundin, Berton Churchill, Bradley Page, Frank M. Thomas and Harold Huber are up to expectations.

No dare is too dangerous or foolish for "Jimmy Hughes" to accept. Sometimes his escapades are quite embarrassing to his valet, "Jasper." Digging a ditch, clad in evening clothes, "Jimmy" heckles "Trudy Olsen," who is campaigning for her father. The girl dares him to become a rival mayorality candidate. Then the fun begins. As honest "Mayor Olsen" refuses to take his rival seriously, grafting henchmen "Parsons" and "Brennan" indulge in mud slinging and, although newspaper reporters "Bruner" and "Gallagher" supply "Jimmy" with much damaging campaign material, he refuses to use it. This arouses "Trudy" to a sympathetic romantic interest in her father's foe. But "Parsons" and "Brennan," who know all the angles of shyster politics, manage to frame "Jimmy" in a scandal wihich involves another woman, "May Smith," and a gang of gamblers. Comes the big night-before-election rally, but just when things really look black for "Jimmy" he exposes "Parsons" and "Brennan" as a pair of grafters and, exonerating "Olsen" from any complicity, withdraws from the contest in favor of the incumbent. Through with politics, he has time only for love.

The kind of attraction that assures a lot of fun for its auditors, it is also one that should give exhibitors a lot of fun in exploiting. It easily makes possible a return to good old fashioned showmanship. Name values being adequate for the picture's class, the story, however, is the angle to concentrate upon in exploitation. Resourceful showmen who really want to go to work on it should find plenty to work with.

German Language Melodrama

A program note informs that for her performance in this production Paula Wessely was awarded the gold cup at the Venice international exhibition of 1935 in competition with such players as Greta Garbo, Marlene Dietrich and Elisabeth Bergner. The role is of the kind that these actresses are in the habit of playing. Miss Wessely, it must be assumed, then, plays it very well. In any case, mention of the award seems to be the indicated procedure for showmen whose patronage goes in for German language pictures. Although the American print is supplied with translation titles in English, it seems apparent that this is the sought type of audience. (Parenthetically, the picture has been placed in Class A-2 by the National Legion of Decency and probably belongs there even without the portions quite noticeably deleted from the print viewed.)

The story is of Vienna in 1922 and has music in it, but less importantly and quite a bit less artfully than is typical of pictures with like setting. The principal character is a girl whose mother's savings have been lost in a bank failure and who accepts the actually innocent benevolence of a wealthy man but falls under the inevitable suspicion because of the association. An upright young man in her benefactor's employ learns to love her and she him, so that romance is served in the end, but a good deal of misunderstanding and a lot of dialogue and action dealing with the moral issues involved, both as of the girl and her generation, is put by before this conclusion is arrived at.

The historical setting is the post-war period during which, as has been duly noted in various novels and otherwise, Vienna was an economically stricken city and moral values were vitally affected. To the considerable extent that it reproduces this period and place the picture is as worthwhile as the printed works of like purpose. As commercial entertainment merchandise for this country at this time it is quite a bit less so.

Merry Comes to Town

(Sound City-British)

Comedy

If the desire of the American public and the American exhibitor is that British pictures should provide real and intimate pcitures of British life, this unpretentious comedy against a London lower-middle class background should appeal to them strongly. It is a support feature, but one with real entertainment values. The story values are fair, but more important is that the characters portrayed are real and provide a gallery of richly comic and convincing British types, contrasted with the very individual American type of Zasu Pitts. It is, in fact, a British film and not an imitation of Hollywood.

Sussanah Merridew, the middle-aged secretary of a Correspondence School in Detroit, is left a legacy of 500 dollars by her deceased employer and determines to use it on a visit to London, where she has relatives whom she imagines to be wealthy because they live in Buckingham Lodge. Arriving she finds that this abode is not, as she supposed, an adjunct to the Royal palace but a small house in the very unfashionable district of Brixton. Her cousin "Professor" Stafford turns out to be a teacher of singing with a clientele limited to the lower classes. His mother is an embittered cripple, his daughter a stenographer, in love with her employer's son and due to lose her position as a result of that fact, his son a motor salesman also soon to be in search of a job. The house is besieged by creditors and dominated by a cook, wages in arrears, who provides a running comment on her thriftless employers.

Because "Merry" is American and has come all the way across the Atlantic for a holiday, one and all believe her to be wealthy and her inability to help them with money is put down to meanness. 'Merry,' nevertheless, is equal to the situation. She outwits a crook friend of the young son obtaining £100 in the process, and reunites the daughter, enamoured with the adventurer, to her faithful lover. She brings on the scene the Professor's old sweetheart, now a famous opera singer, and with her aid establishes a Correspondence School of Singing, which relieves the Professor from the necessity of listening to his pupils. Having put everything right, and done all the work, she returns to America without any view even of Big Ben other than the glimpse she obtained from the carriage window.

The success of the picture is due to its convincing atmosphere of a sordid London home and to the excellence of the comedy performances, with Hermione Gingold and Jack Hellier excelling as would-be vocalists. Another excellent character piece is Muriel George's cook. Zasu Pitts is an excellent foil to these ultra-British types.

It should be offered as an authentic picture of British life and should have considerable appeal as such to publics which have complained, with some reason, at British producers' "Society" obsession.

Hearty laughter was accorded the picture at a night trade show, Phoenix Theatre, London.

The Grand Hooter

Chase Comedy

To pacify the little woman, who is a bit fed up with Charlie's excessive lodge activity, Chase takes his wife away for a second honeymoon. Far from being alone in their attempts to recapture the happy past, the couple run across an inebriated lodge member, a bewitching Spanish senorita and her very jealous and equally suspicious lover. Naturally, Charlie gets himself into a few embarrassing situations with the Spanish lady and there result moments of hectic misunderstanding on the part of the wife and the irascible gentleman friend. After the proverbial chase and counter chase, the whole affair ends satisfactorily when Charlie finds out that his sword brandishing pursuer is a fellow member of Chase's lodge. The gags are pattern stuff, but the results are good for a laugh or two. The material is not particularly ideal for inclusion on the kiddie matinee. —Running time, 19½ minutes.

Old Time Songs

Presenting some ditties from the long ago that will weave a spell of misty-eyed remembrance for many of the audience, this musical album of "gay old Nineties" choral tidbits will also please the vocal chords of the younger generation schooled in the current swing tune style. Such nostalgic lyrics as "In the Good Old Summer Time" and "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" are infectiously rendered by Andy Sanella and his Orchestra. Jolly, the miniature torch singer, shows how her grandmother would render the tune "Wait Till the Sun Shines, Nellie" and then in quick transition how a modern day miss would renovate it for "blues" vocalization. Wendell Hall acts as the energetic and coaxing song leader while Charles Irwin is a gracious and good humored master of ceremonies. Any audience that likes to let itself go in musical abandon will relish this pot-pourri of tunes and, perhaps, there will be a sigh or two for the good old days when a song was really a song. Running time, 10 minutes.

The Foxy Pup

Cute Cartoon

Brightly colored, delightfully drawn and mischievously played by a lively set of roguish pups, this gay cartoon idyll is certain to tickle the comic sensibilities of all classes, tastes and ages. Trained by papa and a mechanical model, the eager puppies are joyfully practicing the art of wolf chasing when a real and very much alive wolfish creature comes upon the scene to offer the yearlings their first and unexpected taste with the actual thing. One of the poor doggies is captured and there result some fast and laughable moments of chase and comedy. However, the little one is saved from the hungry jaws and safely returns to the sorrowing bosom of his family. The grief is quickly turned to joy and the ending is a happy and affectionate one. The whole concotion is a sprightly bit of clever animation, well worth playing time. Running time, 6½ minutes.

Novelty

Belgium has been justly famous down through the years for the masterful art of its carillon makers. The same methods are used today that were used decades ago in casting the bells, indicating that perfection was reached long since. Once the sole arbiter of time in the town, the bells now serve the community with music. In one of the large churches in Brussels an elaborate system of carillon bells that are coordinated in a console-like keyboard can be played to music especially written for the carillon. Narrated by Eric Hallville.—Running time, 12½ minutes.

The sum of it all is a novel bit of entertainment. Running time, 10 minutes.

In Shanghai

(J. H. Hoffberg)

Travelogue

Traveling to Shanghai, the camera has photographed various aspects of the activity of its citizenry. In the harbor the old Shanghai seems predominant with its flotilla of sea craft still manipulated by hand, while modern machinery is represented by the battleships of foreign nations dotted along the coast to maintain the open door policy. Ashore, however, the modern Shanghai is in command with skyscrapers and office buildings quite plentiful. Then there are shots of horse racing, a visit to a Chinese theatre, etc. Narrated by Andre Baruch.—Running time, 10½ minutes.

DUPLICATING FILMS

APPROVAL OF "GOOD EARTH" HELD SIGN OF UPTREND IN CHINA TRADE

Passing of Film Interpreted as Indicating Favorable Attitude to Foreign Product Based on Chinese Life and Customs

by Special Correspondent in Shanghai

Marking a milestone in the history of motion pictures in China, "The Good Earth" received full approval of the Central Film Censorship Committee and a license for exhibition was issued on April 19th. The film had been reviewed by practically every important government bureau in Nanking, by members of the official family and other individuals of influence in Chinese official life.

Only three small cuts were made in the film and it is worth while to note their significance:

In reel 2: Olan's ears are boxed by the chief maid servant. Mistreatment of employees is contrary to Chinese policy; hence this was deleted.

In reel 7: The display of corpses in the famine area is contrary to what is considered approvable and was deleted.

In reel 7: The sly theft from Wang's father's beggar bowl by another is so uncommonly rare as to be practically non-existent. Such theft is officially considered reprehensible. The act was deleted.

All deletions, apparently simple things, show the attitude of the censors and reviewers towards acts of this kind.

The approval of "The Good Earth" is regarded here as an event comparable to the first public performance of sound and talking pictures in China, which took place on February 9, 1929 at the former Embassy theatre in Shanghai. It marks the advent of a new and enlightened policy and dispels the rumors, conjectures, and gossip which for the past few years have given rise to the impression that a foreign produced film based on Chinese subject matter would have no chance to pass the censors.

Film Is Unusual

However, let us be frank. "The Good Earth" is an unusual film. Beside it all other films of Chinese subject matter can be compared as secondary. To one who has lived in China for years, who has seen and heard, and felt, indirectly, all the sorrow, terror and horror of famine and warfare and revolution, who has witnessed the sublime faith of an oppressed people struggling toward the light, and who has seen in a few short years the great advancing of a nation from backward 4,000-year-old customs and habits to modernism, who has seen the modern trend with its weight of scientific achievement tempered with the respect for old customs, "The Good Earth" came to the eye and ear like the sonorous, deep rolling thunder of mighty applause.

"The Good Earth" is like nothing else in motion pictures of China. What it means to the trade is that, by fully understanding the needs and requirements of this great nation in its new growth, the way has been opened to greater distribution in China.

Chinese producers are striving to meet the demand for better native pictures. Their efforts are succeeding, even though it may be years before technical quality will approach Hollywood's output. "The Good Earth" will open the eyes of the Chinese producers. Quick to appreciate the value of such quality, improvement may come sooner than expected.

The earnings of "The Good Earth" will be watched by thousands of eyes; statistics will be gathered as never before, and profits calculated. Capital is here, only waiting for proof of good investment. Already strong financial interests have entered the field of motion picture exhibition.

"The Good Earth" will be history making in the China exhibition field. But American producers must proceed with caution on Chinese subject matter. The law requires that Chinese producers submit the story and script for approval before turning a crank. While this cannot apply to foreign made films, thought must be given to the possibilities if care is to be taken to meet conditions as they are. Truly, and as the Chinese would put it, the seed now sown, on what was considered stony ground, may develop into a fruitful orchard if the gardeners are watchful and obedient.

"Inconsistency"

"Inconsistency" is the only word that describes past action of the Nanking censors when it comes to passing on whether films are detrimental to the public. "Frankenstein" was banned after its first three-year license certificate expired, as a "horrifying" film. Directly, the Chinese picture, "Yeh Bun Goh Hsing" (A Midnight Song) was passed; the picture depicts the life of a deformed human creature. The age limit: children under six not permitted The original age limit for "King Kong" after severe cutting was "over 16 years."

Exploitation for "A Midnight Song" included a 16-foot board on a prominent International Settlement Shanghai street, showing a creature with lividly lighted green eyes and waving huge arms and claws. As a result, an 11-year-old Chinese girl was said to have been frightened to death by such exploitation and her father protested to the Citizens' League against such horrifying stunts. The film itself, up until March, had already run over 34 consecutive days, proving its popularity with native audiences.

More Competition

More competition for motion picture theatres is in the offing with plans for a $500,000 sports center in Shanghai to be called the Olympia. The funds are to be raised by popular subscription.

Circuit Reorganized

The transfer of the Grand (2,000) and Cathay (1,000) first run theatres in Shanghai closes another chapter in the rather tumultuous financial history of these houses. Part of the original organization of the United Theatres, an American company, and designed as the nucleus of a large chain of theatres to embrace many subsequent run houses, financial difficulties resulted in the release back to owners of all houses but the Grand and Cathay. Long in receivership, then reorganized under Section 77-B of the Bankruptcy Act, sued for architectural and builders accounts, these two houses are now taken over by a group of Chinese in Shanghai under the name Cathay-Grand Corporation, headed by Mr. Percy Chu, banking leader and former member of the police board of film censors of the International Settlement.

The policy of future operation hints at greater exploitation for Chinese patronage, inasmuch as films being shown first run in the Grand now frequently use superimposed Chinese titles, heretofore seldom seen in Shanghai's first run cinemas, and the replacement of all Russian female ushers with native boys in the Cathay theatre. This latter theatre plays almost exclusively the more sophisticated class of all-talking films. Both houses are modern, air-conditioned and refrigerated, but in need of much sound apparatus re-conditioning.

Domestic Production Accelerated in First Quarter of 1937; Most Foreign Features Approved Are from U. S. A.

Educational Film

At the fifth annual meeting of the China Educational Film Association held in Shanghai on March 28, the group, represented by over 100 Chinese educational and motion picture leaders, reached a decision to petition the Ministry of Education for an appropriation of C. $20,000 (U. S. $6,000) for the production of educational film.

Among other resolutions adopted at the meeting was the formation of a film educational agency, the inclusion of a film educational course in the curriculum of all normal schools under the control of the Bureau of Social Welfare and the enforcement of film education in primary and middle schools and "mass" education schools.

Domestic Product Gain

Chinese production for the first quarter of 1937 has taken a jump, that, if continued, may make this calendar year the largest yet for native feature production. Encouraged by the success of several native productions, the Chinese studios had 19 new features approved by the Nanking Central Film Censorship committee between January 1 and March 31, 1937.

Foreign Product Approved

The first quarter of 1937 saw 77 foreign features passed by the government censors. Of these 68 were by 8 major American distributors, 4 by U. S. S. R.; 2 British; and 2 German; and one of independent American origin. Also a Universal serial of 24 reels.

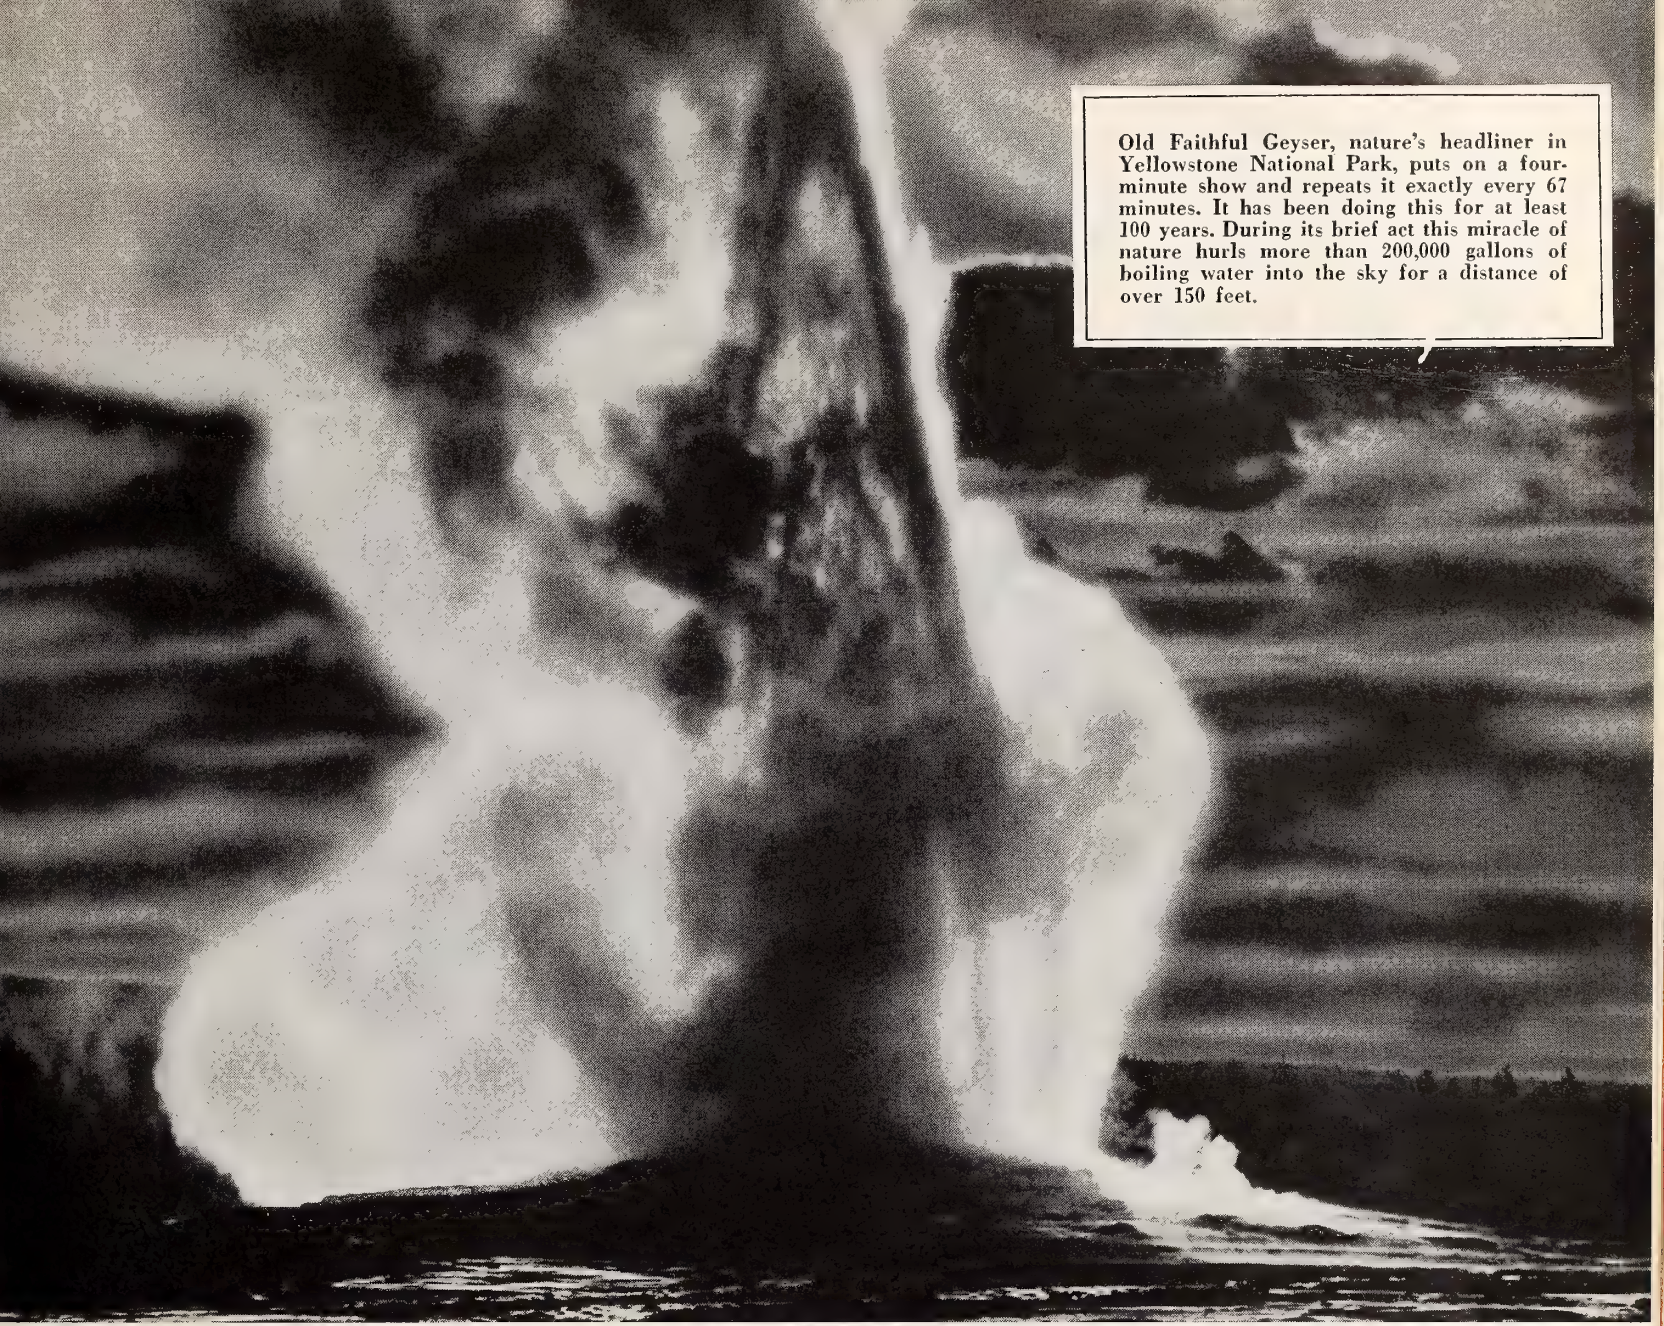
The 68 American submissions, however, included a few British films released through United Artists and 20th Century-Fox.

Of the short subjects, major American distributors supplied 20 two-reelers, 107 one-reelers and 50 newsreels; U. S. S. R. took 3 newsreels, and Germany one, a 5-reel educational featurette.

In addition the government censors passed about 20 reels of educational shorts of varied origin.

Exploitation on Upgrade

The Chinese producers, in cooperation with Shanghai first run Chinese theatres, are going in strong for billboard exploitation in the form of electrically lighted and neon-outlined 24- and 48-sheet boards on Shanghai's main thoroughfare. When foreign films started this kind of exploitation last year, the Chinese were at first contented with the regular 24-sheet display, but in the last few months native film advertising displays rival the foreign in character and attractiveness. Originality in Chinese displays is the rule, rather than the exception. When a film is rugged in theme, the exploitation goes the limit in attention-arresting display.



Old Faithful Geyser, nature's headliner in Yellowstone National Park, puts on a four-minute show and repeats it exactly every 67 minutes. It has been doing this for at least 100 years. During its brief act this miracle of nature hurls more than 200,000 gallons of boiling water into the sky for a distance of over 150 feet.

MIRACLES DON'T "JUST HAPPEN"

Nature spent centuries on the process of creating the miracle of Old Faithful.

E.R.P.I. spent years in the commercial adaptation of a revolutionary principle of sound reproduction known as MIRROPHONIC. Like Old Faithful, MIRROPHONIC is a product of time—it is a result of long research by Bell Telephone Laboratories and Western Electric in perfecting a reproducing system first conceived in the form of Stereophonic or "third-dimensional" sound.

MIRROPHONIC is the direct commercial outgrowth of the historic Stereophonic principle—first publicly demonstrated four years ago in Philadelphia, later in New York, Hollywood, and recently, in Miami.

MIRROPHONIC is readily adaptable to future advances in the art. If you now have Western Electric, it may be installed on a convenient step-by-step modification plan.

More than a thousand exhibitors, who have installed MIRROPHONIC, used its powerful exploitation campaign, now enjoy increased BOX OFFICE DOLLARS.

Old Faithful and MIRROPHONIC never fail to come through with a good show on time—and with

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

HOLLYWOOD VISITORS snapped on one of the big sets erected for "Rhythm Racketeer," being produced at the Rock Studios, Elstree, and starring Harry Roy, are James Seymour, director, Georgie Harris, makeup man, Joe Rock, the British producer, and Johnny Hines.

Dean at Denham

Making his first picture for London Films, Basil Dean has completed several important shots, at Denham, for "The First and the Last," in which Laurence Olivier, Leslie Banks and Vivien Leigh are the big names.

Dean's direction of this picture is due, it is understood, to a clause in the will of the late John Galsworthy that any of his works adapted to the screen should be picturized by Dean, who was associated with the stage production of the dead author's work. The adaptation is by Graham Greene, who wrote the best-selling "Gun for Sale."

A recent agreement concluded between Alexander Korda and Mr. Dean provides for the interchange of stars and technical facilities between the Korda studios at Denham and the Dean plant at Ealing. Herbert Wilcox also is participating.

To go on the floor immediately at Denham is "The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel," Arnold Pressburger directing a script by Arthur Wimperis and Adrian Brunel for British Cine Alliance.

Also scheduled for its first scenes next week is Victor Saville's production of "South Riding," a best-selling novel in both England and U. S. A. and winner of the James Tait Black Memorial prize for the best novel published in 1936.

Sabu, Indian boy hero of "Elephant Boy," has been having studio tests for his part in "The Drum," a story of the Indian frontier for which a Technicolor unit (the production is all-color) left for Indian location immediately the equipment was free after its use in the Coronation color reel. Christopher Challis and Henry Imus of Technicolor are with the unit, which will establish itself at Peashawar for the purposes of shooting in the Khyber Pass, with the assistance and permission of the Indian Government.

New Production Unit

Elder Wills Productions is the title of a new unit headed by the producer and director of that name with Fenn Sherie and Ingram d'Abbes, scenarists, as his associates. Using Sound City space, the roganization plans six features, the first of which, "Through This Gateway," will go into work immediately. Against backgrounds generally of the East and particularly of Port Said, it will have as hero a British Intelligence Officer sent to investigate political unrest in that quarter. Currently, a Hollywood lead is sought. Location work is scheduled.

Under the title "Song Writers on Parade," British Lion is staging at Beaconsfield a musical with a decidedly new story structure, inasmuch as it will picture actual British writers and composers, tell their real-life histories and, of course, reproduce their most famous numbers. Light and shade should be well contrasted, as some of these present day celebrities began by singing their own and other people's compositions in the streets. Jimmy Kennedy and Michael Carr, the team who produced "Leader of the Band," and other hits, are among those cast. Also listed are Fred Godfrey, Horatio Nicholls, Annette Mills, Arthur Le Clercq, Ralph Butler and Jose Norman.

Victoria at Home

With the words "My work is done; this is good-bye, indeed," H. B. Warner concluded his part of Lord Melbourne in Herbert Wilcox's "Victoria the Great," and took ship for New York, with daughter Lorraine, a day later. Completion of his important role indicates that the picture is well forward; most of the big sets have in fact been done and Anna Neagle has this week been portraying the domestic life of the young Queen and her Consort (Anton Walbrook). Some graphic pictures of the social life which later was labelled "Victorian" are pictured, with human drama injected by evidences of the Queen's determination to be a solus ruler.

Underworld Film

The current set for the Jessie Matthews vehicle, "Gangway," at Pinewood, reproduces an American background. A gang raid on the smart "Trocadero" night club, in New York, is pictured with Miss Matthews singled out for special attention, per machine gun, from Noel Madison and Nat Pendleton, assisted by third gangster Danny Green, born in London but trained in films in Hollywood.

Also for G. F. D. G.-B. production, and distribution by the former, is "A Shilling for Candles," Alfred Hitchcock directing with Nova Pilbeam in the lead. It will go on the floor at the end of May.

The only other G.-B. film at present in active commission is the Gainsborough "Dr. Syn," with George Arliss, which Roy Neill is directing at Islington, but "Non-Stop New York," "King Solomon's Mines," and " . . . Said O'Reilly to Macnab" (Gainsborough) are completed and awaiting trade presentation. When the Hitchcock film goes on the floor, G.-B. will have two films only to put into production under the fifty-fifty deal with G. F. D. Whether the company will then go out of production entirely or prepare another production program is a matter still not officially decided.

Czechoslovakian Censors Pass 72

A total of 72 motion pictures, with a film length of approximately 230,000 feet, were passed by the Czechoslovak Board of Censors at Prague during March, 1937, as compared with 90 pictures of approximately 288,000 feet in March, 1936, the Department of Commerce in Washington announced this week. Cumulative first quarter figures showed 286 pictures in 1936 and 245 in 1937.

The countries of origin of the 79 pictures authorized for showing (56 dramas, 21 comedies and two nature pictures) in the first three months of 1937 are given below, together with similar figures for the first three months of 1936.

Academy Credits Bulletin Issued

The eighth regular quarterly issue of the Technical Credits Bulletin of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood was distributed this week to all studio executives, studio technical department heads and members of the Academy technical members. The bulletin contains credits for the 140 productions completed between January 1 and April 30, 1937, and individual credits for 530 technicians receiving credit for the art direction, camera, film editing, special photographic effects and sound recording.

Of the 140 productions completed by the studios during this period, one was produced by Atlantic, 12 by Columbia, six by Condor, three by Darmour, three by Hal Roach, three by Major, 15 by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, 11 by Paramount, 16 by Republic, 12 by RKO-Radio, one by Samuel Goldwyn, two by B. P. Schulberg, one by Selznick-International, one by Toeplitz, 15 by Twentieth Century-Fox, 14 by Universal, one by Walter Wanger and 23 by Warner-First National.

Ruby Keeler Ends Warner Contract

Following the departure of her husband, Al Jolson, from Warner Brothers last week, Ruby Keeler last Saturday obtained a release from her contract with the organization and is now negotiating with RKO, Universal and Twentieth Century-Fox.

Miss Keeler had two more pictures to make under the terms of her Warner pact and after her reported dissatisfaction with former roles she was given her release when it was requested. No consideration was given by either party.

GENERAL ELECTRIC TO USE FILMS FOR SALES

Engagements Arranged in 50 Cities For "From Now On;" Many Film Names in Cast

General Electric Company will resume wholesale merchandising of electrical equipment to America's homes by way of nationwide employment of motion pictures, starting immediately with the roadshowing of its latest commercial production, "From Now On," in feature length, in virtually every large city in the United States.

On all such similar occasions of national advertisers using the motion picture, complaints have arisen from independent and organized exhibitor ranks.

Engagements for General Electric's "From Now On" already have been arranged for 50 cities in the southern states, where the picture will be exhibited in theatres now dark, in local halls, churches, schools, clubs or in any other available auditoriums.

The showings will be scheduled for different times, all before noon, General Electric officials insist, so as not to offer any competition to legitimate motion picture exhibitors. Only on rare occasions, when no other hour is available, they continue, will the film be offered at an hour competitive with other theatres. It is planned to have the local General Electric dealers invite the audiences and to arrange for various displays of commodities in the lobby and rear of the theatre showing the picture.

The film was made by Tri-State Production Company of Cleveland, at a reported cost of $125,000. Some of the cast have had starring roles in the industry. The list includes Irvin S. Cobb, Alan Baxter, Louise Stanley, Regis Toomey, William Royle, Wally Albright, Jack Mulhall, George Humbert, Ann Doran, Dorothy Christy, Etta McDaniel and Charles Moore. Hamilton McFadden directed the picture, and the story was by Ralph Shenton.

Re-editing Production

With the possible exception of a production now being made by the Shell Oil Company of Indiana, which will be shown exclusively to salesmen and other members of the organization and not to the public, "From Now On" is said to be the most pretentious commercial motion picture ever produced. The General Electric promotion officials, however, are reported not entirely satisfied with the finished product and before prints are sent to most locations several sections will be re-cut and re-edited.

Other companies now showing commercial films in their own showrooms or in public halls, include the Dole Pineapple Company, International Cement Company, Chevrolet Motor Company, Ford Motor Company, Chrysler Motor Company, Public Utilities Corporation and the United States Rubber Company.

"From Now On" had its first public showing at the Center Theatre in New York's Rockefeller Center last Monday night before an audience of 3,400 persons and at a rental of $1,000 for the night. It followed the regular radio broadcast of General Electric over the National Broadcasting Company's Blue Network and a souvenir program of the evening read, in part, as follows:

"We hope that you will find it (the picture) genuinely entertaining; that its story will appear as a clear reflection of a phase of life which is ever interesting because it is ever recurring, and because it deals with something which is the veritable core of man's aspirations—the possession of a home. In this all other things are implied. We hope that you will find its interpretation in the tempo and key of today. The essence of any story or play is volatile. It evaporates and disappears quickly. We shall know that the production of this picture is worthy and justified if, after the pleasure which it affords has passed, there is a residue which remains: a heightened sense of the value to home-loving mankind and of the various electrical appliances which we manufacture. We trust that this will be the impression which will remain with you."

William Jaffee Named For Jewish Committee

William Jaffee, formerly of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and now of the law firm of Rosenblatt and Jaffee in New York, has become a member of the Lawyers' Committee on behalf of the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee. This organization whose purpose is the alleviation of suffering among oppressed Jews of Europe is conducting a national drive to raise $4,650,000.

Mr. Jaffee, a former associate of Nathan Burkan, is well known in industry circles, his firm being counsel for Monogram Pictures, Renowned Artists, Inc., and many stars.

Headquarters of the Lawyers' Committee will be at 100 East 42 Street.

Harris and Rudin Plan To Merge Twenty Houses

The Harris Theatrical Enterprises and the Rudin, Rapf and Lederer Theatres, operating houses in Manhattan, the Bronx, Brooklyn and New Jersey, have signed an agreement whereby their interests will be consolidated on August 15. The deal involves 20 theatres, each circuit at present operating 10. Most of the theatres are in Manhattan. Under the new arrangement, Harry Harris will do the film buying and booking for all the theatres, and Otto Lederer will be in charge of the physical operation of the houses.

Ross Rejoins Scully

Nathan Ross, recently with Gaumont British in Boston under John Scully, who resigned to become manager for Grand National in that territory, has rejoined Mr. Scully's staff as a salesman.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

COUNTERFEIT LADY: Ralph Bellamy, Joan Perry—Good—only it's crooks again! We wish crime stories would fade out for a spell and let the screen get free of gun smoke. Played April 24.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

DEVIL'S PLAYGROUND: Richard Dix, Dolores Del Rio, Chester Morris—Richard Dix always well liked here. Played this instead of western on Friday and Saturday and it satisfied. Played May 7-8.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

DODGE CITY TRAIL: Charles Starrett, Marian Weldon—Really a fine western. Far better than average. Played May 21-22.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

END OF THE TRAIL: Jack Holt, Louise Henry—Well, this was a honey. One of the best westerns to date. Pulled a good crowd and held them to their seats. Don't miss this one. Played May 11.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mining patronge.

LEGION OF TERROR: Marguerite Churchill, Bruce Cabot—This to me was ahead of the other legion pictures to date. Drew well and satisfied. Played May 18.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mining patronage.

MAN WHO LIVED TWICE, THE: Ralph Bellamy, Marian Marsh—This almost fairy tale like picture made a great hit with our patrons. A super crook who became a great surgeon after a brain operation makes a thrilling, interesting story and it was all made to appear real and possible. Marian Marsh was more appealing in this than I ever remember seeing her. This was doubled with Dick Foran in "Guns of the Pecos." This program combined with good show weather gave extra good Sunday and Monday business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MEET NERO WOLFE: Edward Arnold, Lionel Stander—Give us more of that guy, Stander. He does fine in any part. This did not draw as "Nero Wolfe" means about as much to a miner as does Lily Pons, but those that saw it liked it very much. Played March 16.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mine patronage.

MINE WITH THE IRON DOOR, THE: Richard Arlen, Cecilia Parker, Henry B. Walthall—Was leery of this, but had a good crowd and it was a pretty good show; a little different from the usual love story. Walthall gave a fine performance, as usual. Played March 30-31.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mine patronage.

THEY MET IN A TAXI: Chester Morris, Fay Wray, Lionel Stander—Another good programer. They sure go for the mug at my place, Lionel Stander. I mean, as "Fingers," he's the berries. Did only average business.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mining patronage.

TRAPPED BY TELEVISION: Mary Astor, Lyle Talbot, Nat Pendleton—This one was a good picture, but failed to do extra business. Those that came liked it. Played April 20-21.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mining patronage.

TWO FISTED GENTLEMAN: James Dunn, June Clayworth—Very well as a boxing picture goes. Was surprised myself. Had about average business. Played April 6-7.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mine patronage.

WOMEN OF GLAMOUR: Melvyn Douglas, Virginia Bruce—No action but nice acting by the leads keeps it afloat. Columbia isn't going any too strongly at our box office this season. Played April 21.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

First National

GUNS OF THE PECOS: Dick Foran, Anne Nagel—This was doubled with "The Man Who Lived Twice." This program combined with good show weather gave extra good Sunday and Monday business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SING ME A LOVE SONG: James Melton, Patricia Ellis—Very good. James Melton has a wonderful voice. This made money for us and pleased the majority. Running time, 79 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

SING ME A LOVE SONG: James Melton, Patricia Ellis, Hugh Herbert—This Cinderella type of story made extra good entertainment and was enjoyed more than some of the Warners' big costly musicals. A good Cinderella story in its many variations is always welcomed. James Melton was very pleasing in this. The comedy of Hugh Herbert seemed to fit in with the story. This was doubled with "Garden of Allah." This program did a fair average business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Grand National

ARIZONA DAYS: Tex Ritter, Eleanor Stewart—He's there for us. Best drawing card to date. They like him better than Autry. To the gentleman who compared him with the Cassidys, does Bill Boyd sing and use a gun in the same breath? Figure that out, Mister. Show all these you can. Played March 9.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mining patronage.

CAPTAIN CALAMITY: George Houston, Marian Nixon, Movita—This was the best color picture to date but was still terrible. You must improve, G.N., or stop making color. The story was fine but they always kick on G.N.'s color films. Played February 23.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mining patronage.

GIRL LOVES BOY: Eric Linden, Cecilia Parker—This lined up to expectations and believe it or not you could have heard a pin fall when Miss Parker was playing and that's saying plenty for my customers. A good human interest story for everyone. Played April 13-14.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mining patronage.

GREAT GUY: James Cagney, Mae Clark—He is a great guy but it did not go so well with the miners. At least they didn't show up to see him. It was an average show. Played May 4.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mining patronage.

HATS OFF: Mae Clark, John Payne—This one did me more harm than good. Plenty of walkouts and no story either. To me it was a failure. Played April 27.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mining patronage.

WE'RE IN THE LEGION NOW: Reginald Denny, Esther Ralston, Vince Barnett—Another one I got walkouts on. They can't stand that color. Would have been fine without the color. Played March 23-24.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Van Theatre, Van, W. Va. Coal mining patronage.

Invincible

ELLIS ISLAND: Donald Cook, Peggy Shannon—While Ellis Island did not have much to do with this but as a whole this was a good exciting thrill drama for the action loving fans with a wow of a finish. This was shown with "Follow the Fleet" which I was a little late in showing. This program did satisfactory business for us.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AFTER THE THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy—An excellent sequel to "The Thin Man," with "Nick" and "Nora" at their best. And don't forget a bouquet for Asta, the best dog star on the screen. This one pleased. Running time, 112 minutes. Played May 8-9.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

ESPIONAGE: Edmund Lowe, Madge Evans—Short of product for Sunday and this did not help any. Played May 9-11.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

GENERAL SPANKY: Spanky McFarland—Double featured this one and it pleased. Alfalfa sings "Just Before the Battle, Mother," in a way that brought down the house. Running time, 72 minutes. Played May 22-23.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

GOOD OLD SOAK: Wallace Beery, Betty Furness—Got by. Just a programer. Running time, 75 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

LAST OF MRS. CHEYNEY, THE: Joan Crawford, William Powell—A disappointment, both as to story and box office. Crawford, Powell, Montgomery deserve better than this and the exhibitor has a right to expect more from Leo. Played April 18-19.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MAMA STEPS OUT: Guy Kibbee, Alice Brady—Did a fair business but the picture not up to Metro's standard. Played May 19-20.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

MAN OF THE PEOPLE: Joseph Calleia, Florence Rice—Good entertainment if any one comes in to see it. Played April 17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NIGHT MUST FALL: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—Got by nicely with all. Just a programer. Running time, 115 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

PERSONAL PROPERTY: Jean Harlow, Robert Taylor—Got by nicely. Just a programer. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STAMBOUL QUEST: Myrna Loy, George Brent, Lionel Atwill—Played this the second time. A very interesting spy story, but made the mistake of bringing it back.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

TROUBLE FOR TWO: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—This turned out to be trouble for "three," including the box office. Tried to play this one alone, but it failed to stand up. Should be double billed.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

UNDER COVER OF NIGHT: Edmund Lowe, Florence Rice—So-so melodrama. Gets by, but little interest reflected at box office. Played April 14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Paramount

DOCTOR'S DIARY, A: George Bancroft, John Trent, Helen Burgess—Let's not mention it. Played April 28-29.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

GIRL ON THE FRONT PAGE, THE: Gloria Stuart, Edmund Lowe—Nice picture. Well liked. No draw. Played May 5-6.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Pielmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

HEART OF THE WEST: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—Pretty good western. Not as good as some of these stars' later ones. Running time, 62 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HER HUSBAND LIES: Ricardo Cortez, Gail

Patrick—Far better than its title. We doubt if this title would draw flies, thereby handicapping business at the start. Played April 20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JOHN MEAD'S WOMAN: Edward Arnold, Francine Larrimore—We thought this a good picture but it did not please. Played May 12-13.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

MAID OF SALEM: Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray—Excellent melodrama. Should satisfy generally. Played April 11-12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MAID OF SALEM: Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray—Fine story, good business.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

MURDER GOES TO COLLEGE: Roscoe Karns, Marsha Hunt—Average detective yarn to low business. Played April 13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PLAINSMAN, THE: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—A western drama done in a grand scale. It has all the things dear to the hearts of the western fan, all done in a big way. The death of Wild Bill Hickok at the end, shot in the back by a human skunk, seemed to me an unnecessary sad ending. It may be true to history but many liberties are taken with semi-historical dramas and there was no need of showing his death. Bill Hickok in this, played by Gary Cooper, is pictured as a hero among heroes and the end of him as shown makes it a real tragic ending. To me this would have been a much better picture if his death was not shown. It could have been told in a title or omitted entirely. The drawing power was a little above average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SWING HIGH, SWING LOW: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—Very good program picture. Running time, 98 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

CRIMINAL LAWYER: Lee Tracy, Margot Grahame—Good programer and well liked. Running time, 72 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

FOLLOW THE FLEET: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—This was shown with "Ellis Island." "Follow the Fleet" is too well known to need any further comment from me. This program did satisfactory business for us.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

AIR EXPRESS
—THAT MEANS RUSH
AIR EXPRESS DIVISION
RAILWAY EXPRESS
AGENCY, INC.

Three-mile-a-minute speed is no further away than your telephone. When minutes mean money, call any Railway Express office for the only nation-wide AIR EXPRESS service. It saves time, worry, and money because AIR EXPRESS flies your shipments 2500 miles overnight—offers you day and night service direct to 216 cities in the United States and Canada—and to Honolulu, Guam, Manila and 32 Latin-American countries. If it's RUSH, remember, phone RAILWAY EXPRESS.

MUMMY'S BOYS: Wheeler and Woolsey—A good picture by this pair and judging by the laughter the audience seemed to have a grand time watching this. This was doubled with "The Plainsman."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RACING LADY: Ann Dvorak, Smith Bellew—Average race track picture. Played April 10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook. N. H. General patronage.

SMARTEST GIRL IN TOWN: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond—Good programer. Normal business. Played May 8.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SOLDIER AND THE LADY, THE: Margot Grahame, Anton Walbrook—Just got by. Nothing to brag about. Running time, 86 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Tops in entertainment, enough said. Running time, 10 reels. Played April 29.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Canada. Rural patronage.

WALKING ON AIR: Gene Raymond, Ann Sothern—My patrons were agreeably delighted with this comedy feature. Sound not so good on account of old print. Running time, 8 reels. Played May 6-7-8.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Canada. Rural patronage.

WANTED: JANE TURNER: Lee Tracy, Gloria Stuart—Good mystery drama that pleased. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WHEN'S YOUR BIRTHDAY?: Joe E. Brown, Marian Marsh—Very good program comedy that kept the audience laughing all the time. All of Joe E. Brown's pictures make a little money. Running time, 75 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

AMBASSADOR BILL: Will Rogers, Marguerite Churchill—Our beloved Will Rogers is still a welcome guest at this theatre. Our patrons turned out in numbers larger than usual. It seemed good to see his friendly face again. The reaction of the audience is about the same as when he was in the land of the living. Everyone seemed to enjoy every minute of it.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BANJO ON MY KNEE: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—Good interesting picture that pleased 100 per cent and did a nice business at the box office. Played May 1.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

BANJO ON MY KNEE: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, Buddy Ebsen—I believe this came the nearest to pleasing everyone of any show this year. Good story and a perfect cast, with Walter Brennan and Helen Westley and Buddy Ebsen stealing the show. "Grandma" Westley with her pipe made the cigarette smoking gals look like sissies. This one may not be one of the ten best of the year, but it is good enough for us. Running time, 95 minutes. Played May 12-13.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage. **

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE OPERA: Warner Oland, Boris Karloff—The Chan pictures are too much the same. When a person sees one he sees 'em all. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FIFTY ROADS TO TOWN: Ann Sothern, Don Ameche—Very good program picture that did not make money for us on account of rental being too high. Running time, 80 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HOLY TERROR, THE: Jane Withers, Anthony Martin—Good program picture. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LLOYDS OF LONDON: Tyrone Power, Madeleine Carroll—Very well received and did slightly more than average business although ordinarily our patrons don't care for these old time costume pictures. Running time, 117 minutes. Played May 15.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

NANCY STEELE IS MISSING: Victor McLaglen, Peter Lorre—Interesting, even exciting entertainment, but it did not attract many. Played April 15-16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PEPPER: Jane Withers, Irvin S. Cobb—Good house saw this with a great deal of pleasure. The child is a favorite here and each picture adds to her laurels. Played May 1.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets, J. Hersholt—This was our midweek opening offering and should have brought out a full house. Those who saw the picture enjoyed it, and loved the quins. Not as good at the box office as could be expected. Played May 19-20.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SHOW THEM NO MERCY: Rochelle Hudson, Cesar Romero, Bruce Cabot—Many told us the best picture they had seen in a long time. Did average week-end business. Very good action picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

STOWAWAY: Shirley Temple, Robert Young, Alice Faye—Shirley Temple goes to town in another pleasing production. Story not so good as some of her pictures, but Shirley does not need much of a story to please. Good supporting cast. Running time, 82 minutes. Played May 5-6.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

WHITE HUNTER: Warner Baxter, June Lang—Good program offering that did a satisfactory business here. Played May 8.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

WINGS OF THE MORNING: Annabella, Henry Fonda—In my opinion, this is fifty per cent better than "Ramona." Good story, beautiful color and a wow of a horse race. John McCormack sings "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," and "Killarney," which many said was worth the price of admission. Very small attendance, but it was not the fault of the picture. Running time, 87 minutes. Played May 19-20.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

United Artists

GARDEN OF ALLAH, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Charles Boyer—They made a beautiful picture out of this story. Many scenes in color were breathtaking. The players took full advantage of the roles assigned them but this did not prove box office success. At least not for us. The answer seems quite clear. Most movie patrons do not seem to care for sad endings. Of course, this could not possibly have ended any differently. From time to time producers try tragic pictures. Very, very few of these tragedies succeed.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

YOU ONLY LIVE ONCE: Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda—Excellent except for one thing—they go out of their way to insist on an unhappy ending. A more happy ending would possibly have made this big box office, as it is we died on it. Played April 22-23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Universal

EMPTY SADDLES: Buck Jones, Louise Brooks—Good old Buck. He helped out an otherwise poor week. Played May 14-15.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

EMPTY SADDLES: Buck Jones—The western fans "ate this up." Our folks are getting the show habit again. Played May 15.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus. N. Y. Family patronage.

MIGHTY TREVE, THE: Noah Beery, Jr., Barbara Read—Good dog yarn that better direction could have improved. Played April 17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHEN LOVE IS YOUNG: Virginia Bruce, Kent Taylor—A really swell show. Well liked. Played May 16-18.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

Warner Bros.

FUGITIVE IN THE SKY: Jean Muir, Warren Hull—Nice little program picture that pleased our Wednesday-Thursday crowd. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE WOMAN: George Brent, Beverly Roberts—Excellent. This is what I call a special, really a fine show, all in natural color. Liked by all. The scenery was beautiful; the directing and recording very good. No doubt one of the best pictures of the year. Be sure to play it. Running time, 85 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE WOMAN: George Brent, Beverly Roberts—Excellent production. From the story by James Oliver Curwood, filmed entirely in color, this is one of the best of the year. Scenery is grand and enough action to please the western fans. Running time, 85 minutes. Played May 14-15.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

LAND BEYOND THE LAW: Dick Foran, Linda Perry—Excellent western, fair business.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

POLO JOE: Joe E. Brown, Carol Hughes—Good picture; good business.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

READY, WILLING AND ABLE: Ruby Keeler, Lee Dixon—Will get by as a program feature. This is definitely not in the big picture class, although Warners' press sheet would have you believe it is. Very poor business. There seems to be too many musicals and I think the public is tiring of them. Played May 7.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SMART BLONDE: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—Ran this on a double feature program and it seemed to please. Glenda Farrell is plenty good. Running time, 59 minutes. Played May 22-23.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

MERRY MUTINEERS: Color Rhapsodies—Splendid cartoon characters of movie stars.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

Educational

FEMININE FORM: Treasure Chest—Fair single reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

MIXED MAGIC: Buster Keaton—Pretty good. Running time, 18 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PLAY! GIRLS: Song and Comedy Hits—Good. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SONGS OF THE DANUBE: Treasure Chest—Excellent music makes this single reel a pleasing change. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ARBOR DAY: Our Gang—Great. Some said it was worth the price of admission to hear Alfalfa sing "Trees." These kids please. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

ARBOR DAY: Our Gang—Very good. The old folks liked it and thought of their old school days.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BORED OF EDUCATION: Our Gang—Our Gang single, which many said this was their best. Thoroughly enjoyed by our week-end customers.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

CIRCUS DAZE: Harman-Ising—One of the best. —A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Pielmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

COLORFUL ISLANDS: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Tops.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

DANCING ON THE CEILING: Tabloid Musical—Fair musical.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

KILLER DOG: Pete Smith Specialties—A fine police dog is accused of being a killer of sheep, shows the animosity of the sheep owners, the court scene, and the final vindication when the dog kills a coyote that is about to leap on one of the sheep.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Small town patronage.

NO PLACE LIKE ROME: Musical Comedies Series—Just eighteen minutes of unalloyed boredom. Running time, 18 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

OLD MILL POND, THE: Harman-Ising—This colorcartoon got them all beat as to entertainment. A pleasant 10 minutes to watch the frogs play, dance, sing and clown. Running one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

ORIENTAL PARADISE: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—These travel pictures are absolutely an asset to any program.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

ORIENTAL PARADISE: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—The best travel talk I have ever run. Beautiful color and scenes that look like Fairyland. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

NEW SHOES: Jean Chatburn, Arthur Lake—A very clever musical romance of two pairs of new shoes, worn by a boy and girl.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PENNY WISDOM: Pete Smith Specialties—One of cleverest Pete Smith shorts of the year and in color. It shows cooking so that the ladies can hardly wait to get home and try it out. A great reel for any spot, any time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PUPS' CHRISTMAS, THE: Real good, very clever. You'll be pleased to show this to your patrons.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

QUAINT QUEBEC: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Another good travelogue, photographed in color. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

REUNION IN RHYTHM: Our Gang—Our Gang comedies draw like a feature for us.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

SOUTHERN EXPOSURE: Charley Chase Comedies—An old comedy with Chas. Chase and Bob Burns. Run it again and it will please.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

TABLE TENNIS: M-G-M Miniatures—Fine. Shows Coleman Clark and others.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

THRILL FOR THELMA, A: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—We thought it was Thelma Todd, but Thelma was a character in the Crime Doesn't Pay Series, that found her thrill didn't pay. Play it by all means. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Paramount

NEVER KICK A WOMAN: Popeye the Sailor—Sweet cartoon. Pleased.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

PANELESS WINDOW WASHER, THE: Popeye the Sailor—An above average Popeye cartoon that pleased everybody; a good addition to any program. Popeye cartoons always seem to please. Running time, seven minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

PLAY SAFE: Color Classics—One of the best cartoons we have run.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

TALKING THROUGH MY HEART: Screen Songs—Good. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WHOOPS! I'M A COWBOY: Betty Boop Cartoons—Fair.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

RKO Radio

MAJOR BOWES NO. 6: These new singles of Major Bowes are well received here.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MISMANAGED: Radio Musical Comedy—Only fair entertainment. Running time, one reel.—L. A. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Canada. Rural patronage.

NEPTUNE NONSENSE: Rainbow Parade Cartoon—Very good and very short. Running time, 7 minutes. —L. A. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Canada. Rural patronage.

NEVER CATCH THE RABBIT: Bill Corum Series—Something different. Good entertainment for lover of dogs. Running time, one reel.—L. A. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Canada. Rural patronage.

United Artists

WOODLAND CAFE: Silly Symphonies—Not up to the standard of Silly Symphony.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

TRAILER THRILLS: Oswald Cartoons—Poorest Oswald we ever ran.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CLYDE LUCAS AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

COOCOONUT GROVE: Merrie Melodies—Very good color cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

DON'T LOOK NOW: Merrie Melodies—Very good. —P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HERE COMES THE CIRCUS: "Poodles" Hanneford—A three ring circus that is a wow. One of the best shorts of the year. Running time, 2 reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

HORSE SENSE WITH HORSE POWER: Fine one reeler. Hope I can play it again later.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Serials

Universal

ACE DRUMMOND: John King, Jean Rogers, Noah Beery, Jr.—This starts off like a good serial but I sincerely hope they do not make John King sing in ever chapter and the same old song. I have never been tired of anything as I was of that song they sang in every chapter of "Phantom Rider"—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

BRITISH FILMS ACT DRAFT DUE JUNE 8th

Dr. Leslie Burgin Tells Distributors Their Percentage Under the Quota Must Be Lower

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

The first draft of the new British Films Act, designed to replace the current law which expires next year, will be placed before the three trade organizations of the industry on June 8 for discussion.

The groups which will take the new measure under consideration are the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, the Kinematograph Renters Society (distributors) and the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries.

It is understood the new bill will contain certain provisions which were not suggested by any of the trade groups.

Verbal accounts of last Wednesday's conference of the trade bodies' representatives with Dr. Leslie Burgin, Parliamentary Secretary of the Board of Trade, indicate that the suggestion for restrictions on imports definitely was rejected, but significance was seen in Dr. Burgin's statement to distributors that their percentage under the quota must be less in the future.

New Association Approved

At a meeting at the offices of the Federation of British Industries formal approval was given to the formation of the new association, embracing all sections of the production branch of the industry, of which details have already appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

The new body will have a dual constitution. There will be a Federation of Film Producers and an Association of Film Producers, Ltd., but for practical purposes they will function as one, through the same officials and offices. The reason for the duplication is that the Federation will be constituted to conduct trade union matters while the association will deal with other activities. An entrance fee and annual subscription will be charged for the association; the Federation will be financed by levies on the five different classes of members in the following proportions:

Feature film producers, 50 per cent.
Studio owners and lessees, 20 per cent.
Laboratory owners, film printers, 12½ per cent.
Producers of shorts, commercial films, trailers, etc., 10 per cent.
News reel producers, 7½ per cent.

The individual members of each sections will also pay on a scale graduated according to their business; in the case of feature producers, on the cost of films made in the previous twelve months, in the case of studio owners on the value of floor space used, and in the other instances on the length or value of their annual footage.

The establishment of this new body is regarded as an important event. Heretofore the production side of the industry has been represented only by the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries, limited to producers with a strictly British qualification. The Film group will now become the Producers' panel of the new Association which will admit any company producing films in Great Britain, the limiting "British" qualification having been abandoned in all phases of the new body's program.

What is aimed at, and seems likely to be secured, is an association representing every interest on the production side with the same completeness as the K.R.S. represents distributors and the C.E.A. exhibitors. Completion of the Association's plans means, in fact, one hundred per cent organization in all branches of the British industry and provides a solid basis for any unifying body, official or unofficial, which may become essential as a result of the legislation finally decided upon by the Government.

Secretary of the new organization will be M. Neville Kearney, who has acted in a similar capacity for the Film Group.

Want Technicians Limited

At the annual meeting of the Association of Cine-Technicians, the General Council was to submit a resolution asking the Government to include in the new Films Act a stipulation that not more than one foreign technician shall be employed on any British picture qualifying for quota. The A.C.T. also asked authority to verify all claims made by "Ace" technicians from abroad.

The association has a membership of 1,122 against 605 in 1935 and 98 in 1933. It asserts that thirty per cent of British technicians have been unemployed since the slackening in production and claims that representations to this effect to the Ministry of Labor has led to the refusal of permits to many foreign technicians or of the refusal of renewal of existing permits.

Five Feet Television

Scophony, Ltd., in a statement to shareholders, claims that its medium receiver gives a dependable television picture, for cinema use, 5 feet by 4 feet, and that its latest home receiver shows a 24 by 22 inch picture. In both cases, still larger pictures are promised as a result of current experiments.

Scophony, Ltd., of which Arthur Levey, Oscar Deutsch and S. Sagall are directors, has received an order from the Soviet Government to install both transmission and receiving apparatus in the first Soviet Television Station at Moscow.

Expect Odeon Flotation

The Odeon Circuit is expected to float a new £8,000,000 company, including control of County Cinemas and London and southern England de luxe theatres. The company will offer £2,000,000 in five per cent debentures late in June.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A LETTER;

On this page in the May 8th issue, your Chairman had occasion to run and to question the soundness of a display ad from a Reading, Pa., newspaper in which one manager lavishly praised the opposition picture, indicating that his own current show lacked box-office strength by advising readers to patronize the other attraction first. Mr. C. G. Keeney, manager of the Park Theatre in Reading and the author of the idea, takes exception to our criticism, and in the following letter, printed in full, defends his position.

DEAR MR. VOGEL:

I was amused at your criticism in your issue of May 8th, concerning our congratulatory ad to Loew's Colonial on "Maytime". You seemed to approve of the idea with your tongue in your cheek.

It may interest you to know that we are playing Joe E. Brown in "When's Your Birthday?" which did not have the most appeal when you consider the opposition was playing "Maytime", "Swing High, Swing Low", "The King and the Chorus Girl". However, our idea did bring us only the following: A very satisfactory week's business, patrons coming to the theatre in great numbers telling us that the reason they came this week was because of our sportsmanship in connection with the advertisement in the paper, and they had never seen or heard anything like it. It also secured for us commendatory remarks from the Real Estate Board, the Electric League Association, the Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis Club, the Rotary Club, and each and every one of these at a meeting of their respective associations commented very favorably on the idea, and I can assure you that we were more than repaid for the money that we spent on this idea.

It was also very gratifying to have the Mayor of the city personally call me on the 'phone, in addition to which nearly every member of the courts came into the theatre and sought me out to compliment me on the idea. I wouldn't take $5,000 for the value of the publicity which we obtained through this ad, but of course you boys sitting in New York in the swivel chairs don't always get the reaction on what happens when a fellow actually goes to work on a proposition on an unusual idea.

In conclusion, it is very funny to think that you personally gave it a very nice space in your own paper.

Kindest regards.

AN ANSWER

In the following, which is a copy of the letter addressed to Mr. Keeney in answer, we have endeavored to give the fullest consideration to the position taken by the manager.

DEAR MR. KEENEY:

Well, we should like to be as amused with your letter as you profess to be with the editorial in question. But frankly, it is not exactly a laughing matter.

Your sincerity in trying to put over something outside the conventional, your endeavor to get away from advertising routine that dogs the ambitious manager's efforts, is not to be criticized. But the manner in which you did so can only be termed an unsound procedure, despite the good sportsmanship, which is not denied, and no matter how highly you were complimented by your townspeople even in terms of extra admissions.

However, you confuse good sportsmanship with good showmanship. In the final analysis, one has but little if any bearing on the other.

We have learned during a career of some 20 years in show-business, in and out of swivel chairs, that theatres flourish mainly upon spirited, hard-hitting competition between rival managers; that grosses are consistently higher in situations where theatremen bend their every effort to put across their own attractions without bothering overly much with how good or bad the opposition's show happens to be.

Kindest regards.

"WE MOURN OUR LOSS"

Through frequent correspondence with the late Round Tabler, his many inspiring contributions to the Club pages, his successes in the Quigley Awards, your Chairman had the good fortune to come to know and to prize highly the friendship of Hal Grady. Thus the announcement of his unexpected passing, on May 24th, conveyed in the news section of this issue comes as a shock as it must to all of our readers who knew him and his good works.

Hal was a fine character, a valued citizen, a talented theatreman. His friends and the industry he served so well can ill afford his going.

Barron Gives Layette On "Star Is Born"

"A Star Is Born" got off to a start at Loew's Palace, Washington, D. C., under Carter Barron's guiding hand by cashing in on the human interest angle. Carter gave a layette to the first child born after the specially staged "Hollywood" opening, Janet Gaynor donating it to the girl and Fredric March awarding it to the boy. Both arrived within five minutes after the show started but the boy was first by sixty seconds.

In connection with the opening, Barron garnered 24 of the loudest-mouthed newsboys in the city and had them distribute "Star" extras to the crowds watching the celebrities.

Special Section in Paper Devoted to Grand Opening

For the opening of the new Warner Grand Theatre, Vineland, N. J., Doug George of the Philadelphia publicity department together with manager Alan Rappaport turned out a sock 16-page section of the Evening Journal which was sold, written, edited and on the streets in 48 hours on a rush opening.

Section which was done on a flatbed press included congratulatory ads from local merchants, stories on the theatre, organization and opening picture, which was "God's Country and the Woman." Forthcoming productions also came in for some publicity together with scene stills and photos of Warner stars.

Mounier Promotes Flights To Coronation on "Orders"

To exploit "Without Orders," publicist J. Mounier for that opening at the Cinema Normandie, Paris, France, tied up biggest air transportation company on a contest whereby prizes were offered patrons. First prize was all expense round trip ticket to London, second prize round trip to London without expenses, both for the coronation. Contestants had to answer two questions: total kilometers covered by transportation lines in a year and total number of patrons who attended the theatre for first week of showing of film.

In addition to above inducements, company furnished a short about pilots with a record of 100,000 kilometers and over which attracted much favorable comment from the audience. According to Clair E. Hilgers, of the RKO office there, the contest was extremely successful.

Lobby Artist Used By Newman on "Heaven"

Various stunts have been used recently by Ben Newman, Loew's Rio, New York City, to plug his attraction and following are listed the highlights of a few of them.

Ben promoted a local chalk artist who drew caricatures of Simone Simon and James Stewart in his lobby (see photo), distributing them to patrons in advance of "Seventh Heaven" date. Opening performance of "Romeo and Juliet," local florist was promoted for giveaway of Norma Shearer roses to first 300 women attending opening matinee.

Applying the press book suggestion for "When's Your Birthday," Ben built a lobby display with an eye level aperture, patron looking in hole turned a knob until his or her birthday period appeared and then read a humorous horoscope. On the same picture, large birthday cake was promoted with frosted wording "To Joe E. Brown, now at Loew's Rio."

On "Maytime" usher and usherette were dressed as stars of the picture, came on stage to music of sweethearts and opened a large book, page by page. Cover carried picture of Eddy and MacDonald and cutout title letter. Closing the book they exited as the lights dimmed and faded into the trailer.

"WHY SHOULD WE HAVE A FREE LIST?"

—IRVING LESSER, MANAGING DIRECTOR, ROXY THEATRE, NEW YORK CITY

"ELIMINATE PASSES, INCREASE GROSSES"

Dear Mike:

Your editorial in the May 22nd issue of the Motion Picture Herald, is indeed interesting and the pass evil is so deep-rooted that I only hope that you secure the needed support to actively and continuously campaign to abolish passes until that evil is wiped out of our industry.

The pass evil does not exist in the grocery stores, gasoline stations, public utility companies, restaurants, hotels, in fact no other line of endeavor. Why should our industry be singled out to have a free list? It is only that we have submitted to it. We have started to accept it as a recognized practice and we have led a lot of people into believing that they are entitled to it. As a result we have lost caste. We are looked upon regrettably as seekers of favoritism through what we like to term "reciprocation." We are just deluded and misguided and were we to look deeply enough into what the recipient of a pass thinks of us we could very readily be offended.

There is no law that says that window cards, poster locations, photograph displays, etc., are the proper medium of advertising, but if it is the opinion of some that they are and they pay money for these particular articles, then they should be willing to pay money to exhibit them, or display them, or post them or whatever is necessary. A pass should not be payment because the attraction that you advertise should be sufficiently strong to make the location selected worthy of payment by the number of people that it would attract to the theatre.

Most assuredly if money was paid a proportion of it would be returned to the box office.

You ask a very pertinent question, "Would or would not any losses incurred from giving money instead of passes be made up by the general discontinuance of the pass list and all its attendant evils, financial and otherwise?" There can only be one answer to that query—losses cannot possibly be incurred by discontinuance of passes and, to the contrary, if they were discontinued, grosses would increase and the extent of the increase would be astonishing. It will be a happy day for me to experience if passes were entirely and forever discontinued.

Into an entirely different category, howver, falls a class of individuals who are entitled to free admissions. They are the inmates of charitable institutions; the poor who are crippled and blind; the underprivileged who are the objects of local, state or national relief funds. In this direction we have a definite duty and we should endeavor to bring a little sunshine into those otherwise drab lives. This is not a matter of business practice or custom, however, this is purely a matter of individual wishes. I feel reliant, however, that if we discontinued the so-called gratuities in our industry we would be finding time and seeking opportunities to take care of more of those mentioned just hereinabove.—Irving Lesser, Managing Director, Roxy Theatre, New York.

READERS, PRO AND CON, PASS ON EDITORIAL

Setting forth an opinion in the May 22 issue that Round Tablers and other readers might be interested in discussing what might happen if certain services and contest prizes were paid off with money instead of passes, your Chairman is gratified that so many representative theatremen have expressed themselves pro and con in answer to and on the pass evil in general.

On this page and the next has been set down what theatremen have to say, and further opinions are invited. The discussion will be continued in next week's issue.

FAVORS SUGGESTION FOR MONEY PAYMENT

Dear Mike:

Thanks for your letter of May 19th, also the enclosure which I read with a great deal of interest. The pass situation is without a doubt a very serious matter and I feel the industry as a whole should get together and work out some plan whereby it could be controlled. As it stands at present, it is just like a cancer; it grows from year to year.

Your newspaper contacts as you go along become better and naturally, the various courtesies you receive from the various departments of a newspaper puts you in a sort of spot where you can't help yourself and increase on courtesies to your theatre. The same goes on the political side of any city, as well as any other contacts which go to make up your medium of exploiting and building good-will for your property.

I have often wondered why we as theatre men are so lenient with passes. Of course in a lot of cases you are forced into a situation because your competitor, who, in order to make himself a better fellow with the newspaper and other contacts will pass them along by the handfuls. At the same time, take our merchants who get as many accommodations from the newspaper and the political side of the city and other contacts as the theatre, but still these same newspaper men or politicians, etc., wouldn't dare think of walking into a men's store and taking any of his merchandise off the shelves without paying for same.

Your suggestion of paying for bill-posting and advertising privileges, paying for contacts in newspapers in order not to give passes in excess as we do now, I think is splendid, and at the same time if theatres eliminated the pass evil, I am sure the box office would be helped a great deal. After all the seats in a theatre are our merchandise and when we give them away we are taking our stock off our shelves. Any common sense business man knows if a merchant gives his stock away for nothing, he couldn't possibly stay in business.—Wm. K. Saxton, City Manager, Loew's Theatres, Baltimore, Md.

IS AGAINST PASSES FOR CARDS, CONTESTS

Dear Mike:

I have read your article in the May 22d issue relative to the pass question with much interest. The pass question is one that can be argued about for hours, and perhaps a great many divergent opinions will be expressed. As to giving out passes for window cards, newspaper contests, etc., this I believe is bad business.

Unfortunately, a pass is only a small piece of paper and looks like it has no value when it is handed out. However, if that pass had some concrete form such as a necktie or a shirt, maybe theatre managers would not give them away so quickly. There are times, of course, that passes have a certain return value for reasons which you and every theatre man knows, without putting it in type. These are the times they should be used, and only at these times. As a great many people have remarked, "When you get something for nothing, no value is placed on it." I think that I have heard more people say that a show is lousy when they have come in on a pass than when they have paid.—Nat Holt, Division Manager, RKO Cleveland Zone Theatres.

WOMETCO THEATRES ADD SERVICE CHARGE

Dear Mike:

That the theatre pass is an evil, is, I believe, an unquestioned assertion. For as many years as I can remember this issue has raised more steam, caused more discussions and wasted more wordage than most any other subject in show business. As it is today about half the show people are content to let matters as they always have been, and the other half are gunning for the guy who started it all.

But without going into all the side issues let's ask another question. You're a theatre owner. There's a nice downtown location for your display. You've always wanted it and now it's in your lap. You've just read the Motion Picture Herald, which slyly suggested the idea of laying out money for locations instead of giving away passes. Your admission price is two-bits. You'd feel foolish offering the fellow a quarter or a half dollar for the location but you know darn well you can swing it with two passes. Well, what would you do? Of course you would.

I've found that many a spot which could not be secured for any sort of money can be had for a few tickets. Funny, but people are that way.

Then again, you want to plant what you feel is a particularly good story in the paper (funny, too, how we always think each succeeding story is particularly "gooder" than the last). It's surprising what a ticket will do in most cases in instances like this.

Yes, I think passes are an evil. Still, when it comes to laying out money instead of giving away those little pieces of paper, I don't know. When I think of the billboard locations we'd have to pay for, the hotel bulletins, the weekly newspapers and all of the rest of the things which are actually paid for in passes, I still don't know. But when I think of all the chiselers who think they should see the show for some fancied reason or other, or probably just because they know you, I say "No passes, ever."

With the knowledge that most managers are kind-hearted, genial fellows; that they are apt to be softened by some sob story from some would-be free show see-er, and they are prone to give them away just to get rid of some people, we have added a service charge of five cents on each pass in the hope that it would discourage a great many; at least to the knowledge that they weren't seeing the show for absolutely nothing at all. It has helped I think, but personally I wish it were stepped up to a dime.

And even after citing all these pros and cons from my own experience I wish they were never thought of, even for the small reason that I hate to write them. But I do think that the only definite way to stop passes is to pass a national law against them.—Hal Koplin, Advertising Director, Wometco Theatre, Miami, Fla.

FEELS CASH PRIZES WOULD NOT DRAW

Dear Mike:

The theatre has at all times been in a unique position in regard to other industries and merchants. It is probably the only business left today that still maintains some of its glamour. Its merchandise is unique in that it is not kept on shelves and cannot be sold twice in one month or held over till another week and again put on sale.

The careful manager does not throw away passes and they therefore become a rare, valuable item to those receiving them. I believe that few managers want to distribute passes promiscuously but down through the years we have used them for barter and exchange for some items that Cash cannot buy. Newspapers and their readers would not be interested quite so much in let us say a $10 cash prize as against 15 pairs of passes which have the same commercial value. One asks for and receives favors from local politicians that could not be paid for by cash. In fact were Cash offered the recipient would be highly insulted and all favors would be canceled. No manager hesitates about offering some one a half dozen passes for a favor but wouldn't dream of offering a $2 bill or even a $5 bill.

I don't believe the question of box office has ever entered into this discussion. It's true that some recipients wouldn't go to the theatre regularly after receiving a pass, but on the other hand if a picture has sufficient value or attraction that people want to see it, lack of a pass won't stop them from coming. And they will buy a ticket. The pass situation is a subject that days of debate will not clear up. There always will be local situations where they are a necessity.—Morris Rosenthal, Manager, Loew's Majestic Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn.

REQUESTS REPRINTS FOR L. & J. MANAGERS

Dear Mike:

We are perhaps the "toughest" circuit in existence, insofar as passes are concerned; and while in some cases we have perhaps made ourselves somewhat unpopular, yet we are confident we are operating along proper business lines.

We feel that our position is also appreciated by film exchanges, for practically all of our product is played on percentage and every time we save a pass we feel they are benefited accordingly.

Other than the above, I have nothing more to add at the present moment except, if you can send me twenty reprints of your editorial on this subject, I would like to mail a copy to each of our managers, in order to bring added attention to this subject.

Wm. J. Jenkins, Secretary-Treasurer,
Lucas & Jenkins Theatres,
Atlanta, Ga.

"ONCE A DEAD HEAD, ALWAYS A DEAD HEAD"

Dear Mike:

There is an old but true saying, "Once a dead-head, always a dead-head." As far as the pass evil is concerned, once a layman is given a pass for no reason, favor or value, he seems to be under the impression that his days of paying at the box-office are over.

Statistics also prove that a dead-head entering a theatre on an "Annie Oakley" is always the biggest "knocker." Regarding the pass evil, pages of the abuse, grief and trouble caused, could be written on this topic.

I thoroughly agree with Mr. Larkin that the distribution of passes promiscuously lowers the standing of both the attraction and the theatre. In my long experience in the theatre business I have also found that the pass customer seems to desire more favors than the paying ones. If there is a wait, he seems to feel that he should be ushered into a seat ahead of the paying, waiting patron. We have found that if we have a hit possessing quality, regardless of our large seating capacity, paying patrons will wait hours to enter our theatre.

On the other hand, in fairness to this evil, there are situations where two passes will often obtain, in the way of a favor or location for posting, something that money cannot buy. It has been the custom in the poster or sniping situation, as far back as I can remember, to give passes for preferred sniping locations.

I believe that newspaper men, city officials, etc., are people whom the theatre is continually requesting favors of and are entitled to courtesy. However, strange as it may seem, I find that these people far from abuse the privilege. I believe that newspapers would be opposed, in various contests, to running them if they did not receive guest tickets in return for the space given the theatre. It has been my experience that the lineage given far exceeds the value of the passes.

The system used by the Fabian Theatres, in all cases except newspaper employees and critics, is that in addition to the Federal or State tax, a service charge is added. The monies from the service charge are placed in a fund for the employees, to be used in case of sickness or accident. The charge has greatly reduced the pass evil. Some of the dead-heads are so cheap, much to our gratification, that they resent paying the service and Federal taxes.

There is an old and true saying in the circus business—an Indian never forgets a good deed or favor and he will be around tomorrow for another one. The same applies to the pass hound.

MORAL—"A pass should only be given for twice the value received."—Joe Lee, Advertising Director, Fabian Theatres, Brooklyn, N. Y.

OFFERS "TICKETS" BUT NOT "PASSES"

Dear Mike:

I have read, with much interest, your article in the May 22 issue of the Herald. Our views coincide with yours perfectly in the matters of birthday passes and general pass-lists. It has always been our policy to give tickets only in return for value received. My closest friends pay for our shows the same as they might pay for groceries at another friend's store, and I don't think they consider me stingy, either. Our newspaper seems entirely willing to give us some cooperation and publicity in return for the large volume of advertising and job printing business we give them. So why passes? However, like the apple vendor on the street, we have not found a way to keep policemen from "snitching" some of our wares!

As I understand your position regarding the giving of tickets as contest prizes and in return for window card space, I cannot fully agree with you.

In the first place, we never use the word "pass" . . . but, rather, "ticket." The offer of two tickets, for instance, as a contest prize seems somehow much more desirable than two "passes." Likewise, the offer of four solid hours of ENTERTAINMENT seems infinitely more alluring than 50 cents. To give a merchant a ticket for his cooperation in allowing you to place a window card prominently in his store, we feel, is giving a courtesy in return for a courtesy. . . . not a business deal. To give him 25 cents in cash would indicate that the space you are taking in his window and the inconvenience you have caused him is worth precisely 25 cents. He is likely to think you have slightly under-rated his establishment.

See you at the fair in '39!—Harold Armistead, Lyric Theatre, Easley, S. C.

Bustin Constructs Ship For "Fleet" Front

Unique lobby was built for "Follow the Fleet" in London by Aubrey L. Bustin at the Coliseum with front converted into a 20-foot-high model gunboat. Portholes were lighted and had searchlight, navigation lights, two large guns and loud speaker concealed on the deck with radiogram playing records from the picture.

On the top mast was a flag with title of the picture over each boxoffice window was a card with the words "Visitors' tickets here" while on the front of the ship was copy "All aboard for the cruise of a lifetime." On one side was a large cutout illuminated with striplights of a lifebuoy with Rogers and Astaire dancing, title was arranged in cutout letters in front covered with flitter.

Entire staff was dressed as American sailors and during the day the usherettes so dressed with imprinted kit bags on their shoulders covered the parks. Through tieup with local Lifeboat Institution. Bustin promoted loan of model lifeboat, life saving gun, anchors, etc., for lobby display. Institute also sending man in oilskins and lifeboat who stood in lobby explaining the different gadgets and collecting for the seaman's fund.

Properly Conducted House Important to Community

Member Outlines Plan for Correct Theatre Management

by DUNCAN CAMPBELL
Capitol, Midland, Ont., Can.

A properly conducted theatre is of the same importance to a community as a school or church. Such a theatre contributes to the general welfare of the community because wholesome recreation is essential to it's well-being. The well conducted theatre combines system-regularity-cleanliness, and above all a certain civic service which is particularly necessary in the small town of today. Careful selection of employees makes it possible that nothing be left to chance and that each member of the staff knows his job and does it willingly and with a smile. The trend of the Theatre is upward and it must be continued so by constantly striving for better methods in Theatre operation.

During the recent months we have had the chance to show just how a small town movie house can not only establish a reputation for tops in entertainment but fill an important place as well, through definite service, in the larger life of the community where it is located.

The cooperation we have obtained from the educational authorities in Midland in seeing that pictures of an educational or historical nature are recommended to the pupils and referred to by the teachers, is appreciated by the parents of school children. This is only one of the local activities carried on in a general way.

Two projects of an unusual nature have been carried through lately which show just the type of service a theatre can be to the small community.

Early last winter we organized the "Capitol All Star Hockey Team" and arranged for their transportation each Saturday morning to the Ontario Hospital on the outskirts of the neighboring town of Penetanguishene. There the All Stars played interesting games with a team picked from the patients who had a reputation for skill on the blades. The games were played in the courtyard in full view of hundreds of inmates. The diversion they were thus able to enjoy was greatly appreciated by the directors of the institution.

"Tell Us What You Did"

DOG TEAM BALLY. Constructing sleigh of compo and lumber, Bill Johnson, Opera House, Millinocket, Me., used this sled to sell "Stowaway." Cutouts of Shirley were made from three sheets.

The most outstanding piece of service for which we are receiving valuable commentary was in connection with a recent disastrous fire in a nearby village (Victoria Harbor). The local Roman Catholic Church was razed and the homes of six families were destroyed. The owners of the homes, several with large families, were left destitute by the fire. A happy thought struck us immediately that why not arrange a benefit concert for these poor people. We had many patrons from this village and the cost and work connected with such a venture was negligible.

Stages Concert Benefit

The suggestion of a sacred benefit concert was adopted with enthusiasm in this district. Announcements were made of the concert in local churches and when the time came for the program the theatre was filled to capacity. The local Salvation Army, with whom we are always in accord, provided the music and all the numbers were of an exceedingly high order, including talent made up of some of the district's finest artists, several contributions being made by a former opera singer. D. L. White, leading citizen of the town, was chairman, and remarks were made by Mayor James Mackie, Dr. G. E. Tanner, member of Provincial Parliament; Rev. A. E. Ingram and Adj. Barfoot. Glowing references were made by all speakers to the generous gesture of the theatre for making all arrangements for the program and offering the facilities of the theatre for the concert. Great gratification was expressed by the village of Victoria Harbor and by the victims over the goodly sum realized from the benefit.

As a result of our efforts made locally to have the theatre occupy an indispensable part of the life of Midland we have succeeded in convincing the majority of citizens that the CAPITOL is a definite asset to the town.

I have just mentioned these two instances where the theatre can be a real service to its local community. These things happen and if the local manager takes advantage of the situation he can be of service to his patrons and also glean the proper and valuable publicity it is bound to result in for his theatre and his company.

Wertheimer's "Quality Street"

'Maytime' Stunts Recorded From Various Spots

Much has been done in the field to exploit "Maytime" and following are recorded the highlights of various campaigns around the country: Johnny Newkirk, Loew's Granada in Cleveland, followed a three-week engagement of the picture at the downtown first-run theatres by promoting local florist for lobby exhibit including pergola covered with blooms. Center of display carried card inviting sweethearts to be seated and wait for the showing.

Dress shop featured window of frocks worn by Jeannette MacDonald with neat card bearing photo of the star tying up playdates. Beauty salons dressed their window in "Maytime" atmosphere featuring a MacDonald coiffure and by visiting high schools in his district, Johnny promoted kids to carry imprinted banners on their bikes.

Radio station WSMK cooperated, running a contest two weeks in advance, listeners had to submit mistakes heard on certain programs and "Maytime" guest tickets went to winners. Local jeweler placed large clock in prominent spot in window offering tickets to those correctly guessing time the clock would stop.

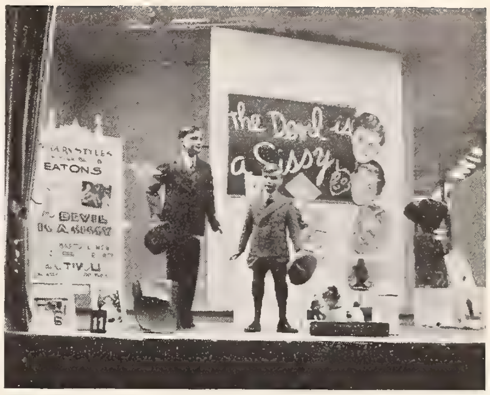
Various merchants came through with co-op ads stressing the "sweetheart" angle, letters were mailed to principals of schools and music clubs, superintendent of schools issued "must" for the students to see the picture and a study of the film took place in every schoolroom in the city.

Ahead of his opening at Loew's Regent, Harrisburg, Pa., Sam Gilman ran teaser ads reading "You'll be surprised, but it's worth a dial. Call (theatre number) for correct time." Callers on dialing were told the time and given a brief spiel on the picture. Terming what he calls "selling a picture with pictures," Gilman promoted photograph studio window which was dressed up with artificial flowers and spring type pictures.

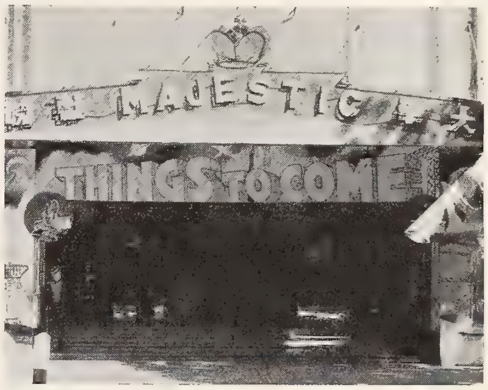
Wood blocks cut out building brick size with picture copy were used as newspaper weights on all newsstands and wherever Sam found a patch of grass he planted "stakes" with copy reading "Keep off the grass, 'Maytime' is coming." Music counters were dressed with trellis work on which were tacked star photos and girl plugged the hit tunes.

Papers gave Matt Saunders, Loew's Poli, Bridgeport, Conn., plenty of publicity when he promoted local society women to decorate his lobby with flowers for opening. Leading orchestra plugged songs with special mention of picture and theatre with one orchestra playing nightly at leading hotel broadcasting "sweetheart" songs over local N.B.C. blue network.

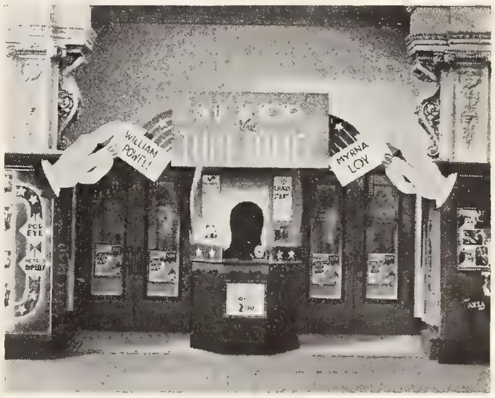
Dramatic clubs and music teachers were mailed special post cards and department store had Max Factor representative during her make-up talks use photos of Jeannette MacDonald for illustrations. Stills of the stars and shots from the picture were also displayed. For his lobby, Matt dressed dolls to resemble the stars and seated them on a swing covered with flowers and card with title and playdates.



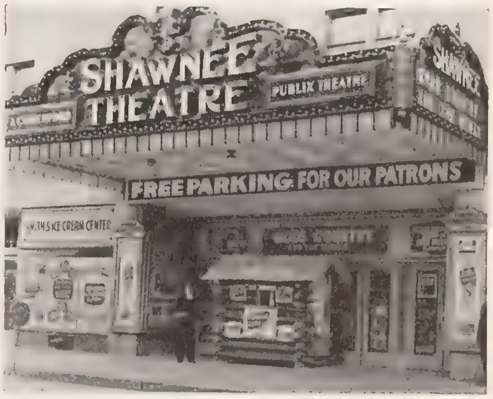
DOUBLE WINDOW DISPLAY. Promoted by Jack Purves, Tivoli Theatre, Hamilton, Ont., Can., for "Devil Is a Sissy" was double window in leading department store with credit cards on all counters.



ATMOSPHERIC FRONT. In Hong Kong, China, Constantin Goldin dressed his front as above to sell "Things to Come." On side panels were painted rocket ship and scene from the picture.



"THIN" EXPLOITATION. Harry Creasy, Capitol Theatre, Kamloops, B. C., dressed his boxoffice as shown on accompanying photo for "After the Thin Man." Note calling cards of Powell and Loy.



ATMOSPHERIC FRONT. Log cabin was erected around boxoffice of the Shawnee Theatre, Plymouth, Pa., by W. A. Roberts for "God's Country".

Bulls Eye Display Constructed By Rosenthal for "Army" Date

Plugging his "You're In The Army Now" attraction at Poli's Majestic, Bridgeport, Conn., Morris Rosenthal arranged a unique lobby display (see photo) with a movable bulls eye as center of attraction. In front of display Morris planted a collection of war materials including guns, rifles, gas masks, trench periscopes, helmets, knives, etc., etc. This display was later moved to a downtown store window.

Opening night Rosenthal invited American Legion which paraded to theatre with fife and drum corps after which they played a half hour concert on stage.

Girl in Lobby Types "Secretary" Messages

Various stunts have been used by Dave Titleman, Belmont Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. amongst which was tieup with nationally known typewriter concern which was contacted for a noiseless machine and girl to type out messages in the lobby on "More Than a Secretary" (see photo).

For "The Great O'Malley" a contest was arranged to pick the most popular policeman in West Philadelphia with cooperation of local newspaper. Contest ran for three weeks using a voting coupon in paper as the medium for the final selection. A silver loving cup was promoted from local jeweler as prize and for the actual presentation, Hon. Michael J. Stack did the honors. Officer's wife was presented with flowers and many local dignitaries were at the theatre for the ceremonies with cooperating paper playing up the stunt.

Hairdressers' Style Show Clicks for Fred Souttar

Recently successfully concluded was the annual Hairdressers Style Show put over again this year by Fred Souttar, district manager, Fox Midwest Theatres, St. Louis, Mo. Tying in with the opening of "John Meade's Woman" at the Lincoln Theatre, Belleville, Ill., a double truck co-op page was planted with approximately 35 local hairdressers represented.

Souttar reports this has been an annual affair for a number of years with local beauty parlors cooperating and showing the latest in hair styles in a stage show combined with acts. This year, of course, many of them featured the Coronation Idea.

Another stunt that is creating plenty of publicity and interest is tieup with the Belleville Daily News Democrat whereby most popular Boy Scout is being sent to Washington, D. C. with all expenses paid, to attend the National Boy Scout Jamboree. Paper runs coupons good for ten votes and to first ten runners up promoted gifts are awarded.

Giesel Cooks Dinner For Lucky Patron

V. Giesel, manager Orpheum Theatre, Green Bay, Wis., had his photo on the front cover of the Public Utility Pioneer, a monthly magazine published by utility company there in connection with stunt put over at the theatre for "The Phantom Servant."

Arrangements were made for installation of a modern electric range on stage; the film was flashed on the screen and spot on the stove, then a girl showed audience how she placed four different items (roast, vegetables, etc.) in the oven, setting the time and temperature control. All this time the film was explaining what she was doing, using no selling copy. It ran for about 1½ minutes, ending with statement "to be continued."

The regular program followed immediately and by the time the performance was nearly over and practically the entire audience had forgotten about the stunt, the spot was again turned on the range, part two of the film appeared on the screen and the film announced that while the audience was enjoying the program a complete dinner was being prepared in the oven. At the conclusion, Giesel appeared on the stage, drew a ticket from a box and to the holder of the winning number the dinner was presented.

Night Clubs Feature "Top of Town" Night

Rodney Pantages, Pantages Theatre, Hollywood, and Jack Gross, Hillstreet Theatre, Los Angeles, distributed 50,000 eight-page "Top of the Town" tabloid newspapers in carefully selected zones. Advertising space sold in the tabloid covered cost of both printing and distribution. A "Top of the Town" Night was held at one of the smarter night clubs. Event was plugged over the air, during floor-shows, in lobby displays, table cards and by direct mail sent out by the club to their patrons. The club donated a trophy to winners of a "Top of the Town" dance contest. Tieup got breaks in all metropolitan papers, featuring title in headlines.

In a tieup with a local doughnut shop, two large cardboard doughnuts with theatre credits were placed prominently in shop. A 30-foot banner with copy for "Top of the Town" and doughnuts was set up at a street corner.

Popularity Contest Sells "Star Is Born" for Julia

Through an arrangement with the Waterbury Republican and American, Manager Julia Smith of Warner's State, Waterbury, Conn., engineered an unusually successful baby popularity contest in connection with "A Star Is Born."

The city's leading photographer took pictures of the first 250 babies who were registered. Ballots were distributed by the press and the theatre in return for tear sheets and ticket stubs. The voting took place daily in the theatre lobby where the entrants' photos were placed.

Stunt, which ran for several days before the opening as well as during the run, helped the house considerably to establish a new record for the biggest opening day business in its history. Accompanying photo lobby setpiece and clock tieup.

TELEVISION RECEIVES NEW IMPETUS BUT LEADERS REMAIN PESSIMISTIC

NBC's Six-Story Broadcasting Plant Project in Philadelphia Will Include Television Apparatus; Academy Surveying

Problems of Cost and Limited Range Are Still Far from Solution, Sarnoff and Lohr Give Warning to Public

Announcement of a new television projection tube which makes possible the use of a larger viewing screen at comparatively low cost, and reports from England of at least partly successful broadcasting of the coronation procession in London within the last few weeks, again have attracted attention to the status of television in the laboratory and in the field.

The National Broadcasting Company, which has been experimenting for more than a year with a station in the Empire State Building, New York, announced that a new six-story broadcasting plant being erected by its Station KYW in Philadelphia will include extensive television transmitting apparatus. The Yankee Network, Inc., in New England asked permission of the Federal Communications Commission to construct a television station in Boston.

The Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences is preparing an annual report on television in connection with motion picture production which is expected to be published this month.

Public pronouncements of officials connected with television development, including David Sarnoff, RCA president, and Lenox R. Lohr, NBC executive, indicated that the major problems of cost and of limited range were still far from solution.

The television projector, a "gun" which enlarges images a few inches in size to eight by ten feet, was demonstrated at the final session of the convention of the Institute of Radio Engineers at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, by Dr. R. R. Law of the engineering department of RCA who was assisted in its development by Dr. V. A. Zworykin, developer of the iconoscope used in television transmission.

A still picture, 1.8 by 2.4 inches, was projected by the tube on a screen three by four feet and the brightness of the image was said by those who demonstrated the equipment to approximate closely the brilliance of the average home movie. When enlarged to eight by ten feet in size the picture was said to have been clear to observers nearly 100 feet away from the screen.

Dr. Law called the device a "high current electron gun for projection kinescopes" and emphasized that it was in the early stages of development. "It is yet too early to say if this is the 'gun' which will be used in the final television projection machine," the engineer said. He pointed out that the demonstration was not a radio or television display but merely a laboratory test designed to show the projection properties of the equipment. "Projection is only a small part of the complete television problem or system. What we have shown here is only the 'gun' and what it will do with a still picture," he concluded.

TELEVISION PAINTED AS ULTIMATE SHOW

Television of the future will combine the more advantageous features of current broadcasting, films, the newspaper, the magazine and the billboard, Harry R. Lubcke, television director of the Don Lee Broadcasting System, told 600 delegates to the annual convention of the Pacific Coast Electrical Association in Pasadena.

"I envisage," he said, "along with interesting eye-and-ear entertainment, the presentation of the commercial message with a theme picture, a theme song and a single word, rather than the multi-worded commercial announcement in use today. Television programs will be available only a few hours every day, at first. The concept of the 'nightly performance' will follow. Later, following the trend of early broadcasting, more and more programs will be televised, until, finally, television will be as continuously available as is radio today.

Coronation Televised

The television broadcast of scenes of the coronation procession in London were regarded as highly successful by reporters and observers. It was estimated that an audience of 50,000 in an area of 7,500 square miles saw and heard the marching scenes, images of Queen Mary and Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose in their coach and closeups of the King and Queen.

The experiment was sponsored by the British Broadcasting Corporation, and was regarded as expensive inasmuch as the area covered was comparatively small. The installation of cables to carry the "pickups" and relay the broadcasts between stations cost about £1,000 a mile. Three television cameras were employed to view the procession as it passed over the route to and from Buckingham Palace and Westminster Abbey. The system of direct transmission without the medium of film was used.

Reception of the broadcast, said to have been on a more ambitious scale than any ever attempted, was called excellent at sets in the London area and was reported clear at places as far removed as Brighton and Ipswich, both 50 miles from London. At the Odeon theatre in Southgate a specially invited audience of 100 saw the pictures.

A television Exposition will open at the South Kensington Museum on June 10th under the direction of the British radio-electrical industry.

NBC in Philadelphia

Announcement of the new NBC television station in Philadelphia marks that city as a center of activity in the field. The Philco Radio and Television Corporation and Farnsworth Television, Inc., are already operating experimental stations there. Station KYW is owned by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company and operated for them by NBC. The new building is expected to be ready for occupancy on November 1st and the television installation, to occupy two floors, will be started soon after that date.

Fred Niblo, motion picture director, has been appointed television director and supervisor by NBC. He will organize programs and select talent for shows broadcast from the company's New York station.

The Boston station for which the Yankee Network applied for a permit would operate on 41,200 kilocycles with a power of 50,000 watts. No date was set for the construction.

Sarnoff Sees Delay

David Sarnoff, president of RCA, last week told a convention of radio wholesalers in Chicago that he did not foresee television this year and could not predict when it might be commercially possible. Among the obstacles to be overcome before television production can be assured Mr. Sarnoff enumerated the lack of coaxial cables for interconnecting transmitters, the problem of developing suitable programs at a reasonable cost, and the limited range of present television transmitters.

Similar views were expressed by Lenox R. Lohr, NBC president, at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon in Kansas City. Mr. Lohr, however, stressed the point that new developments in transmission involve changes in receivers and thus make impractical the wide sale of sets at present or until the process is perfected. He added that he did not think television would injure motion picture business to any extent.

Speaking of a television survey being made by Weed & Company, radio station advertising representatives, Joseph J. Weed, president of the company, said.

"There is the liklihood that sponsors will pay big fees for television preview rights to outstanding new films. And closely allied to this revenue is the possibility of their large studio facilities being engaged to produce special television films for big national advertisers. Oddly, the sponsors may thus become movie 'angels' just as the movie firms themselves have been Broadway play 'angels' in recent years."

Television will borrow from the screen in its early stages, will develop its own technique as it advances, and will pay back to the screen in devices and methods which will lend themselves to adaption in Hollywood, Ralph R. Beal, research supervisor for RCA told delegates to the Society of Motion Picture Engineers convention in Hollywood last week.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Lincoln, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

On our way down here to see Bob Livingston, of the Colonial theatre, we stopped at David City to see A. F. Jenkins, who operates the David City theatre. That is, he is supposed to, but his wife does the most of the chores around the place.

A. F. would never admit being in any way related to us. He says he has gone over the genealogy of the family pretty thoroughly and at no place has he found the slightest taint of crookedness mentioned in his family history. Doggone it all, what's the use of a man being so darn particular anyway?

David City is the county seat of Butler county and they built the county seat right in the heart of the banner county of the state and then they persuaded a guy by the name of Jenkins to operate her favorite playhouse. That's why David City has such intelligent folks. Well, A. F. has a lot of Welsh blood running through his veins anyhow, he can't deny that.

Bob Livingston was out of town when we got there. That's the way it is with Bob. He is always gone some place. We did meet Miss Graven, his cashier, and that helped a whole lot, and if Bob will stay away hereafter when we call it will be all right with us. We noted the absence of the bicycle rack out in front of his theatre. He always kept one in front of his other theatre.

We had a nice visit with our friend, George Monroe. George operates the Capitol theatre and he is always right on the job looking after his Lincoln customers, and if they don't find a good show at Bob's theatre they can always find one at the Capitol.

Friend, Nebraska is where they had that big storm the other day. It unroofed a lot of the houses and broke out about every window glass in town and did quite a lot damage to Mr. Johnson's theatre. We called on Mr. Johnson and found him a pretty busy man, trying to get hold of the insurance company. We hope he got a satisfactory adjustment.

It was at Mr. Johnson's theatre we met Leo Mendelson. Leo sells Warner Brothers' pictures out of Omaha and we asked Leo how big the state penitentiary was and he said he had never seen it, and we surmise that Leo was right about it.

Clay Center is supposed to be about in the center of Clay county. In fact Clay Center is just about the center of the United States, and here is where the KMMJ broadcasting station is located and Mr. Shipley is one of the official announcers. Not only that, but he operates the Clay Center theatre, and between the two jobs he is kept pretty busy. We had a delightful visit with him, notwithstanding he is hard to meet on account of his various activities, but our judgment is that KMMJ can be proud of Mr. Shipley and Clay Center proud of her theatre operator.

There was a time when it was considered that if theatremen wanted to equip their theatres with sound they had to pay some company an exorbitant prices for sound equipment, but a lot of them have demonstrated that that was a lot of horseradish. Down at Edgar we found that B. W. Merrill had made practically all of his sound equipment, and at a very little cost, and it seemed to be as good as some we have heard that cost next to a fortune. He also has a cooling system that would make some other systems seem like it was 110 in the shade, but maybe that is because Mr. Merrill is a practical mechanic. Anyhow, we had a delightful visit with him and Mrs. Merrill, and from now on he will have to stop kicking because we hadn't come to call on him. We went, we saw, and we guess we conquered, because he renewed his subscription to the Herald, and that means that from now on Edgar will be in the front rank of the amusement business.

You should never go to Davenport without calling on Mr. and Mrs. John R. Walcott of the Walcott theatre. We spent at least two delightful hours with them and found Mr. Walcott busy making changes in his theatre and, as we saw it, it looked good enough as it was. Edgar and Davenport are in the wheat country and the prospects for a huge crop are certainly very bright, but we were told that some of the farmers are kicking because they don't know whether or not it will rain at a time when the crops need it. This reminds us of an old farmer up home who always kicked about conditions. One day we said to him, "Well, Uncle Joe, how's things looking?" and he replied "Oh, everything is all shot to pieces. We won't raise anything and I don't know how we will get through the winter." The next year we asked him the same question and he replied, "Well, Colonel, I don't know where the farmers can find room to crib all their corn they will husk, but then, whatthehells the use, they won't get nuthin for it anyway."

Bob Burns, you remember, said that people should look back occasionally, as well as to keep looking ahead. He said his Uncle down in Arkansas was driving along in his democrat wagon and he noticed his mules were pulling hard and were covered with sweat and he met a man and inquired, "Say, stranger, how far is it to the top of this hill?" and the man answered, "Well, pardner, you hain't goin up no hill; you are goin down hill. Look back and you will see you have lost both hind wheels." Some farmers, as well as some other people we know of, have been going without their hind wheels for some time. (Mr. Walcott isn't; he is getting the Herald.)

We would almost drive three or four miles through the mud to see Mr. and Mrs. Frank of the theatre at Harvard, but we didn't have to. There is a nice gravel road running right into the town, and Harvard is surrounded with wheat in every direction. It's a beautiful country down there and these folks are giving the people some real up-to-the-minute pictures. You betcha, and that's what counts.

Harold Schoonover still runs the Mazda theatre at Geneva. Harold says he is clear around the bend ahead of the sheriff and he hopes to keep that far ahead. We hope he does, too, but then, maybe the sheriff has lost off both hind wheels. But our guess is that will have to go some to catch up with Harold.

Grand Island

This is the town where Harry Shiller built the new Grand theatre and it was well named, too, for we regard it as the ace house of Nebraska.

It may not have as large a seating capacity as some others, but we know of none that is more beautiful, and when you are traveling the Lincoln highway you better stop here and see this theatre. We had a delightful visit with Mr. and Mrs. Shiller, and also Harry's assistant manager, Mr. Kemp, although that is nothing unusual, for we always do.

We failed to see Billy Youngclaus of the Empress theatre. He had just gone home when we called, but we did go in and see the last of "San Francisco," and if the climax to this picture doesn't bring the tears to your eyes, then you are hopeless and probably have lost off both of your hind wheels.

Some people know when it is time to quit. We'll bet you wish we were "some people."

HOW BIG WILL THE FISH STORIES BE THIS YEAR?

IT BEGINS AGAIN!

From now on the adjectives get
Longer and l..o..n..g..e..r!
The promises get Bigger and BIGGER and BIGGER!
All right! So what?
Don't condemn the boys for enthusiasm!
Showmanship would be anemic without it.
You're going to read pages and pages of Annual Announcements packed with pep!
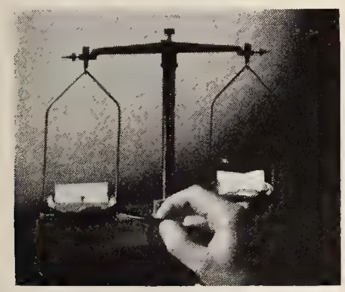
Thank heaven for optimism—



Showmen hate sour-pusses
And the boys mean exactly what they say!
But—what do you do about it?
Of course!
You'll weigh the facts just as you did
Last year . . . and the years before!

THE WILLING VICARS

EVERY newspaper in America from Brooklyn to San Francisco has a list of telephone numbers for "quick quotes," made up of persons of some coloration of importance and fond of appearing in print. Commonly these persons will discuss weather, tariffs, child labor, art or agriculture with equal alacrity, and authority.

This detail of journalistic practice comes to mind as one scans a piece by Mr. Percy Cater in the Daily Mail of London of May 20, engaged in some three column hell-raising about "The Prince and the Pauper" on the ground that it was "clashing . . . with the record of the recent coronation." Obviously the real difficulty with the picture from the Daily Mail's point of view is that it is of "Amurrican" origin.

Meanwhile the large headline "Clergy Protest" is supported by quotations from said clergy including: Vicar of St. Augustine's: "While I have not seen the film, I do not like the sound of things . . ."; Vicar of St. Peter's, Upper Holloway: "If the facts are as stated, I should consider . . . etc."; Rector of St. Paul's, Covent Garden: "While I have not seen the film for myself, I feel that . . . etc."

It all sounds as though the vicars were getting dreadfully vicarious.

TOO FAR WEST

LONG it has been manifest that there is in the Los Angeles Hollywood sector an order of mind with a substantially infinite capacity for purposeful misunderstanding and the astute avoidance of information and facts which may be in any manner adverse to the program in hand. Magnificent illustration of the phenomena produced is afforded in the Los Angeles Daily News of May 26, in a column by Mr. Henry Sutherland.

In the course of a curious defense of Hollywood's acquisition of a strip tease star, Mr. Sutherland sets up the contention that continued objection to the lady's presence in the pictures is "unfair and unprecedented." He argues: "Mae West's stage doings, for example, may not have been all that the reformers could desire, but no one objects to her appearance in the films, even under the same name."

This seems to be one of many things that Los Angeles never heard about. There really is quite a large region east of Cajon Pass.

LITERATE CRITICISM

EVER since the rise of the late Mr. Andre Sennwald the motion picture department of the New York Times has presented a high level of journalistic performance and in frequent spectacular contrast to the large areas of worthy but routine and dusty news writing in the daily press. Currently Mr. Frank Nugent continues and improves the performance with a skill of word and phrase that might be held exemplary to many an other and older hand.

This burst of enthusiasm just now wells up from a reading of Mr. Nugent's recent review of "Paris Commune," by Mosfilm, Moscow, U. S. S. R., seen at the Cameo, where so often so many of the hopeful young folks of cinema criticism strain eyes and ears in quest of something to artfully admire.

Laying his lancet down on "Paris Commune," Mr. Nugent observes: " . . . although the film makers charitably ignore the debauchery, brutality and vandalism of the commune, which did, after all, set fire to public buildings, massacre hostages, destroy the Palace of the Tuilleries, the Thiers library and the Vendome column—it is unable to hide, even in this subjective treatment, inklings of the stupidity, the ineptness and confusion of the revolution's leaders. . . . Without the vivid action shots of most Soviet films and lacking any semblance of warmth in its presentation of personal drama, it emerges as the flat record of a revolution fought by soap-box orators and directed by misfits. None of the players deserves special mention, but its director, Gregory Roshal, does: he has much to learn."

MARX OF VIOLENCE

THIS page normally closes at midnight on press day. This week it was hours late. The editor, nodding in his easiest chair before a Connecticut fireside, broke a church-warden pipe getting to the telephone to answer a call from the first aid staff of a New York hospital inquiring what might be done to ameliorate the spasms of an emergency patient, one Mr. Si Seadler, who was, it seems, suffering paroxysmal attacks of laughter ensuing upon a screening of "A Day at the Races," in consequence of the toxic effect of the Marx Brothers. Came the dawn, the patient was relieved by hot publicity compresses. A partial recovery is indicated, but it was expert opinion that the patient would never be the same again. It is said to be an especially virulent outbreak of box office.

SUIT AND TUB

THE other night "The Blue of the Night" with Mr. Bing Crosby was discovered recrudescing at the Roxy in New York. It was produced by none other than that Mr. Mack Sennett, not so long after the film found its voice a number of years ago. As one recalls it now, it, and its sequels, seem to have had a bit to do with Mr. Crosby's arrival at stardom. But at the moment one's thoughts are rather upon the persistent fecundity of Mr. Sennett, first to bring the camera to bear down upon policemen and first to do a lot of other things quite as satisfactory to the movie masses who get relief at the box office. "The Blue of the Night," back again, indicates that Mr. Sennett's whimsical notions are still relevant. Mack found the suit before Cecil found the tub, but while those ideas are all washed up, the springs of inspiration still flow.

A-TALKING of this and that with the Round Table's Mr. A-Mike Vogel the other day, we deplored the rising flood of unnecessary books. "I think," observed Mike, absent-mindedly dipping into our humidor, "it ought to be required of a man who thinks he has to write a book that he should first go to Canada and cut down enough spruce to print it on."

This Week

SALESMEN in increasing numbers groomed fountain pens for prospective contract signing as the pre-season convention period passed its zenith and Hollywood, with an eye toward season's end when records are tallied, placed 15 productions in work for the start of a month long sprint. Through the dust and fog in the wake of a Congressional proposal for an investigation of the film industry, in prospect the widest in history, came hints of the reasons why, involving ever increasing complaints from independents against the majors coupled with "trust-busting" aims of the Department of Justice. Germany denied France's denial that Nazi influence controls the International Film Chamber and will control the International Congress at Paris. This they suggested as a corollary to their claim that "Germany is the greatest film country in Europe." At home again there appeared no relief from taxes as a Congressional committee approved continuation of the admission levy and the states continued to eye the industry speculatively. Newsreels of the wedding of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor provoked censorship comment as England and the Dominions persuaded reel executives that the British public would not be interested. Jean Harlow, nee Harlean Carpentier, died at the height of her career.

Korda Sails

Alexander Korda, head of London Films, having collaborated on a deal with Samuel Goldwyn whereby they obtained options, which will be exercised, for the purchase of the Mary Pickford-Charles Chaplin-Douglas Fairbanks holdings in United Artists, sailed for London from New York on the Queen Mary Wednesday. Accompanying him were Basil Bleck, legal head of London Films; Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Silverstone, in charge of United Artists in England, and Patricia Ellis, recently signed for a role in the company's "The Playboy."

The details are found on page 39.

Wedding

The marriage of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield, adequately announced and covered in the press, will be shown over the weekend on the screens of theatres throughout the United States. In England, however, "suggestions" from high authority were reported to have convinced newsreel officials that it would not be good policy to exhibit the reels. Similar action is expected in the Dominions. Further discussion of the delicate question of what newsreels should or should not report was provoked by the decision of Paramount News not to show scenes of the Chicago steel riots which resulted in seven deaths.

Newsreels are the subject on page 54.

The How and Why

The how and why of Congressman Dies's Congressional resolution for a sweeping investigation of all branches and phases of motion pictures were answered this week when Capital observers explained the background as involving: (1) Strong antipathy of agricultural south and midwest toward "big business"; (2) Continuous complaints from independents against the majors; and, (3) The "trust-busting" aims of the United States Department of Justice.

Each of these contributories is explained in detail starting on page 13.

Three Years' Product

George J. Schaefer, vice-president in charge of distribution for United Artists, announced this week the signing of a three year product contract with the Wolfson Meyer Theatre Enterprises, Inc., of Miami, Fla. The contract covers all United Artists product for the next three years including the releases of Samuel Goldwyn, David O. Selznick, Walter Wanger and Alexander Korda and the Skippy Cartoons. The United Artists product will play first-run in the circuit's houses in Miami, and Miami Beach, and subsequent runs in the theatres in the Greater Miami area.

50 to 60 from Paramount

Twenty-two of the 50 to 60 pictures which will be produced by Paramount Pictures during the 1937-'38 season will be "million dollar" pictures, Neil F. Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales, told the company's annual convention in Hollywood this week. There will be more musicals than ever before.

Complete details of the product announcement and Paramount convention details appear in the story on page 41.

Season's End

Seven companies have held their annual sales conventions and their salesmen are on the road, pen in hand. Paramount executives convened in Los Angeles on Thursday and United Artists and RKO Radio are preparing for similar meetings next week. With the conclusion of the Gaumont British and Columbia sessions, opening June 25th and 26th, the pre-season convention period will have ended.

Product plans, announced and tentative, are detailed on page 59.

Rebuff to Minskys

A second jolt was given the Minsky Brothers of burlesque when New York's License Commissioner, Paul Moss, this week refused to grant them a license to operate a motion picture and "all-Negro revue" theatre, on the grounds that they "cannot be trusted" with public morals.

Sex in theatricals is again in the headlines, on page 17.

In the Mandarin

James Howe, only Chinese cameraman in Hollywood, learned from a visit by T. J. Hoyt, Chinese exhibitor, that the Nanking Government will seek to effect a united China, eliminating the scores of different dialects, by the wholesale production of talkers in Mandarin only.

Hollywood technicians are being sought in large numbers to travel to China to work under the plan, as reported on page 61.

Equity Regime Wins

Frank Gillmore was elected president of Actors Equity Association in New York this week for his fourth term. The election culminated a bitter fight during which Mr. Gillmore was opposed by an independent faction and a Progressive Committee. Burgess Meredith, new to Hollywood but a firm stellar fixture on Broadway, received the highest number of votes in the race for councillors.

The details of the election are found on page 66.

More Nuisance Taxes

The Doughton Bill, extending the present federal admission and other socalled nuisance taxes for another two years, received a favorable vote from the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives in Washington as exhibitors prepared to resist the measure. Taxation or other legislative matters in Connecticut, Idaho, Minnesota, Ohio, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Missouri, Kansas and in Pennsylvania also attracted the attention of the industry.

Details of the country's present legislative developments are found in the story on page 64.

Problem in Japan

Foreign distributors in Japan are becoming nervous over the possibility of application of the governmental control threatened for a long time. Contributing to that uneasiness is a change in censorship fees which doubles the assessment against foreign product while domestic films in certain classifications are exempted from the tax.

The reasons for distributors' crossing of fingers in Tokyo are gone into at greater length in the article on page 40.

The Open Door

Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures, returned to New York from his first trip to Europe this week and reported that his company was ready to open its doors to any English producers who could produce "quality" pictures for world-wide distribution. He also commented on several other aspects of his trip and recommended that other company executives also visit Europe more clearly to understand the foreign market and conditions.

Details of the interview of Mr. Balaban on his return are found on page 42.

Selznick's Offer

David O. Selznick, head of Selznick-International Pictures, has been made an offer to become a third owner of United Artists with Samuel Goldwyn and Alexander Korda, reports to New York from Hollywood said on Tuesday. It is not expected that the producer will accept the offer, however, the reports added.

Mr. Selznick would not offer any comment on the deal to be made following the completion of his last four pictures for release through United Artists channels, but it is known in Hollywood that both Twentieth Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn Mayer have offered him releasing deals. Mr. Selznick is also considering the establishment of his own releasing system but his plans for the future in this direction are indefinite, additional reports have it.

Doyle Resigns

Stuart F. Doyle, managing director of Greater Union Theatres, Ltd., in Australia, tendered his resignation this week to the board of directors after what was said to have been a disagreement of policy between Mr. Doyle and the members of the board. Mr. Doyle had been with the circuit, and its 29 subsidiary companies, for the past 30 years.

Details of the story are found on page 53.

Dividend

The board of directors of Twentieth Century-Fox on Wednesday declared a dividend of 37½ cents a share for the second quarter of 1937 on outstanding preferred stock, payable June 30, 1937 to stockholders of record at the close of business June 21st. The board also declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on the outstanding common stock payable on the same date.

Sam Katz's Contract

The validity of executives' employment contracts in the state of New York was established this week as Sam Katz won his long fight against Paramount for $265,498 he claimed was due him because he was wrongfully discharged and that a portion of his contract with the company was therefore unexpired.

The story is on page 66.

Seek Tax Compromise

With practically all legal resources that might be used to contest the application of the New York City two per cent sales tax to film rentals now virtually closed, the distributors are now reported concentrating their efforts on working out a compromise with the city comptroller's office which would reduce or relieve them of the penalties and interests which may be levied in connection with the sales tax assessments.

The 90-day period allowed for the appeal to the United States supreme court from the New York court of appeals decision, which found rentals to be subject to the tax, expires this week. The supreme court has already adjourned for the summer and the distribution companies have made no preparations for such an appeal, in any event.

The only other legal recourse open to the distributors, a rehearing of the case by the court of appeals, has never been seriously considered because the court's opinion in the United Artists test case was a unanimous one.

The liability of distributors on the sales tax for the two years ended last January 1 was recently estimated by the city officials at $1,650,000 on the basis of audits of the books of New York exchanges completed to date. Negotiations with the city for a compromise on the interest and penalties liability are now in progress.

Roxy Expectations

Action in the United States district court in New York this week indicated that the months of litigation over the Roxy Theatre Corporation, now in the midst of reorganization, are ended and that Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation will take over the theatre on August 1. The present operating executives of the theatre are expected to remain in their present posts and National Theatres will probably become the parent operating company when Twentieth Century-Fox takes command.

See page 63.

RKO Plan Delay

The possibility of any RKO reorganization plan being adjudicated before the fall appeared unlikely in New York this week as Special Master George W. Alger told all parties to the reorganization that he planned to study all testimony when it was finally in, that he would then call additional hearings and that by the time his findings are reported to the federal court Judge Bondy will be in Europe. The judge is not expected to return before late in September.

RKO reorganization developments of this week are found on page 44.

AT an open house for the dedication of Monogram's New York exchange were Joe Felder, New York manager; Adam Adams, Paramount, Newark; Ed A. Golden, sales manager, and Sam Rinzler of the Randforce circuit.

Will H. Hays, Jr., 21 years old and a graduate this week of Wabash, will carry on a family tradition in the law. His father, likewise capped and gowned, is prouder than he is of his high college credits.

Jean Harlow, née Harlean Carpentier, whose film career was eulogized for columns in the daily press this week following her sudden death of uremic poisoning on Monday, was born in Kansas City, Mo., on March 3, 1911, and educated variously in that city and Hollywood. She played bits on the Fox and Paramount lots until she was noticed by Hal Roach who offered her two-reel comedy parts. As "Helen" in Howard Hughes' "Hell's Angels" she achieved fame which has not dimmed in the intervening six years. One of MGM's most valued and most popular stars, she did not interrupt her work in "Saratoga" until the illness to which she succumbed was far advanced.

THAT members of a newly formed cinema club in Havana, Cuba, are experienced in attaining comfort in spite of heat is attested by J. D. Rapoport, Paramount manager for the island, who is shown in the immediate background with his back to the camera. Among others present are Heliodoro Garcia of the Nacional theatre, Perdices, and editor of Cinema; Francisco Yague, adjutant to Colonel Batista; Pepe Alvarez, Mongo Guinart, Manolo Alvarez, Panchito Marquetti, distributors; Edward O'Connor of Metro; and Bert Riceman of RKO.

Reginald Armour, far eastern general manager for RKO, arrived in New York this week bound for the annual convention, accompanied by Tinsing, his Number One boy and personal bodyguard. Tinsing is a Himalayan.

Charlie Chaplin uses his yacht "Panacea" for conferences on his next picture, "Regency", to be released in the fall. The ship has accommodations for eight and a crew of two sailors, "friends of Mr. Chaplin selected for their companionship as well as efficiency", according to an advertising agency's publicity.

Walter Hinks, manager of the New Alex Cinema, Paisley, Scotland, was presented with a silver shield by William R. Booth, Columbia branch manager, for the best exploitation campaign on "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town". Others shown are Bailie Webster; the manager's father, J. C. Hinks; and J. Wallale of Columbia.

Tommy Kelly, of New York's East Bronx, will be introduced to the screen as "Tom Sawyer" in David O. Selznick's production of Mark Twain's story of boyhood. His father, Michael A. Kelly, was on relief when Mr. Selznick chose the boy from among 25,000 children in every section of the country. H. C. Potter will direct the picture for which the screen play was written by John V. A. Weaver.

Ann Sothern engages in serious converse with Lee Marcus, RKO producer, on the studio set of "There Goes My Girl", forthcoming picture in which Miss Sothern and Gene Raymond have the leading roles. The producer of this picture, however, is William Sistrom, while the direction is by Ben Holmes.

EXHIBITOR PLAINTS AND U. S. BEHIND INQUIRY BILL

Two-Year Campaign Against 'Big Business' and Justice Department's 'Trust-Busting' Ambitions Prompt Dies Resolution

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

The strong antipathy of the agricultural South and Midwest toward "big business," steamed up by an unremitting campaign over two years against the large film interests by various independent exhibitors and independent exhibitor organizations, are the reasons given in Washington for the introduction by Martin Dies, Representative from Texas, of a resolution calling for a fantastically sweeping investigation of every conceivable phase of motion pictures. The "trust-busting" ambitions of the Justice Department also figure.

The resolution is now pending before the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives, of which Congressman Dies is a member, and where, it is understood, consideration is being given to the feasibility and advisability of adding it to the Connery resolution calling for an investigation of the radio broadcasting business. The idea would be to have the Federal Communications Commission conduct the two probes at one time. Repreesntative Dies' measure now calls for the creation of a special board to handle the film probe proposed by him.

While Congressional supporters of the Dies measure—principally the sponsoring Congressman—assert that the resolution is "extremely fair" because it calls for a thorough investigation of the activities of the independent exhibitors and other independent interests as well as those of the large producer-distributors, the general impression in the Capital is that, once the investigation has been approved by Congress—if and when—independent exhibitor activities will in all probability be lost sight of and the whole probe directed at the large, or so-called "major" interests.

Since Congressman Dies desires that members of the investigating committee provided for in his bill will be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the makeup of the group will probably serve to indicate just how friendly, or otherwise, the Administration is toward the motion picture business. A number of members of the House who are avowedly antagonistic to the organized motion picture industry will, it is understood, seek to be named to the probing committee.

AUTHOR OF CONGRESS FILM INQUIRY MEASURE

MARTIN DIES, Democrat, Congressman from the Second Congressional District in Texas, a member of the House Rules Committee, now proposes to probe virtually every phase of motion pictures—activities of both the "big" interests and independents. Not yet 36 years of age, Congressman Dies is one of the youngest members in Congress. He is a lawyer at Marshall, Texas, where he started practising at only 19, settling at Orange, Texas, two years later, to become the senior member of the law firm of Dies, Stephenson & Dies. He has been serving in Congress since 1931, taking his seat when he had reached his majority. He lectures, too, at East Texas Law School, studied at Wesley College, Greenville, Tex., received an LL.B. degree at the University of Texas and continued schooling at National University in Washington. The Congressman has two children, Martin and Robert, and belongs to the Church of Christian Disciples.

Some 13 specific subjects for investigation are listed in the Dies resolution, placing the federal microscope on monopolies; "cut-throat" competition; unfair trade practices; employees' wages, working hours and working conditions; activities of exhibitor, producer and distributor organizations "to promote legislation, prevent competition or to monopolize"; amount spent by film organizations for "propaganda" or lobbying purposes; producer-distributor circuit interests; uniform exhibition contracts, allocation of product, zoning and clearance, block booking and blind selling; theatre admission price "wars"; regulation of admission prices by distributors; relations between producers and distributors and sound equipment, music publishing and trailer companies; percentage playing, designated playdates and other similar trade practices; status of producers in "stabilizing" the industry, and, what legislation, if any, is needed to correct abuses in the industry and to restore fair-competition conditions, if it is found such conditions do not exist

Justice Department Interested

Added to the antipathy of the agricultural sections toward "big business" and the continual protests of independents against the majors, there lies behind the bill's introduction the "trust-busting" aims of the United States Department of Justice.

The Department, however, denied only the other day the oft-repeated Broadway rumors that the Department itself was contemplating immediate action against major companies on anti-trust charges.

Attorney General Cummings was asked about statements of his department's Joseph B. Keenan in California regarding the possible need of criminal action to rid the film industry of its alleged "evil," but made no comment other than to point out that the anti-trust division is in charge of Robert Jackson. Other officials of the Department explained that there are a number of complaints pending involving film companies, some of which are several years old and date back to 1932, apparently having been revised after the death of NRA.

However, it was said, several Department of Justice men are kept busy at all times on picture matters and there was no great increase of government activity nor any intention to undertake a crusade against the industry in the courts.

Deny Crusade Against "Big Business"

Despite the repeated denials of United States Attorney General Cummings that his department plans any crusades against "big business," the impression persists in Washington that the Administration has a well defined program for destroying the domination exercised over many industries by a very few large units. This has been indicated by the suits against the aluminum and oil industries and the consideration of prosecutions in the copper, steel and cement industries, which are said to be before the Justice Department because of the filing of identical bids on Government contracts and the constant stream of reports of action against film companies.

Thus, Capital observers say, proponents of the motion picture investigation via the Dies Bill can figure that the Administration, if it does not actively support them, will not oppose their plans.

Leaders of the independent exhibitor groups have not been slow to take advantage of the situation to strengthen their attacks upon the integrated companies in the picture industry, likewise the independents in the oil industry, where a very similar situation exists, with producers engaged in distribution and retailing. Members of the present Congress, ever since the beginning of the session, are understood to have been receiving a steady flow of communications regarding conditions in both industries, and every move made by the large companies which is felt to be adverse to the interests of the independents is immediately reported to Congress.

Thus, for some time, it is said, there has been building up a feeling among members of Congress that conditions in the film business may warrant study. The first step toward translating this feeling into action was taken last March by Representative Sam Hobbs, of Alabama, with his introduction of a resolution for a motion picture investigation openly and solely directed at the MPPDA (the Hays organization).

That resolution was felt to be too openly an attack upon the major interests in the film industry and representations were made that it would have to be "softened down" if the approval of the House was to be secured. The Dies resolution, so written as to permit inquiry into activities of all interests in the industry, was the logical answer, according to Capital observers.

In Congress and at the Department of Justice the view is held that industries which are now under fire have brought their situation upon themselves.

Jackson Explains

The Justice Department's viewpoint was candidly explained the other day by Assistant Attorney General Robert Jackson, in charge of the antitrust division, in an address before the Georgia Bar Association at Sea Island, Ga.

"Government competition, 'yardstick' enterprises, Government ownership or operation and drastic types of regulation and 'death sentences' are the products of disappointment over the non-enforcement of the laws governing rates, commercial practices and restraints of trade," he asserted, calling upon the business men of the country to determine finally the policy they want the Government to adopt with respect to industrial monopoly.

Outlining the court history of the various antitrust acts, showing how they have gradually been rendered impotent, he declared that "a half century of experience has been so inconclusive and uninstructive that business today does not know what policy it wants the Government to pursue.

"A part of the business world vigorously demands laws to protect, preserve and extend competition," he said. "Another part complains of the effects of too vigorous competition which it is the purpose of our laws to maintain. Most men who come to the Department of Justice, complaining of someone else's price-fixing, implore us to tell them how to 'stabilize' their own industry, which is a polite term for restraining of competition that they find difficult to meet. Business men disagree violently whether it is too much competition, or too little competition, that causes most evils in business," he declared.

Two major necessities in the development of workable antitrust laws. Mr. Jackson pointed out, are modification of the patent laws, which make monopoly possible, and a new view by the courts of the rights of "big business."

SUIT TO HALT TAX IS WATCHED BY THEATRES

Theatre interests in Pennsylvania are watching closely the developments in the litigation begun this week by the American Stores Company to test the constitutionality of the new Pennsylvania law imposing a tax on theatres and chain stores in the state. The measure was signed this week by Governor Earle at Harrisburg. The equity suit was filed against John B. Kelly, State Secretary of Revenue, in the Dauphin County court.

The company claims it had 1,743 retail stores in more than 450 communities in the state on June 1, and claims that if the "store and theatre tax act" is sustained it will be compelled to reduce the number of its stores to less than 1,000. The action seeks to enjoin the secretary of revenue from attempting to enforce the act, which taxes theatres and chain stores on a graduated scale ranging from $1 for a single unit of the chain up to $500 when 500 theatres or stores are owned by one organization in the state.

"If American business were wise, it would agree that fair enforcement of a policy against monopoly is all to the good," he said. "American people will not permanently tolerate monopoly. Every business man knows that, for he is himself against every monopoly except his own. Anti-trust complaints originate almost entirely with business men against business men. Yet business as a whole has been plunging headlong down the road that leads to Government control. Merger, consolidation, concentration and crushing of small competitors goes on apace. Complaining bitterly of Government interference and 'regimentation,' they drive in a direction that leaves no alternative.

"The National Recovery Act has been the source of great controversy. The fact that is frequently overlooked is that NRA would never have been attempted, nor would any necessity for it have become apparent had the milder and more moderate remedies against business abuses been allowed by the courts to function. Its dramatic decapitation by the Supreme Court was not a new chapter in the history of trade regulation. It was a repetition of what had happened, in substance, to the Sherman Act, the Clayton Act and the Federal Trade Commission Act; only they were smothered with restrictive interpretations, while the NRA was given a more merciful and immediate death."

On the other hand, the motion picture industry's own attempts at effecting a trade practice "reform" program of its own now seem destined for postponement for at least another year, as a result of the recent advices from Washington that no trade practice legislation will be introduced during the present session of Congress.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America had declared that it was abandoning its efforts to obtain the adoption by distributors of its ten-point trade practice program, in the belief that an Administration program for all industry would be introduced and enacted before Congress adjourns this summer. The MPTOA explained that local conciliation boards, which are proposed in the MPTOA's program for adjudicating local disputes among exhibitors and between exhibitors and exchanges, and on which seven of the MPTOA's ten points are dependent, would be superseded, almost, as soon as they could be organized, by Government boards set up to administer new trade practice codes for industry.

Despite the fact that informed Washington opinion now holds that the Administration will not launch trade practice legislation, a draft of which is said to be virtually completed, until the 1938 session of Congress, it is problematical whether the MPTOA will again proceed with its program.

Failure to introduce the new trade practices legislation at this session of Congress is attributed to the belief of some Administration officials that the wage-and-hour measure should the effects of the wage-and-hour legislation be enacted and its operation studied first. When the effects of the wage-and-hour legislation have become apparent, any defects which may develop could be corrected by provisions added to the trade practice program for industries in interstate commerce, it was pointed out. The latter would follow the same constitutional principles as the pending labor legislation does, and the prior judicial determination of the wage-and-hour measure would also serve as a guide for the fair trade practice legislation in its final form, it is said.

The contemplated trade practice program would propose that the United States Commerce Department meet with representatives of individual industries to draft fair trade codes. Code provisions could not be dictated by the department, but any proposals regarded as being against the public interest could be vetoed by it. The Federal Trade Commission would be empowered to enforce the agreements through the issuance of cease and desist orders.

Separation of the wage-and-hour measure from the fair trade practice program is also believed to have been decided by an Administration study of NRA experience which is said to have shown that the Recovery Administration suffered from too broad and too diversified a field of operation.

ITOA Outing July 21

An all-industry outing, sponsored by the Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York, has been set for July 21 at Bear Mountain. Those attending will sail up the Hudson River on a chartered boat, with lunch served on board. A schedule of games is now being arranged, after which dinner will be served at the park.

NAZIS CONTRADICT FRENCH, CLAIM CONTROL OF EUROPE'S FILM CONGRESS

French Attempts to Induce U.S. and England to Attend Paris Film Convention Is Weakened by Official Nazi Statement

The Nazis now surprisingly make the flat statement that Germany still is very much in control of Europe's International Film Chamber and also the International Film Congress, to be held July 5th to 9th, in Paris, despite the assertion of a few days ago by the French film industry that England and America need no longer boycott the Congress because Germany would be in control.

Because the next International Film Congress, in July, is to be held in Paris, for the first time, under purported French sponsorship, the French Cinema Confederation has appeared to be extreme anxious to obtain official representation from and the support of the American and British motion picture industries. The French trade, therefore, through the French Cinema Confederation, seems to be engaging in a campaign to belittle the German-Italian-Japanese anti-Hollywood film bloc, realizing that both London and Hollywood are aware that the Nazis have controlled the previous International Congresses and the International Film Chamber sponsoring those conventions.

Pierre Autré, Motion Picture Herald correspondent in Paris, reported last week (page 12, June 5th issue) that the French now are pointing out, both to the United States and to England, that the Congress will be held this year in Paris, and not Berlin.

"So, we hope that the United States and England will understand that Berlin is not at all leading the Chamber," asserted an official of the French Confederation.

Now, however, the German motion picture industry—completely controlled by Adolph Hitler's government—officially declares that the Congress in Paris will be held "under German chairmanship," that a discussion of the questions to be dealt with at the Congress has already been held in Berlin, that the Congress will engage in a fight "with all means at hand" against anti-Nazi films, and that Germany will, at the Congress, propose an exchange of theatre owners between one country and another so that "such a sojourn of study abroad would develop in the growing generation a broader point of view and greater understanding of the international relationships."

Americans Wary

Reporting last week on the strategy of the French, by belittling Germany's control over the Congress and the International Film Chamber, and by denying the existence of the Nazis' "ideological bloc" of Germany-Italy-Japan against Hollywood films, Motion Picture Herald quoted an official spokesman for the American industry as charging that "Germany and her allies in the international film bloc aim to 'gang up' on the American film business, despite anything the French may say to the contrary in attempts by the French to get America to participate in the International Chamber or International Congress."

NAZIS HONOR FILM WORK OF JANNINGS

Emil Jannings, now styled: "State Actor" by the Nazis, has been awarded the German Government film prize for 1937 for his Tobis-Cinema production of "Der Herrscher" (The Master).

Dr. Joseph Goebbels, Reich-Minister for Public Enlightenment and Propaganda, now the dictator over all German film business, declared at the award presentation that Mr. Jannings was "to be considered as the very pioneer who has been opening new ways for the German film art", presumably under the Nazis' new order of using the film for strict German propaganda purposes.

Mr. Jannings, Brooklyn (N. Y.) born, was induced by Ernst Lubitsch to enter motion pictures, in Germany, in 1915, and after several years with Germany's Ufa-Film, making "Passion" and "Variety", as the most noted of several, he joined Paramount, starred in about six, returned to Germany, in 1934, and has since continued there.

This suspicion now receives verification, unintentionally, from Dr. Fritz Olimsky, editor of "Foreign Film News," government pamphlet published officially by "The German Film Industry," in Berlin. Inferring that it is Germany's intentions to supplant the commercial motion picture with the so-called "cultural" (propaganda) pictures, and calling Germany "the greatest film country in Europe," Dr. Olimsky traces the Nazis' participation in and domination over the International Film Chamber as follows:

"By its very nature, cinema activity rapidly outgrows the confines of the country in which it begins. At a very early time in the history of the cinema producers began making films which were so expensive that the country of origin alone could not possibly cover costs, and since the first of these pictures was exported international cinema relationships have steadily expanded and been elaborated in detail. Whereas at first only the purely commercial aspect was taken into consideration and the film was treated merely as an export on a par with any other article, this cooperation between the various countries has in the past few years been carried out with more and more emphasis on its cultural aspects. It is now everywhere realized that the film—picture-play as well as cultural film—is peculiarly suited to helping the nations get acquainted with one another. More and more countries are beginning to view as one of the most important functions of the international exchange of films the awakening of understanding for the national character of the country of origin, so that the cinema can make its contribution to bringing about a more friendly atmosphere among the nations. This is an incomparably more significant function than that formerly fulfilled by the purely commercial exportation of films.

"As the greatest film country of Europe, Germany recognized the value of international cooperation in this field at a very early stage, and it is by no means a coincidence that it was at the Berlin International Film Congress in 1935 that the idea of the creation of an International Film Chamber was born. In August of the same year the by-laws of the International Film Chamber were agreed upon in Venice, and in November, 1935, it was definitely constituted in Paris. Since that date, the practical work, and particularly that of the commission on the rights of authorship, has already had gratifying positive results. In the matter of facilitating the international exchange of films and in all other questions, which are of equal interest for film-producing countries and for consuming countries without a production of their own, further fruitful work is expected to be accomplished at the International Film Congress which is to be held in Paris, under German chairmanship, from July 5th to 10th

"No less important is the work of the International organization of film theatre owners (Fédération Internationale des Associations de Cinémas), the presidency of which, like that of the International Film Chamber, is at present in the hands of Germany. Among other things this federation has performed important work by its thoroughgoing investigations of the situation of the film theatres in the various member countries; special attention has been given to the questions of the amusement tax, the double feature system, the licensing of film theatres, the competition now facing film theatres from the narrow-gauge film, etc. There took place recently in Berlin a preliminary consideration of the questions to be dealt with at the International Film Congress in Paris; it was suggested, for example, that film theatre owners should organize an exchange of their sons from country to country in the expectation that such a sojourn of study abroad would develop in the growing generation a broader point of view and greater understanding of the international relations.

"No less active has been the German participation in the international organization of the film press (Fédération Internationale de la Presse Cinématographique), whose work embraces especially the professional questions of film journalism, and whose resolution against agitating films passed at the Berlin Film Congress in 1935 made a general sensation at the time. In this way the members of the federation engaged to fight with all means at hand against films calculated to stir up the peoples against one another, and only a few days ago this matter again became acute when there appeared in Paris an anti-German propaganda film called "Marthe Richard." At the instigation of the German Section of the federation, the President of the Fipresci, Jean Chataigner, addressed a written protest to French Foreign Minister Delbos; moreover, the French section of the Fipresci has passed a vigorous resolution against the agitating film which has appeared in its country; finally, this case will be dealt with at the Fipresci Congress to be held in Paris in July. This is a remarkable example of the international solidarity of a profession."

LEADERS OF STRIKING UNIONS ARE DEPOSED; SETTLEMENTS REJECTED

Jurisdictional Dispute with IATSE Now Comes Into Sharp Focus as Federated Crafts' Basic Grievance at Studios

The underlying jurisdictional dispute between Hollywood's striking unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees this week came into sharp focus as Federated Motion Picture Crafts' basic grievance and as the reason behind the Gilbert and Sullivan motif which newspaper reports of the negotiations assumed.

The strikers twice repudiated settlements approved by their own officers and negotiated by the vice-president of their International Brotherhood because the IATSE entered into the agreement, ordered the International officer to cease further efforts in their behalf, accepted the resignation of the president of Federated Crafts, and said they themselves would negotiate any settlement.

The unions then sent copies of a proposed settlement to every producer which reiterated their willingness to return to work upon a written guarantee of a 100 per cent union shop and discharge of strikebreakers.

The threat of CIO affiliation by the strikers remained in the background.

The IATSE gained further strength throughout the nation as distributor representatives met with delegations from newly organized exchange unions in key cities of the east, midwest and south to negotiate wage and hour agreements.

The three Hollywood locals of the International Brotherhood of Painters and Paperhangers, strongest unit in Federated Crafts and the key group in the strike, on Monday separately voted down a strike settlement proposed by Joseph Clarke, international vice-president of the Brotherhood. The proposal was the same as that rejected last week by the strikers by a vote of 640 to 276 except that it was in writing. Under it George Browne, IATSE president, agreed to guarantee to makeup men that strikebreakers doing makeup work and drafting would be removed from the studios. The makeup men would go over to IATSE jurisdiction.

Following this second rejection of the settlement agreed upon by Mr. Clarke and Mr. Browne the strikers, in an action unprecedented in labor history in the motion picture industry, passed a resolution ordering Mr. Clarke to refrain from further efforts for a settlement and adding that they themselves would negotiate any settlement.

Rejection of the agreement last week was accompanied by indications that it would have been acceptable if the guarantee had been put in writing. At the meeting this week at which even the written guarantee was rejected the agreement met with denunciation from strikers and their leaders.

William Cullen's resignation as head of Federated Crafts was accepted also on Monday at a meeting of the organization's executive committee. The charge that he exceeded his authority in asking Mr. Clarke to settle the strike was said to have resulted in the request for his resignation.

STATES REENFORCE LABOR LEGISLATION

A labor relations act designed to cover purely intrastate business, a duplicate of the federal Wagner Act, has been passed by both houses of the Massachusetts legislature with an amendment declaring sit-down strikes illegal. An amendment to force labor unions to incorporate was defeated.

Labor organizers and business agents of unions would be licensed by the state under provisions of a bill introduced in the Wisconsin legislature.

With the Missouri legislature nearing adjournment, a bill providing for minimum wages and hours for women and children in industry was lost, a senate committee having failed to get a quorum on its last attempt to secure action on the proposal.

The strikers were reported to be hard hit by the lack of money and many have applied for relief. The longshoremen's and sailors' unions, both of which offered aid early in the strike, this week were said to be supplying funds.

Fitzgerald Quits

Edward Fitzgerald, Department of Labor conciliator, who helped to arrange the agreement between Mr. Clarke and Mr. Browne, last Saturday withdrew from the situation. As far as he was concerned, he said, the strike was settled when Mr. Clarke signed the agreement giving the IATSE the makeup men and draftsmen with the painters and scenic artists reentering the basic pact.

Federated Crafts last Friday issued a strike call against 28 independent studios and said 1,000 of its members who are painters, hairdressers, makeup artists and draftsmen would leave their jobs. Strike committee members said the call was an answer to an ultimatum issued the day before by Mr. Browne calling upon employees in these crafts to repudiate their affiliation with Federated Crafts and become members in good standing of the IATSE.

Producers who have signed the Screen Actors' Guild contract on Monday named Edward J. Mannix, chairman; Henry Herzbrun, B. P. Schulberg, Phil Krasne and Scott R. Dunlap as a committee to represent them in the setting up of further details of the agreement. The producers have agreed that each signatory to the contract will deal separately on problems arising on their own lots but will work in cooperation with the general committee. The committee to represent the independents in the negotiations includes I. E. Chadwicke, Maurice Conn, Sam Katzman and C. C. Burr.

The Screen Writers Guild of the Authors League of America, revived at a meeting last week at which speakers urged members to press for negotiations under the Wagner Labor Relations Act and attacked the Screen Playwrights' Code, was to elect officers this week. Wells Root was chairman of the nominating committee.

Exchange Scales Discussed

Home office executives of distributing companies this week were to meet with representatives of newly organized exchange unions from eight or nine key cities following tentative agreements concluded late last week with groups from Buffalo, New Haven, Washington, Cleveland and Pittsburgh. Union delegates from as far west as Kansas City, Mo., and as far south as New Orleans have made requests for conferences.

The distributors are considering the establishment of a central committee to negotiate with unions in the west in order to expedite matters.

Under the terms of the temporary agreements which will be replaced by two-year contracts, a minimum working schedule of 40 hours a week and wage scales have been agreed. All other details are now being worked out.

The percentage of increases varies in each situation and with each company. There has been no uniform wage scale up to now and the larger companies are understood to have been paying employees more than the others. Under the set wage scale to be adopted with the signing of the contracts the increases thus will be larger for the smaller companies.

Shippers, porters and ad sales clerks are the only service employees included in the contracts being negotiated. These are retroactive to the date when negotiations were started.

Although there have been minor arguments at the meetings, company officials said the negotiations have been amicable. A representative of the IATSE has been attending all conferences.

Truce in Milwaukee

A temporary truce has been signed by the Building Service Employees' union, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, and the Aragon, Milwaukee and National theatres, Milwaukee neighborhood houses, in the labor dispute which resulted in retaliatory picketing by the United Theatre Workers' Union, a CIO group, at the Tower, Grace, Savoy, Garfield and Egyptian theatres, all circuit controlled. The state labor board is seeking a permanent settlement of the dispute.

Charles O. Smith, secretary of the Fort Wayne local of the Motion Picture Theatre Operators' Union; Leo K. Smith, member of the Union, and Fred C. Blacker, of the Kokomo, Ind., local of the union, who had been held under bond as fugitives in connection with New York City theatre bombings, were released this week by Judge William H. Schannen when New York officers failed to appear with extradition papers.

Degree for Van Schmus

An honorary degree of Doctor of Humanities was conferred by Washington and Jefferson College on W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Music Hall in New York, during the school's 136th commencement exercises at Washington, Pa., over last weekend. The degree recognized the recipient's "accomplishmnts in the cultural world and his leadership in the art of fine entertainment."

Loew's Promotes Managers

Charles C. Moskowitz, in charge of the Metropolitan theatres for Loew's, Inc., in New York, on Monday promoted Seymour Mayer, manager of the Pitkin in Brooklyn, and Maurice Siedlitz, east side manager, to district managers to divide between themselves the duties handled by the late Carl Levi. Al Weiss, formerly at the Oriental in Brooklyn, will manage the Pitkin.

NEW YORK REFUSES PERMISSION TO MINSKYS TO ENTER FILM BUSINESS

License Commissioner Moss Charges That the Brothers of Burlesque "Cannot Be Trusted" with Public Morals

Sex in theatricals is again in the headlines.

New York City has refused to grant to Minsky Brothers—the burlesque and "strip-tease" Minskys—a permit to operate on Broadway a combination motion picture and "all-Negro revue" theatre, on the grounds that Morton and Herbert K. Minsky "cannot be trusted" with public morals in show business. The Minskys immediately cried "libel" and "violation of Constitutional rights," and threatened an assortment of suits.

So reported the New York press this week, almost unanimously.

Elsewhere, "Idiot's Delight" and "Tobacco Road," of the stage, and the motion pictures "Damaged Lives" and "Damaged Goods," "Ecstasy" and "The Vice Racket" were subjects of censorial attention.

Broadway's latest Minsky jolt, by Paul Moss, New York Commissioner of Licenses, follows Mr. Moss's closing of Minsky and all other burlesque theatres, in April, after repeated indecency charges had been hurled from press and pulpit, particularly against the Gotham burlesque theatre on 125th Street, operated by the Minskys' brother, Abraham. The Gotham was fined $500.

Now Morton and Herbert K., out of show business since the Moss edict against "Minsky-burlesque", are described in the news headlines as trying to return to Broadway with their proposed motion picture and Negro-revue program for their Oriental theatre. But Commissioner Moss has ruled, the press reports, that "the name Minsky has become associated in the public mind with indecent burlesque shows, and if this theatre were licensed, it would again be appealing to the lowest instincts of its patrons. The long record of the applicant corporation makes it unworthy of further consideration."

Application for the license was made in the name of Mormen Theatres, Inc., which, Mr. Moss pointed out, was a transposition of Menmor Theatres, former operators of the Minsky Oriental.

In his decision following a hearing, Commissioner Moss is quoted in the press as saying:

"The officers (of Mormen Theatres) are the same with one exception, and the Minsky Brothers own 50 per cent of the stock. They have been in the burlesque business for a number of years, during which time the name 'Minsky' has become associated in the public mind with indecent shows.

"They had previously agreed in writing to abide by the rules and regulations of the License Department, but violated them and put on a type of entertainment which aroused great public indignation and resulted in my refusal to renew the then-existing license.

"Advance advertising copy shown to me indicates that the new enterprise would not in any way be changed from the old.

"The long record of defiance of public opinion and public decency in this city by those in control of the applicant corporation makes it unworthy of any further consideration.

"The applicant cannot be trusted with the license sought and to grant it would be dangerous to the morals and welfare of the community."

BISHOP VERSUS MAYOR IN CENSORSHIP DRIVE

Because Alfred Lunt of "Idiot's Delight" flatly refused to play in a censored version of the play as ordered by Mayor Dan Butler of Omaha, the mayor finally backed down a bit this week and lost much ground in his move to force a strict motion picture and legitimate play censorship.

Mr. Lunt, to prove he was not bluffing, ordered the scenery of the play removed from the Paramount theatre and the cast ready to leave town. After the mayor capitulated, the play played to a packed house at $2.65 top price.

Prestige of the socially-prominent Drama League of Omaha members, sponsors of the play, and alliance with the liberal side by Reverend G. Bromley Oxnam, Methodist Bishop of Omaha, also swayed the mayor. Bishop Oxnam, in a public statement, said the mayor's next campaign slogan should be:

"Every little damma should be taken from our drama."

"High Class" Show Promised

In making application, on May 5th, four days after Mr. Moss forced the closing of New York's 14 burlesque theatres by refusing to renew licenses, the Minskys asserted this week that they had definitely forsaken burlesque and were seeking a new license to present a "high-class" show.

Announcing his latest action, the Commissioner revealed that he had granted licenses for reopening to two other theatres which were once burlesque houses. These are the Fifth Avenue Theatre, at 1,187 Broadway, and the People's theatre, 199 Bowery. The Fifth Avenue theatre will operate only as a motion picture house, while the People's on the Bowery will present motion pictures and Italian dramas with an occasional billing of Italian vaudeville.

Minskys Irate

Moss' reputed statement, "The applicant cannot be trusted with the license sought and to grant it would be contrary to good order and public decency and would be dangerous to the morals and welfare of the community" was declared by the press to have aroused the Minsky brothers' ire.

They reputedly said they will seek a writ in Supreme Court to compel the Commissioner to issue a license, and that they are contemplating a libel suit against him for the foregoing statement, besides a $10,000 damage suit for the expenses incurred in preparing their new show. The Minskys asserted they have been rehearsing 60 Negroes for six weeks and 35 of these girls "will be forced back on relief if the show does not go on."

Burning at Commissioner Moss's charge that the name of Minsky has been too closely associated in the public mind with indecent burlesque and his added charge that their habit of breaking promises is too well known, the brothers called Mr. Moss's action arbitrary and unjustified, and said that their attorney, Samuel Phillips, had been instructed to write out a writ of mandamus, according to the newspaper accounts of the fight, which also quoted Morton Minsky as follows:

"We'll mach our private lives with the Commissioner's any day. Our constitutional rights have been violated. We are living in America, not under a dictatorship.

"Does the Commissioner think that the play, 'Behind Red Lights' is proper entertainment for every one? It is objectionable because it deals with prostitution."

The city had originally cancelled the Minsky burlesque licenses on Commissioner Moss's charges of lewd performances, wherein the so-called "strip tease" act was featured with women taking off their clothese on the stage to music.

Morton Minsky, however, in reputedly admitting the name Minsky was associated with burlesque, said this week that he and his brother now offer to remove both the name "Minsky" and the title "burlesque" from their Oriental theatre for which they seek a license.

Lowering of "Standards" Blamed

The case of the people versus the "strip-tease" type of burlesque was further explained this week by Commissioner Moss in an interview in the Daily Princetonian, Princeton University undergraduate newspaper, in which Mr. Moss charged that, basically, the fall of New York burlesque houses was due to "competition among themselves."

"Each house strove to increase its patronage by lowering the standards of its performance more and more until finally public sentiment called for some action," Mr. Moss explained. "Therefore, when their licenses came up for renewal I merely denied their applications.

"When Ziegfeld and George White were producing on Broadway, they put on shows which included talent and were beautiful. In 1929 the three burlesque houses in the city were putting on shows somewhat resembling Ziegfeld's. During the past eight years, however, the number of houses has increased to fourteen, concentrated in three sections of the city, and in this period each house began to make its show more risque than the one next door.

"What happened? The 'varicose alleys,' the ramps from the stage to the aisles of the theatres, came and went. They were fire hazards for one thing and added nothing whatsoever to the beauty of the show.

"Comedians with cruder and cruder jokes came. Pure strip teasers came, girls who are there to undress in front of the audience and nothing else. Finally, some of the theatres started giving out passes to children in the subways, near the schools and on the streets.

"If they hadn't had to undersell each other in quality of performance, they might still be open," Moss said.

Night Clubs Warned

The drive against "sex" in theatricals was further extended in New York when, after closing the burlesque houses and refusing permits for their reopening, the city moved into the night club field in and around Broadway, warning that they, too, must clean up their shows or lose their licenses. Deputy Police Commissioner John J. Sullivan, at a hearing in the Greenwich Street police station, said, "Shows bordering on the nude, glamorous photographs of nude women displayed outside the night clubs, double meaning dialogues of a suggestive tenor, and risque scenes will not be tolerated by the police department."

Burlesque producers in New York were reluctant to discuss reports that they were planning to appoint a "czar" to govern their business, and thereby seek to reopen their closed houses with shows of a different type. J. H. Herk, of the Gaiety theatre, said the report was premature, but indicated an announcement might be forthcoming shortly.

In Other Cities

Meanwhile, in Omaha, the ban which Mayor Dan Butler recently put on the play, "Idiot's Delight," and the picture, "Ecstasy," scheduled for Omaha theatres, has apparently stimulated officials in other cities to do likewise.

In Council Bluffs, Iowa, just across the line from Omaha, Mayor William Guilfoyle has announced he will appoint a committee to pass on "questionable" pictures and plays. The mayor pointed out that only plays and pictures about which there is a question will be brought before the board and that he wants no arbitrary opinions. However, decision of the board would be final.

Need for the committee arose last week when an "out-of-town" distributor asked permission to show "The Vice Racket," Mayor Guilfoyle explained.

In Iowa City, Iowa, Mayor Myron J. Walker denied Robert Griffith permission to allow a sound-truck ballyhoo for "The Vice Racket." The mayor also asked removal of signs on Griffith's Iowa theatre front which showed scenes in the "adult only" show which proposed to expose "unbelievable secrets."

In New York, Eureka Productions, Inc., was granted a permanent injunction by Justice Isidore Wasservogel in the supreme court against Metropolis Pictures and Martin J. Lewis, restraining the defendants from using the word "Ecstasy" in the title of the motion picture, "Ecstasy of Young Love."

Samuel Cummins, president of Eureka, announced at the same time that his "ecstasy"—sex-film—had just finished 18 weeks at the Warner Orpheum in Chicago and that it had been booked by the Essaness Circuit there to play 19 prints on a day-and-date basis.

Judge John Rine of the state district court in Omaha, however, ruled last Saturday that the picture, "Ecstasy," may not be shown in Nebraska on the ground that it violates the decency statutes of the state. He dissolved a previous temporary restraining order obtained by Mr. Cummins.

Judge Rine had signed the temporary order on May 29th restraining city officials of Omaha from interfering with the showing. The order was directed against Mayor Butler because it was he who had informed Ralph Goldberg, owner of the Town theatre, that "Ecstasy" would not be permitted there. Mr. Cummins had threatened legal action against Mayor Butler, in addition to the injunction suit in an attempt to force a showing of the picture at the Town.

Meanwhile, the Kansas censor board has passed "Damaged Goods," which is being released through Grand National exchanges, with the restriction that children under 12 must be accompanied by a parent. The Kansas City censors recently turned down several sex pictures, which were brought into the town after runs in Chicago and in the East. Most of these films, however, were "old-time productions which are being revived.

Philadelphia Censors Differ

Members of the State Censor Board in Philadelphia were split over "Damaged Goods" and Weldon Pictures' "Damaged Lives." The board studied both pictures for more than a week without rendering a decision. "These two pictures have caused the board more trouble than all the others we reviewed put together," Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, chairman, said. She said she was in favor of passing both of them but that she was opposed by the other two censors. The dissatisfaction between the board members may finally be called to the official attention of Governor Earle and settled by him.

In the meantime, the members of the board are awaiting an opinion of Attorney General Charles Margiotti on the legality of passing films with a proviso that children under 16 not be admitted. Mrs. Palmer declared she was told when the present board took office more than a year ago that this was illegal action in the state of Pennsylvania but she is demanding another opinion.

Special showing of "Damaged Lives" was held at the Erlanger Theatre two weeks ago. It was attended by the mayor and city officials and admittance was only on cards signed personally by the mayor.

Exhibitor Groups Set Meetings

Exhibitor organization activities this week centered around the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association, which plans a convention at Birmingham, Ala., June 27-29; the organization of Downtown Theatre Owners Association in Cleveland; the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association convention set for Topeka, June 22-23; the elections of Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest; denial of the reported affiliation of the Independent Theatre Owners of California with Allied States Exhibitors; the spring meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the Northwest at Spokane; a state meeting of Allied of New Jersey, Wednesday, and the formation of a new Ohio exhibitors' organization.

Cleveland downtown theatre managers formed Downtown Theatres Association to discuss common problems and to tighten the cooperation with downtown department stores. They are also seeking through street car transportation from the west side of town to the east side, now completed only by transferring. In lieu of a president, four chairmen have been named to alternate as presiding officer at the semi-monthly meetings. The four chairmen are Harry E. Long, Loew's division manager, Nat Holt, RKO Great Lakes division manager; Nat Wolf, Warner zone manager, and Bill Blair, manager of the Hanna, Cleveland's only legitimate dramatic theatre. Jess Fishman of Warners is secretary.

The possibilities of vaudeville as a boxoffice stimulant and a means of combatting double features and chance games will be one of the principal topics for discussion at the Kansas-Missouri meeting. Labor as well as taxes will also be discussed in detail and the problem of star broadcasts will be studied. John Stapel, president, will be in charge of the meetings. R. R. Biechele is secretary.

Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest unanimously elected Al Steffes of Minneapolis president this week, after a two-year lapse, at the annual meeting in Minneapolis. He succeeds E. L. Peasley of Stillwater, Minn., who takes the post of vice-president. Stanley D. Kane, executive secretary, was also given a vote of thanks in appreciation of the services he rendered the organization during the past two years.

In inducing Mr. Steffes to accept the presidency, the members, headed by Sol Lebedoff, Bennie Berger, Ben Friedman and W. R. Frank presented a plan designed to guarantee Mr. Steffes an annual budget of $18,000 to pay his salary and that of former Minnesota Supreme Court Justice John P. Devaney as associate counsel at an annual salary of $10,000. Mr. Steffes was given carte blanche on expenses up to $4,000 yearly.

Allied of Jersey Meets

Allied Theatres of New Jersey met at the Hotel Berkeley-Carteret, Asbury Park, this week and heard a report on the national organization's annual convention which was held last week in Milwaukee.

The reported affiliation of the Independent Theatre Owners of California with the national Allied group is "absolutely unfounded" so far as the I.T.O. of Northern California is concerned, Morgan Walsh, operator of some 20 theatres in that territory and president of the group, announced this week.

Southeastern Theatre Owners Association will hold its annual convention at Birmingham June 27th-29th.

Netco Golf Tournament

The Netco Theatres Company, Paramount subsidiary in upper New York state, with headquarters at Newburgh, will hold its first annual golf tournament on June 17 at the Central Valley Club. George Walsh and Eugene Levy are sponsoring the tournament.

National Screen Buys Property

National Screen Service has purchased a one-story building and adjacent vacant lot on Seymour Avenue and Santa Monica Boulevard in Hollywood and will move its present plant to the new location after the existing building is remodeled and a new one built.

CBS Stock Plan Ready

Columbia Broadcasting System announced this week that it is prepared to exchange the presently outstanding $5 par value shares for both Class A and B stock for the new $2.50 par value shares, on the basis of one old share for two new ones.

Protest Raid on Film

Mexican children have gone on a school strike with the approval of their parents at Vacaville, Cal., to protest against a raid by the Mayor and police department on a meeting Saturday night at which "Spain in Flames" was being shown to raise funds for "Friends of Lincoln Battalion." Four persons were arrested and the projection equipment seized.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE,

ON THE SCREEN

By HOWARD BARNES

"Captains Courageous"—Astor

"CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS," a screen drama adapted from Rudyard Kipling's novel of the same name by John Lee Mahin, Marc Connelly and Dale Van Every, directed by Victor Fleming and presented at the Astor Theater by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with the following cast:

Harvey	Freddie Bartholomew
Manuel	Spencer Tracy
Disko	Lionel Barrymore
Mr. Cheyne	Melvyn Douglas
Uncle Salters	Charley Grapewin
Dan	Mickey Rooney
"Long Jack"	John Carradine
Cushman	Oscar O'Shea
Priest	Jack La Rue
Dr. Finley	Walter Kingsford
Tyler	Donald Briggs
"Doc"	Sam McDaniels
Charles	Billie Burrud

"CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS" belongs with the screen's few masterpieces. In a season of spectacular and notable film offerings it stands pre-eminent. The Kipling classic has been shaped to a photoplay with such eloquence, authority and beauty that it is certain to become a classic in its new medium. Composed in fluent images, acted with sustained brilliance and freighted with an emotional intensity that becomes almost intolerable, the tale of a spoiled boy and a Portuguese fisherman has an epic sweep and power that is irresistible.

So surely has the novel been translated that it falls immutably into a motion-picture mold. The debt to its original may be great, but the film has completely pre-empted its source material in a work of art that begs no comparisons. The simple theme of Harvey's love and hero-worship for Manuel has been restated with supreme simplicity and dignity. It is neither a director's nor an actor's picture, but a perfect melding of all the screen's functions, resulting in a heart-shaking and memorable offering.

Courage went into its making. If you fall under the film's spell as I did, you will probably not be aware until it is over that there are no women in the cast. For that matter there is no need of romance or violence. From the moment that the pampered Harvey tumbles off a liner and is hauled into a dory by Manuel, the screen drama reaches to the heart of living and holds you rapt by its instancy. The opening and particularly the concluding sequence might have been foreshortened, I believe, but that is a matter of little import.

It would be easy to ascribe the enormous compulsion of the production to the consummate portrayals of Harvey and Manuel by Freddie Bartholomew and Spencer Tracy. In them the millionaire's son and the mystical, courageous fisherman come to such pulsing life that the tragedy of Manuel's death is transcending. At the same time they have had invaluable assistance. Victor Fleming has framed their actions in stirring sea passages and a commanding rhythm of sequences. Marc Connelly, John Lee Mahin and Dale Van Every have given them evocative and haunting speech.

Mr Fleming's direction is masterly. He has pinioned the personal narrative firmly against vivid backgrounds. The early atmosphere of ostentatious wealth that made Harvey a little bounder is executed in bold strokes. Life on a Gloucester fishing schooner off the Grand Banks is full of salt spray, straining sails, fish and boat tackle, and even the memorial services of the anticlimax are real and moving.

Freddie Bartholomew

The performance of Freddie Bartholomew dominates the production from start to finish as only a very great piece of acting can. With extraordinary assurance he gets inside the husk of his characterization, making the transition of Harvey from a mean brat to a gallant little fisherman's apprentice utterly persuasive. The manner in which he sustains the aching poignancy of the scenes after Manuel has been swept from the top rigging of the We're Here into the sea, and dies, smilingly refusing to let the lad know he has been crushed below the waist, is superb. He takes his place with the most distinguished of his elders as a superlative screen actor.

You may find Spencer Tracy's Portuguese accent a trifle startling at first, but once he takes the little chap he fished out of the sea in hand, he gives an impersonation that can only be called perfect. His Manuel is by turns grave, gay, volatile, serene and dauntless. Certainly there could have been no better choice for the role. Lionel Barrymore, as the wise old skipper of the We're Here, is splendidly restrained, and Melvyn Douglas, who has the difficult part of Harvey's too wealthy father, is a good foil for Bartholomew in the first and last sections.

The other players have small parts, but it is an index to the quality of "Captains Courageous" that they enact them with complete conviction.

By ROBERT GARLAND.

Here, supplanting "The Good Earth" at the Astor, is what must certainly turn out to be the prize picture of 1937. Of rare integrity, sustained emotional impact and captivating beauty, this free translation of Rudyard Kipling's "Captains Courageous" was a sensation last night on Broadway.

Once generally released, it will be a sensation everywhere. It cannot help but be. In a scenario in which Marc Connelly and a couple of other fellows had a hand, the Kipplingesque pattern is followed with high fidelity. Here is provided a dramatization of the spirit as well as the letter of the book.

The author, who had to die before Hollywood gave any convincing evidence of knowing he had ever been born, would admire the excellence of the dialogue, the smoothness of the progression, the pictorial magnificence of countless of the seascapes. And, whether boats or humans, he would applaud the perfection of the players.

In its on-screen aspect, "Captains Courageous" picks up the Poor Little Rich Boy in his father's mansion. Home from school on some sort of holiday, he is a liar and a cheat, a mischief-maker and a tattletale. At the same time, deep down beneath his unattractions, are a courage and a sensitivity gone disastrously astray.

When, on the befogged Grand Banks off Newfoundland, he falls overboard from an ocean liner, you at first feel that drowning is too good for him. Which, as a matter of report, it turns out to be. Soon, however, you are pleased that Manuel drags him into his fishing smack and takes him to the We're Here, becalmed in the mist nearby.

RESCUER AND RESCUED

And the crew of the good ship out of Gloucester, assisted by the dignity of labor and the majesty of the sea, proceed to make a Rich Little Poor Boy out of the Poor Little Rich Boy that used to be. From the captain, who is Lionel Barrymore, to the Mickey Rooney, who is his cabin boy and son, they get to work on him.

Especially the Spencer Tracy who, as Manuel, saved him from the perils of the deep and is too much like another fisherman called Peter of Galilee to cast him back again. Powerful in his simplicity, simple in his power, that Peter of Galilee would call this Manuel of Spencer Tracy friend. It is a memorable impersonation.

And now for some public word-eating! Word-eating in connection with young Freddie Bartholomew who, as the Poor Little Rich boy in course of reconstruction on the Grand Banks, is superb. Maybe it was Little Lord Fauntleroy himself, I didn't care for. And young David Copperfield in person. It just couldn't have been Freddie.

There's no need to hold the horses of your enthusiasm where this new arrival at the Astor is concerned. You couldn't over-praise "Captains Courageous" if you tried.

KORDA AND GOLDWYN WILL EXERCISE THEIR OPTION TO BUY U. A. CONTROL

British Producer and David Rose, for Samuel Goldwyn, Admit Deal Will Be Closed, As They Leave for London

United Artists is to pass from the hands of its remaining founders—Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Spencer Chaplin, into the control of Alexander Korda, a British producer, and Samuel Goldwyn, both presently partners also.

Mr. Korda and David Rose, vice president and financial advisor of Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., admitted to interviewers Wednesday morning as they were about to sail aboard the S. S. Queen Mary, for England, that the new Goldwyn-Korda combination would, within the required 90 days, exercise the option which they obtained a few days ago for the purchase of the Pickford-Chaplin-Fairbanks holdings in United Artists for $6,000,000.

Both Mr. Rose, for Samuel Goldwyn, and Mr. Korda asserted that arrangements had been set to finance their purchase, but both were adamant in their refusal to disclose the source of the money. Each are reputedly pledging an equal amount for the purchase, which will be made, and thereafter conducted on a share and share basis.

Backers Not Disclosed

One of Mr. Korda's immediate missions on his return to London will be a discussion of the deal and its financial aspects with "English interests." He would not disclose their identities, but he did deny that they included the Prudential Assurance Company of England.

In view of the comparative recentness of the option purchase, and the fact that it runs until December 21st, a statement made at the boat that only actual contract drafting and terms arrangements stand in the way of completion, came somewhat as a surprise.

Mr. Korda explained that Walter Wanger, now a United Artists producer, will not only continue releasing through the company, but will also expand his production activities therein. He added that the company hopes to add a number of additional producers and pictures.

When United Artists passes to the Korda-Goldwyn interests, said Mr. Korda, it will continue to function virtually under the same working executive personnel as at present, with George Schaefer, now vice president in charge of sales, remaining in charge of American distribution activities, and Murray Silverstone, now foreign sales executive, assuming full charge abroad.

Program To Total 16

Samuel Goldwyn plans eight features next season to cost approximately $10,000,000, according to Mr. Rose. Mr. Korda added that his own London Films will make eight "big pictures" for release in the same period.

Mr. Rose will be returning to New York within ten days with a report for Mr. Goldwyn on the British discussions, and Mr. Korda indicated his expectancy of returning in two or three months for the final details attendant the formal acquisition of the corporation.

FILM BROADCASTS SEEN APPROVED

About 5,000 contracts to show Twentieth Century-Fox product for the next three years constitute approval of the company's radio policy, John D. Clark, general manager of distribution, told delegates to the company's convention. An exhaustive survey of the box office effect of broadcasts featuring "Wake Up and Live," "Love Is News," "One in a Million," and "Sing, Baby, Sing" showed an appreciable increase in receipts after the radio programs were heard, Mr. Clark said. He added that radio broadcasts will be used further by the company to familiarize the public with its pictures and players.

Was Dissatisfied

Alexander Korda, releasing London Films through United Artists, came to New York in mid-May with the avowed intention of obtaining better distribution. His deal with Mr. Goldwyn for the option to purchase came with some suddenness at a meeting held in Hollywood, 10 days ago, of the five United Artists partners.

Dr. A. H. Giannini, president of the company, made the formal announcement of the option in California, and explained that its consummation would in no wise affect existing distribution arrangements either with Wanger Productions or Selznick International, nor would it affect other existing United Artists releasing arrangements or the production plans announced the week previous (See Motion Picture Herald, May 29th).

Giannini To Continue

It was said at that time that while Dr. Giannini opposed the granting of the option, he would probably continue as president under the Korda-Goldwyn ownership, although he would not participate in the purchase.

Mr. Goldwyn was admitted to membership in United Artists in 1926. The company was founded in 1919 as a cooperative venture by David Wark Griffith, Miss Pickford, Mr. Fairbanks and Mr. Chaplin to distribute their pictures. Mr. Griffith withdrew from the company in 1933 and Mr. Korda became an owner-member in 1935. The company has always been a closed corporation, with the owner-members holding all stock.

The company's total production budget for 1936-37 will be $26,000,000, George J. Schaefer, vice-president in charge of sales, announced two weeks ago.

Alfred Saunders, Founder of World And News, Dies

IT is appropriate here to pay tribute to the memory of Mr. Alfred H. Saunders and to signify appreciation of his early service in relating the service of the printed word to the art and industry of the motion picture. He made impress upon motion picture journalism in his contributions to the founding of Moving Picture World and Motion Picture News, which ultimately came to be absorbed in the evolution of Exhibitors' Herald into the MOTION PICTURE HERALD of today. Mr. Saunders, if tradition informs me aright, was a person of idealistic enthusiasm and of a special sort of fidelity to what he deemed principle. His passing in the ripeness of his years is to be accepted among the inevitables of time. His contributions to the art and industry which we all serve, credited or uncredited as they may be, shall persist as real.

Alfred H. Saunders, one of the motion picture's first trade journalists in America, died Sunday, in a Cincinnati hotel room, while on a visit from New York as a delegate to the convention of the National League of Masonic Clubs. Dr. J. J. Jennie, hotel physician, said he apparently had died five hours before, of heart disease.

Mr. Saunders was born well over 70 years ago in England where he turned to the camera while still in his 'teens, frequently studying cinematography with Friese-Greene and other pioneers in motion picture invention. His private motion picture library in New York still holds many documents of historical importance, including one of the few remaining rolls of paper motion picture film, which came from Friese-Greene along about 1889. The Royal Photographic Society admitted him to membership in the early 1890's.

At the turn of the century, Mr. Saunders left England for New York, where he engaged quite inconspicuously in the stereopticon slide business. In May of 1907 he set about the promotion of a paper to be known as "The Lantern Slide View and Motion Picture Renter." It was Herbert Miles, a potential advertiser, who suggested the change of title to "Moving Picture World." Shortly the paper emerged with J. P. Chalmers as publisher and Mr. Saunders as the first, and transient, editor. Then in the spring of 1908 Mr. Saunders set out on his own, establishing The Moving Picture News and Moving Picture Tales, forerunner of the Motion Picture News, and which he sold, in 1913, to William A. John-

DISTRIBUTORS IN JAPAN ARE NOW NERVOUS OVER FEDERAL CONTROL

Censorship Fees on Imported Product Increased 50%, While Domestic Pictures in Several Groupings Are Exempted

by H. TOMINAGA

in Tokyo

The Home Office of Japan called representatives of various film companies here to note the reform of regulations on film censorship made in the Article 19, which, already effective, will be applied to all motion pictures to be censored in this country. It is reported that as the purpose of the recent reform of censorship regulations is to thereby attain an additional increase of censor-fees on foreign films, as well as the extension of a scope covering exemption on domestic product from the same fee.

As for the reason for which foreign product shall be assessed an increased rate of censor-fees, difficulty of censorship is cited. The censors point to the problem of foreign dramatic phrases as well as in the difference of customs and manners of the people represented in the picture.

Even without this reform of censorship regulations, foreign film distributors here have been nervous about possible enforcement by Japanese government of the so-called national cinema control, which was reported to cover the compulsory playing of Japanese pictures at theatres showing foreign films exclusively, in parallel to the restriction on foreign importations, they thought that the Japanese government had finally initiated its first step of cinema control in the recent reform of censor-fee rules.

Domestic Film Profits

Judging from what has been indicated clearly by this reform, it is not necessarily unreasonable that some foreign distributors here should entertain a pessimistic view on the future possibility of foreign product extending its market further in Japanese territory, fearing the number of importations will be lessened. Although the foreign product has now been handicapped by such discriminative imposition of increased fees, it may be said, on the other hand, that the domestic film has been profited very much by the reformed regulations which are construed to be the same arrangement as substantial reduction of the censor-fee for Japanese product. As, moreover, the exemption of censor-fee applied to some sorts of Japanese cultural and other ordinary features by encouraging production of domestic films in general, not to mention the cultural picture, it is considered that because of the possibly more advantageous position in which Japanese product will be placed in comparison with foreign pictures, it will be afforded greater possibility of advancement in all activities.

Fee Increased 50 Per Cent

While the censor-fee in Japan formerly had been fixed at the rate of one sen per metre on all motion pictures including both Japanese and foreign product, the new regulations provide that foreign product shall be assessed at the rate of one sen and a half, which accounts for an increase of fifty per cent against the old rate. The new regulations, also, prescribe that provided they are of Japanese origin, excellent in quality and have been recommended by the Japanese government, all films produced for educational, cultural and scientific purposes, also including scenic and even amusement pictures, shall be exempt.

As for the ulterior object of this reform of censor-fee rules, it is reported that the approximately 3,000 yen of increased revenue accruing from the increase of censor-fees on foreign pictures will be used to cover the censor-fees on domestic films.

According, moreover, to press information, it has been revealed that the Home Office seems to be working out another plan for national cinema control, which will take shape in the establishment of a quota system and restriction of play hours and footage on foreign pictures to be played at Japan theatres.

Turning to Films

Due to reduction of the dramatic staffs in legitimate theatres of the Kansai district, they are reported to have decided to turn into movieshow. This turn, it is reported, is also attributed to the recent extension of the Takarazuka theatrical network to that district, a development of a countrywide nature.

Among the more important theatres which recently have changed to films, and reported planning to show P.C.L. and J.O. pictures exclusively, are:

Nara Eiga Gekijo, 200 seats; Yamaguchi-za, 1,000; Yawata Engekijo, 4,000; Ube Gekijo, 2,500.

Writers Reject 'Gone with Wind'

Despite the fact that Margaret Mitchell's novel, "Gone With the Wind," was awarded the Pulitzer Prize in its field and still ranks near the top of the list of current best-sellers, the book was summarily rejected by nearly 500 delegates, to the American Writers Congress in New York Monday, who balloted among themselves to pick the best books published in the year ended May 1. The Civil War novel, which has already passed the 1,000,000 copy mark, and which was purchased by David O. Selznick, head of Selznick-International Pictures, for transportation to the screen, with release scheduled for next season, received only one vote at the congress. John Dos Passos's "The Big Money" receiving 350 votes, was chosen the best novel by writers, critics and Donald Ogden Stewart, humorist and author of many screen plays, was elected president of the Congress.

Test Action of ASCAP Starts In Two States

Ascap this week started its battle in the courts against its antagonists.

A test suit was filed in the United States district court at Seattle against the State of Washington and 10 individual counties by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. The action claims that the state's new music copyright law is "class legislation and unconstitutional."

The suit alleges, also, that the law deprives the society of just revenues, and attacks a recent Thurston County superior court decision that ordered the society to dissolve in Washington and directed the appointment of a receiver.

The 300-page complaint by ASCAP asserted that friendly relations have been maintained between the society and 20 or more Washington radio stations, but declared that Ascap has lost large revenue from beer parlors, dance halls and other public rooms.

An action challenging the constitutionality of Nebraska's recently enacted law prohibiting agents within the state from representing more than one music copyright owner was filed Tuesday in Lincoln.

It had originally been planned to hold off litigating the issue in Washington and Nebraska until the federal courts in Montana had handed down findings on the society's plea against the Montana law, which had been argued several months ago. The Nebraska law is framed along the same lines as the recently passed Florida bill, which gives the purchaser of a sheet of music or orchestration the automatic right to perform it without further cost.

Meanwhile, Gene Buck, president of Ascap, and Louis D. Frohlich, of Schwartz and Frohlich, society counsel, appeared at Lansing, Mich., before Governor Frank Murphy and a senate committee in opposition to the anti-ASCAP measure passed by the legislature. The bill provides that the society must list all its compositions and sets to the anti-monopoly board to fix a price for the music. The society claims it cannot operate under this system.

More Resignations From Pathe News

Under the new regime of Fred Ullman, recently appointed vice-president of Pathe News in New York on the resignation of Courtland Smith and Jack Connolly, several resignations were tendered this week by members of the staff. C. R. Collins, news editor, and Thomas Chalmers, editor of "Pathe Topics," have left the company, as have James Possi, chief cutter, and Bert Kalish, assistant editor and chief title writer. Mr. Possi has joined Paramount News and Mr. Kalish is now with News of the Day. Several newsreel crews also have resigned.

PARAMOUNT ANNOUNCES 50 TO 60, 22 IN "MILLION-DOLLAR" CLASS

Convention in Hollywood Hears Details of New Product and Policies; More Musicals Are Scheduled Than Ever Before

Twenty-two "million dollar" pictures will head Paramount's list of between 50 and 60 feature productions to be released during the 1937-38 season, Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of distribution, announced Thursday at the company's annual meeting of sales and production executives in session in Los Angeles for three days at the Hotel Ambassador.

"To produce this ambitious program Paramount has increased its production budget approximately $10,000,000 over last season's expenditures," Mr. Agnew pointed out.

"The scheduling of this record-breaking number of high caliber pictures comes in direct response to public demand as demonstrated during the past year for pictures on the scale of "The Plainsman," "The Big Broadcast of 1937" and "Waikiki Wedding," it was said.

More Musicals

"Story material and players for the new season's product literally come from the four corners of the earth," the company added.

"From the Argentine to the Arctic circle and from Paris to the jungles of Malay, the film company has drafted players and will use these locales for the highly diversified list of pictures to be released during the next 12 months."

More musicals are included in the new schedule than have ever been produced before in one season by any major company. This group of musicals ranges from Victor Herbert and Franz Lehar operettas through pictures of "The Big Broadcast" type to an all sepia revue featuring Louis Armstrong and his Band.

List Includes 55

Some 55 feature properties were described to the delegates, as follows:

High, Wide and Handsome; starring Irene Dunne with Randolph Scott, Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, Raymond Walburn, Ben Blue and Charles Bickford, directed by Rouben Mamoulian. A Jerome Kern, Oscar Hammerstein operetta.
Souls at Sea; co-starring Gary Cooper and George Raft, with Frances Dee, Henry Wilcoxon and Olympe Bradna.
Artists and Models; with Jack Benny, Ida Lupino, Richard Arlen, Gail Patrick, Judy Canova, Ben Blue, the Yacht Club Boys, Andre Kostelanetz, Louis Armstrong.
Angel; an Ernst Lubitsch production starring Marlene Deitrich with Herbert Marshall, Melvyn Douglas and Edward Everett Horton.
Sapphire Sal; starring Mae West. A musical of the Gay Nineties to be produced by Emanuel Cohen.
Ebb Tide; produced in Technicolor with Ray Milland, Frances Farmer, Oscar Homolka, Lloyd Nolan.
Spawn of the North; cast to be announced later.
Double or Nothing; with Bing Crosby, Martha Raye, Andy Devine and Mary Carlisle.
Argentine Love; with George Raft, Ida Lupino, Dorothy Lamour and a number of Argentine specialties.

MEXICAN GOVERNMENT CENSORING ALL FILMS

The Mexican Government has passed a rule requiring an authorization for exports or a certificate of censorship before motion picture films, exposed or unexposed, can be taken out of the country, the Department of Commerce in Washington reported this week.

The permission must be obtained from the Autonomous Department of Publicity and Propaganda. All customs houses have been instructed to enforce this rule rigidly, the report states.

The regulation applies to private citizens, traveling across Mexican boundaries as well as to companies organized for the commercial production of motion pictures. Tourists taking motion picture film into Mexico will be required to obtain the necessary permits before they can bring in or take out such films.

True Confession; Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray, a Wesley Ruggles production.
College Swing; with George Burns and Gracie Allen, Martha Raye, Charles Butterworth, Eleanor Whitney, Johnny Downs, Rufe Davis, John Howard, Robert Cummings, Marsha Hunt and Olympe Bradna.
Chocolate Parade; with Louis Armstrong and his band and a list of colored entertainers.
Buccaneer; a Cecil B. DeMille production starring Fredric March, with Franciska Gaal, Akim Tamiroff, Anthony Quinn, Olympe Bradna and Larry Crabbe.

Raft, Sidney in Musical

You and Me; co-starring George Raft and Sylvia Sidney, to be directed by Fritz Lang, with a special musical score by Kurt Weil.
Bluebeard's Eighth Wife; an Ernst Lubitsch production starring Claudette Colbert.
An Empire is Born; a Frank Lloyd production. Cast announcement later.
Big Broadcast of 1938; with Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Martha Raye, Shirley Ross, Dorothy Lamour, Ben Blue and Lief Ericson.
What Ho; starring Gary Cooper, to be produced by Emanuel Cohen.
Untitled Production; starring Bing Crosby and Beatrice Lillie.
Things Began to Happen; starring W. C. Fields.
Beau Geste; to be produced in Technicolor with an all-star cast headed by George Raft, Oscar Homolka, Ray Milland, and directed by Henry Hathaway.
Midnight; starring Marlene Dietrich and Georges Rigaud, South American Star.
Professor Beware; starring Harold Lloyd.
The Vagabond King; to be produced in Technicolor by Frank Lloyd.
Paris Honeymoon; with Bing Crosby, Franciska Gaal, Akim Tamiroff and Ben Blue.
Booloo; now being produced with a native cast in the Malay Peninsula.
This Way Please; with Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Mary Livingstone, Ned Sparks, Betty Grable, Fibber McGee and Molly and Romo Vincent.
Her Jungle Love; with Dorothy Lamour and Ray Milland.
Bonanza; with Edward Arnold, George Bancroft and John Trent, to be produced by B. P. Schulberg.
The Barrier; with James Ellison and Jane Wyatt, Leo Carrillo, Beulah Bondi and Robert Barrat.
Yesterday's Cheers; with John Howard, Terry Walker, Robert Cummings, John Patterson, Marsha Hunt and Larry Crabbe.
Dance for the Lady; with Judy Canova, Lief Ericson, Johnny Downs.
Good Night Ladies; with Lynn Overman, Benny Baker, Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs and Terry Walker.
Daughter of the Tong; with Anna May Wong and Akim Tamiroff.
Murder Goes to Jail; with Lynn Overman and Roscoe Karns.
Summer Romance; with Ben Blue, Betty Grable, Leif Ericson, Larry Crabbe, John Howard, the Yacht Club Boys and Romo Vincent, to be produced by Fanchon.
Prison Farm; cast to be announced.
On Such a Night; featuring Grant Richards, Karen Morley, Milli Monti, Roscoe Karns and Alan Mowbray.
Sophie Lang in Hollywood; the first of a series of three features with Gertrude Michael as "Sophie Lang."
Untitled Production; with Akim Tamiroff as Sax Rohmer's character, Dr. Fu Manchu.
Bulldog Drummond; three features of this series with Lee Bowman and Akim Tamiroff heading the casts.
Hopalong Cassidy; six westerns of this series to be produced by Harry Sherman with William Boyd in the title role.
Arizona Ames; first of two Zane Grey westerns.
Men with Wings; story of aviation by Cecil Lewis.
Rulers of the Sea; based on the history of the great Cunard Line.
The Light That Failed; Rudyard Kipling's famous story.
Life and Loves of Victor Herbert; featuring some of his music.
The Count of Luxembourg; Franz Lehar's operetta.
Manana; musical comedy of old Mexico.

Shorts Announced

In addition to the feature pictures Paramount will release during the 1937-38 season the following shorts: 12 Popeye the Sailor cartoons, to be produced by Max Fleischer; 12 Betty Boop cartoons, to be produced by Max Fleischer; 6 Screen Songs; 15 Paramount Headliners; 12 Paramount Pictorials; 13 Paramount Paragraphics; 13 Grantland Rice Sportlights with Ted Husing; 6 Unusual Occupations, produced in Cinecolor; 6 Color Classic Cartoons, to be produced in three-dimensional Technicolor; 6 Popular Science features in Cinecolor; 104 Issues of the Paramount News; "Popeye the Sailor Meets Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves," a cartoon short in Technicolor, produced by Max Fleischer.

The Paramount Convention special train arrived in Hollywood Tuesday and the delegates were taken to the studio for a welcome by officials there and screenings of new product. Additional screenings were to be held Wednesday night as well.

The business sessions opened at the Hotel Ambassador Thursday morning with an address of welcome by Neil F. Agnew, vice-president in charge of distribution. J. J. Unger, eastern division manager, discussed the 100 per cent club, consisting of all Paramount salesmen who have closed all situations in their territories. Charles Reagan, western division manager, rewarded the winning district and branch managers and salesmen in the recent Adolph Zukor Silver Jubilee Drive.

PARAMOUNT PLANS MORE MUSICALS

The Thursday afternoon session was devoted to talks by Louis Phillips of the legal department; Lou Diamond, head of short subjects, and A. J. Richard, editor of Paramount News.

On Friday Mr. Zukor opened the meeting and introduced William LeBaron, A. M. Botsford and Russell Holman. In the afternoon Mr. Agnew outlined the company's product for 1937-38 and the general sales policy of the new season. Robert M. Gillham, director of advertising and publicity, talked on advertising, and Alex Moss and A. O. Dillenback discussed ad sales. Screenings again occupied the evening.

Saturday morning was to be devoted to individual meetings with district and branch managers. A preview of studio activity followed luncheon and in the evening the delegates attended a buffet supper at the studio at which Paramount stars were present.

Following the convention, which will close on Sunday, there will be a series of regionals with Charles Reagan, western division sales head, and J. J. Unger, eastern and Canadian division manager, conducting them in various key cities.

The home office delegation which arrived in Los Angeles on Wednesday for the meeting included: Neil F. Agnew, Charles Reagan, J. J. Unger, G. B. J. Frawley, Alex Moss, Herman Lorber, Arthur Dunne, Knox Haddow, Fred Leroy, Jack Roper, Larry Flynn, Bob Moriarty, Don Velde and George Weltner. Also on the train were Fred Lange, Paris office; John Day, Buenos Aires; Albert Deane, A. J. Richards, Lou Diamond, Russell Holman, Louis Phillips and A. O. Dillenback of Buchanan and Company.

Australian Board Approves Plan to End Overbuilding

by CLIFF HOLT
in Melbourne

Warmly welcomed by a large gathering, Harry Hunter, new Paramount chief in this market, soon made a good impression on local film men.

Mr. Hunter can't understand Australia's dual feature policy or the manner in which the industry is frequently criticized adversely by the public press.

Replying to toasts to his health at a large gathering of the "47 Club," Sydney organization of publicity men and managers, he appealed for 100 per cent cooperation, saying that distributors and exhibitors are dependent upon each other for the progress of both.

"Adolph Zukor," he said, "feels fine, looks wonderful and is electrically alive, and although there may be an idea that he is getting old, I can assure you that in mind and vision there is not a younger man in this room than he is."

Restriction on Construction

The Film Board of Trade has endorsed a formula for restriction of theatre building but particulars have not yet been made available. Members emphasize that the scheme will not bring monopolies in any district, but is a logical and economical solution of a problem that has become most serious. Before becoming effective, the Board's decision must be ratified by all members of the Motion Picture Distributors Association, which meets soon.

Racing and Spending

For 32 night trotting meetings held in Adelaide during the current season, the sum of £241,000 has been wagered on the Totalisator. This is quite apart from wagers from bookmakers, and it would seem that the Adelaide theatre-man's complaint that trotting is affecting his receipts has some justification.

Alfred Saunders Dead; Founded World, News

ston. (MOTION PICTURE HERALD evolved from the World and News, along with Exhibitors' Herald, in 1930.)

From motion picture trade journalism, Mr. Saunders turned, in 1913, to the educational motion picture, in which he was engaged principally down to the time of his death. In the late 1910's, he published a journal for the educational films industry, and subsequently participated in and lectured on studies of the scientific development of that branch, particularly on the relation of 16 mm. films.

Mr. Saunders in recent years had also conducted an educational films and lecturing business from offices at 70 Fifth Avenue in New York, and served intermittently as a teacher at Columbia University. He lectured much on the history of the motion picture, besides his favorite subject of school films. On the side he was interested in and lectured on "seance" media, in which field he had quite some amateur repute.

Paramount Ready To Take British 'Quality' Films

Paramount is ready to open its doors to all producers in England who can make "quality" pictures with a general appeal for a world-wide market, Barney Balaban, president, said in an interview upon his return to New York this week after a six-weeks tour of Paris, Vienna, Budapest, Rome, Naples and London.

"At the present time, Captain Richard Norton of British and Dominion Pictures is making from 15 to 16 a year at Pinewood for distribution in England by Paramount," Mr. Balaban said. "These films are being turned out in quantity for quota regulations. Now we are interested in quality productions for world-wide distribution."

When asked whether or not his company would finance production of this kind, Mr. Balaban said arrangements for pictures in this category have not been discussed. The indication was, however, that independent producers making "quality" product would find an available international channel through Paramount.

Mr. Balaban said a decision on Paramount's production plans in England would most likely be made as soon as the new quota laws are made public. Present regulations expire next April and it is too early to venture a prediction, he added.

Convinced that this, his first trip abroad, has brought about a new understanding of the problems there, Mr. Balaban asserted he was in favor of having studio and home office executives makes periodic visits abroad. He added that the foreign market is important enough for home office and studio men to visit there more often to maintain contacts and to have a knowledge of conditions.

Asked what the earnings for Paramount this year would approximate, Mr. Balaban said that the theatres and production were doing well and that actual figures were unavailable at this time. Paramount's partnerships, he added, are no problem.

John W. Hicks, head of the company's foreign department, returned with Mr. Balaban, having met him May 3 in England. He described his trip as his usual semi-annual survey. "Things are picking up," he commented.

Mr. Balaban decided against attending the company's sales convention in Hollywood, to preside at the annual stockholders' meeting June 15th, in New York.

Chase Sells More 20th-Fox Shares

Further disposition by the Chase National Bank in April of the Twentieth Century-Fox securities held under escrow agreement was disclosed last week by the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington in its semi-monthly summary of transactions of officers, directors and principal holders in stocks of their corporations.

During the month, it was reported, the bank disposed of 816 shares of common and 5,232 shares of $1.50 preferred, leaving it at the close of the period with 236,991 shares of the common and 694,182 shares of the preferred.

The only other reported transaction in the company's securities was the sale of 200 shares of common by John D. Clark, New York, who held one share at the close of the month.

Other transactions reported to the commission were as follows:

Columbia Pictures: Disposition by gift of 600 common voting trust certificates by Jack Cohn, New York, who held 38,934 at the close of the month.

Loews: Sales of 3,500 shares of common by David Bernstein, New York, who held 10,180 shares at the close of the month.

Paramount: Acquisition of 3,030 shares of common and disposition of 2,830 shares, acquisition of 200 shares of first preferred and disposition of 200 shares, and acquisition of 200 shares of second preferred and disposition of 1,400 shares, through purchases, sales and exchanges, by Maurice Newton, New York, through Hallgarten & Company. John D. Hertz sold $15,000 debentures and held $87,000.

Warner Brothers: Disposition by gift of 40,000 debentures and purchase of 3,000 by Albert Warner, New York, who held 1,530,000 at the end of the month.

The commission also received reports on the equity holdings of officers and directors of corporations whose securities became registered during April, as follows:

Universal Corporation: Adolph Ramish, Los Angeles, and Charles R. Rogers, Universal City, 12,500 common voting trust certificates each and 111,283 common voting trust certificate warrants jointly.

Pathe Film Corporation: T. P. Loach, New York, seven shares of common; O. Henry Briggs, New York; Henry J. Guild, Adams, Mass.; Frank F. Kolbe, New York; Robert M. McKinney, New York, and Charles A. Stone, Troy, N. Y., no securities.

Remuneration of $182,040 paid to Harry Cohn, president of Columbia Pictures Corporation, for the fiscal year ended June 27, 1936, headed the list of salaries reported to the commission and made public this week. Jack Cohn, vice-president and a director of the corporation, drew $104,260 from the same company and Abe Montague, general sales manager, was paid $49,287.

Case Transfer Sought

Casino Productions, Inc., and Yermi Sterm have filed suit against Warners for $500,000 damages. The plaintiffs charge the defendants with libel in connection with the picture, "Go Into Your Dance." The suit was revealed when Warners filed a petition in the New York supreme court this week for a transfer to federal court.

LETTERS FROM READERS

Our Coronation Story

Concerning Motion Picture Herald's coverage of the motion picture coverage of the Coronation Ceremony, Mr. Martin Quigley, publisher and editor-in-chief, has received a letter discussing one aspect of the news narrative, from Mr. M. Neville Kearney of the Federation of British Industries:

Dear Mr. Quigley:

I have read today with interest, not unmixed with some curiosity, the article on page 38 of your issue of May 15, written by Mr. Tom Cummins of British Paramount News, with regard to the filming of the Coronation Ceremony in Westminster Abbey, London, on May 12, last.

As I happen to have been intimately connected with all the arrangements made for filming the ceremony, having acted from first to last in direct liaison between the Earl Marshal of England, the Duke of Norfolk, K.G., on the one hand and the five British News Reel Companies on the other, and having been present in the Abbey myself in addition to making all the arrangements, I claim indisputably to have greater knowledge than anyone else of all that transpired, down to the most minute detail.

While making every allowance for artistic license and flights of imagination in an article of the kind, in relation to such matters as "working and sleeping on top of the tomb of an ancient king" and "hundreds of floodlights suspended from roofs and walls"—which are fantastic but harmless exaggerations—I feel it both desirable and fair flatly to contradict the statement, printed in leaded type, that "hopes of an early release were shattered when the Archbishop of Canterbury, Wednesday afternoon, after the crowning, decided that the inspection would not take place until 10 o'clock Wednesday night" and that this "new order jeopardized shipments of prints of the actual Coronation." This is wholly inaccurate, as Mr. Cummins should well know, and a poor form of thanks for the unexampled facilities that the Earl Marshal and the Archbishop were so good as to afford, and the great personal trouble that Their Graces both took to be of every possible assistance and to obviate any delay. If the allegation is an attempt to excuse late despatch of the Coronation films to America, is is an unworthy one.

The facts are these: The Coronation of the King was a solemn and religious ceremony, not a mere secular spectacle. Realizing to the full the world-interest aroused by this memorable event, all Departments of H.M.'s Government were ready to grant every facility that could properly be given for its portrayal, and the Duke of Norfolk agreed, at the first discussion of the matter I had with him last January, to permit one or more motion picture cameras to be placed in suitable positions in the Abbey, if it could be arranged without interfering with the Ceremony, on the express condition that only such parts of the Ceremony as were suitable for photographic reproduction should be filmed. It was obviously inappropriate that such rituals as the actual anointing and administration of the Holy Communion should be reproduced for showing in public picture theatres—intimate religious devotions deserve to be respected, and are never, I think, allowed, even in screen pictures let alone in actuality, under the Production Code Administration so admirably enforced by the M.P.P.D.A., and with which code you yourself are closely associated. Formal assurances were given, but to ensure observance of the only condition imposed, the Earl Marshal and the Archbishop of Canterbury (who went carefully with me, and the representatives of the News Reel Companies, through the entire Order of the Service, so as to indicate the few points that should not be filmed) decided at my suggestion that they would personally see the films immediately they were printed, and say whether or not there were any parts of them deemed unsuitable for public exhibition—bearing in mind that the zeal of cameramen might possibly exceed their good taste and judgment.

Despite a long day of intensely emotional preoccupation following upon a period of continuous and exacting work, and regardless of their numerous important engagements, both the Earl Marshal and the Archbishop agreed to attend personally to see the films indicated by the News Reel Companies as the earliest that they could possibly have the "rushes" ready. This time, fixed by the Companies themselves, was 6 p. m. on Wednesday, May 12—Coronation evening. Some five days before the Coronation (not on the afternoon "after the crowning") the News Reel Companies notified me that it would be a physical impossibility for them to have the "rushes" ready for inspection, even in their crudest form, before 8 p. m. on May 12, and I thereupon immediately notified both the Earl Marshal and the Archbishop, who unhesitatingly agreed to alter the films at the hour indicated. That they did so I know, for I was present with them at the time. They reached the private theatre at 7:50 p. m., and the only delay was for a few moments while the handful of privileged persons present listened to King George's broadcast speech on the radio, which was doubtless heard by millions in your country as well as in this. The inspection—not censorship—was finished at 9:25 p. m., and Their Graces both expressed great satisfaction at the admirable pictures made of the ceremony. No single deletion was required. It should not be overlooked, I think, that the Earl Marshal is the premier non-royal Duke of this country and that the Archbishop of Canterbury is the premier ecclesiastical dignitary of the Church of England. For two such personages to occupy themselves personally with the News Reel films in the midst of their important duties was in itself a courtesy to be highly appreciated.

The remainder of the article in your journal, although not entirely accurate, needs no comment, and the same applies to the further, and, in parts, somewhat imaginative article on the same subject which follows it. We are all accustomed to genial ballyhoo! I feel, however, that to infer, or rather to state definitely, that the Archbishop of Canterbury was responsible for delay is both ungrateful and discourteous.

The News Reel Companies as well as the public generally should be, and I think are, profoundly grateful to the Earl Marshal for having accorded such exceptional and unexpected facilities for recording pictorially what was, in the universal estimation, one of the most magnificent and impressive ceremonies that have ever taken place in history. The News Reel Companies hoped, but at first scarcely expected, that one motion-picture camera might be permitted in the Abbey. Instead of any such limitation six camera positions were allotted, and the most elaborate and careful arrangements were made for the convenience of all concerned. Among other things I obtained permission for the Editors and commentators as well as all the cameramen to attend the Final Rehearsal two days before the ceremony, so that they might be familiar with what was to take place and be accordingly prepared in advance! Even the exposed films were transferred by specially appointed officials to vans authorized to be in waiting outside the Cathedral, with police passes to ensure rapid conveyance to laboratories. . . .

From what I have said, I fancy you will agree that organization in the interests of the News Reel Companies was anything but deficient, and you may perhaps think it not without interest to publish this letter.—M. Neville Kearney, Federation of British Industries, London, England.

New York Board Restricts Theatres

The Board of Estimate of New York City has voted to establish a "restricted retail district," embracing parts of Park, Madison and Fifth Avenues, in midtown, wherein theatres of any sort, dance halls, cabarets, bus stations and parking lots would be prohibited. The Fifth Avenue Association and other civic groups supported the proposal.

Borough President Samuel Levy of Manhattan, sponsor of the plan, declared he wished to protect the highly assessed area involved from degeneration similar to that which he said has overtaken Broadway.

The new classification is known as a "restricted retail district" and had the support of the Fifth Avenue Association and other civic groups, as well as many retailers, merchants and real estate executives. In a protracted hearing, during which several individual property owners in the region affected protested the new classification, James J. Lyons, Borough President of the Bronx, was the sole member of the board to agree with them, but when the measure finally came up for a vote he was recorded as not voting.

Two of the principal opponents of the new zone were Robert Walton Goelet and the Henry Phipps Estate, both wanting to erect motion picture theatres in the restricted zone. Mr. Goelet, who was successful in an action before the Court of Appeals to compel Paul Moss, Commissioner of Licenses, to issue a permit for the erection of a theatre, has already filed plans for a small theatre in the rear of the west blockfront on Park Avenue between Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth Streets. The Phipps estate wished to build a theatre farther uptown on Madison Avenue. The new zoning classification, of course, will circumvent the theatre plans.

No RKO Approval Seen Before Fall

Federal Judge William Bondy in New York this week ordered that the recently adopted amendments to the RKO reorganization plan which brought about the withdrawal of unsecured creditors' objections to the plan be submitted for the approval of all creditors who had consented to the plan earlier. Unless such creditors file written objections with Special Master George W. Alger before June 21, they will be regarded as having consented to the amendments, according to Judge Bondy's order.

Judge Bondy has also set June 14 for hearing on the proposed settlements of four claims against RKO originally filed for $9,318,443 for $1,249,998. The claims are those of the Hoblitzelle and the Broadway and 47th Street Corporation interests.

The possibility of any final adjudication on the RKO reorganization plan before September or later appeared unlikely this week as Special Master Alger notified all parties to the reorganization that after all testimony is in he will take several weeks to study the case and then hold another hearing at which both sides can present arguments and briefs. Mr. Alger could thus not make his findings known to the federal court before August, at the earliest. Additional hearings before Judge Bondy would be likely, thereafter, and as Judge Bondy plans to leave on a European vacation late in the summer, there appears little prospect of the final hearings being undertaken by him before October.

David Stoneham, representing four large holders of Class A stock, contended this week that the transfer in 1928 of 500,000 shares of Class B RKO stock to the Radio Corporation of America was illegal and that subsequent four-for-one split in 1931 under which RCA got 125,000 shares of Class A stock for its 500,000 was illegal also.

George L. Schein, counsel for the independent stockholders committee, asked for three weeks in which to assemble all his evidence against the plan. Mr. Alger said one week was ample and adjourned further hearings until June 10.

The claims which Judge Bondy will hear June 14 are based upon alleged breach of leases of theatres operated by RKO. The claim of the Broadway and 47th Street Corporation for $1,893,983 is to be settled for $500,000, the Hoblitzelle Investment Company claim for $3,421,940 is to be settled for $211,982.

Two Groups Favor U.S. Film Bureau

The Eastern Association of Non-theatrical Film Producers, and Local No. 644 of the International Photographers of the Motion Picture Industry went on record this week in favor of House Bill No. 7131 for the consolidation of all federal motion picture production activities in the Federal Printing Office under a general director. Both resolved to urge passage on Congress.

The Non-theatrical Producers, meeting in New York last Friday, at the Blue Ribbon Restaurant, near Times Square, decided that it is advisable to establish the new plan from the standpoint of economy and efficiency in government operations, according to Arthur Loucks, vice president of the organization.

Motion picture observers in the Capital expressed optimism this week over the prospects of the bill's passage, hearings on which are expected within a week or thereabouts.

Government production activities at present are widely scattered over the maze of bureaus, divisions and departments of the government, and the new measure would centralize them.

Modern Art Library Gets Swedish Films

John Hay Whitney, president of the Museum of Modern Art Film Library in New York, this week announced the arrival of a group of motion pictures from Sweden for inclusion in the library's collection. During the past six months the library has received selections from England, France and Germany and shipments of the Russian group which were selected last summer are expected within the next month or two.

Among the films, acquired through the courtesy of Svensk Filmindustri, are "Gosta Berling's Saga," with Greta Garbo; "Do You Remember," brief excerpts from Swedish films of 1909-1926; "The Outlaws," "The Treasure of Arne," "The Phantom Chariot," "Jerusalem," "One Night," "The Old City" and "Drottingholm Theatre."

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Intensive Effort

Nearing that date when the efforts of the 1936-1937 production season will take their places in the records books as listings of so many hits scored, surprises encountered and disappointments to be forgotten, Hollywood embarked upon a campaign of intensive production. Starting June 1 the production colony entered the stretch sprint by placing fifteen productions in the work. During the same period, six pictures were finished. Eleven studios participated in the new activities.

Two pictures were started by Columbia. In "Life Begins With Love," which Ray McCarey is directing, Jean Parker, Douglass Montgomery, Edith Fellows and Eileen O'Malley are the featured players. "Thanks For Nothing" will present Francis Lederer, Madeleine Carroll, Mischa Auer, Grace Bradley, Richard Carle, J. C. Nugent, Charles Waldron, Victor Kilian and Arthur Hoyt. Elliott Nugent is directing.

Getting its second wind after the sales convention, MGM, likewise, started two films. "Double Wedding" will feature William Powell, Myrna Loy, John Beal and Florence Rice with Sidney Tolen, Mary Gordon, Jessie Ralph, Barnett Parker and Edgar Kennedy. Richard Thorpe is directing. George Murphy, Leo Carroll and Rita Johnson are the principals in "Umbrella Man" which William Thiele was assigned to direct.

Paramount also started two productions. Under its own auspices, "Ebb Tide" went before the cameras. With James Hogan directing, it will present Oscar Hamolka, Francis Farmer, Ray Milland, Lloyd Nolan and Barry Fitzgerald as the most important players. Second feature, "Accidents Will Happen," B. P. Schulberg production, currently lists William Gargan, Oren Heyward, Vivienne Osborne and Richard Carle as principals. Earl Kenton is directing.

Stage and Navy

The fourth studio to start two pictures was RKO-Radio. Under Gregory LaCava's direction "Stage Door" went before the cameras. The cast includes Ginger Rogers, Katherine Hepburn, Gail Patrick, Adolpe Menjou, Leona Roberts, Marjorie Lord, Andrea Leeds, Lucille Ball and Constance Collier. In "Annapolis Salute" James Ellison, Marsha Hunt, Harry Carey, Van Heflin, Anny Hovey and Arthur Lake are featured. Christy Cabanne is directing.

Republic started "She Didn't Want A Shiek." It will offer Ramon Novarro, Lola Lane, Gene Lockhart, Kathleen Burke, Charlotte Treadway, Stanley Fields, Billy Bevan and Richard Coote as name values. Irving Pichel is directing.

Although busy with its sales convention, 20th Century-Fox found time to start "Danger Love At Work." Simone Simon is starred with Jack Haley, E. E. Horton, John Carradine, Mary Boland, Benny Bartlett, Margaret Seddon, Etienne Girardot, E. E. Clive and Franklin Pangborn. The film will mark Otto Preminger's first American effort.

For United Artists release, Wanger Productions started "52nd Street." Screen names to be presented include Ian Hunter, Leo Carrillo, Pat Paterson, Ella Logan, Sid Silvers, Zasu Pitts and Marla Shelton. From the night clubs of New York and the radio come Kenny Baker, Jack White, Stuff Smith, Smart Fingers Johnson, Dorothy Salters, George Tapps, Jerry Colona and Al Norman. Harold Young is directing.

Warners began work on "Inside Story." Ronald Regan, June Travis, Eddie Acuff, Ben Weldon, George E. Stone and Raymond Hatton head the cast which William McGann is directing.

Grand National started "Mystery Of The Hooded Horseman," Ed Finney production. Tex Ritter, Iris Meredith, Snub Pollard, Horace Murphy, Colleen Ward, Charles King, Earl Dwire, Forest Taylor and James Girard are included in the cast. Ray Taylor is directing.

Maurice Conn started "The Fighting Texan" with Charles Abbott directing. Cast includes Kermit Maynard, Elaine Shepard, Frank LaRue, Bud Buster, Ed Cassidy, Lafe McKee, Bruce Mitchell and Art Miles.

Universal's contribution to the new work is "Hell On Ice." It will present John Wayne, Judith Barrett, Billy Burrud, Virginia Brissac, Frank Otho and Charles Brokow. Arthur Lubin is directing.

Without question MGM's "Broadway Melody Of 1938" is the outstanding work completed this week. Previous "Broadways" having established the idea's entertainment and commercial worth as well as production class, this will offer for names, Robert Taylor, Eleanor Powell, George Murphy, Binnie Barnes, Buddy Ebsen, Sophie Tucker, Judy Garland, Charles Kgor Gorin, Raymond Walburn, Robert Benchley, Willie Howard, Charles Grapewin, Robert Wildhack, Billy Gilbert, Helen Troy and Barnett Parker. Roy Del Ruth directed and Jack Cummings produced.

Columbia finished "Flashing Skates." The cast includes Charles Quigley, Rita Hayworth, J. Farrell MacDonald, John Gallaudet, Max Hoffman, Jr., Paul Fix, Arthur Loft, Ward Bond and Dick Wessell. D. Ross Lederman directed.

"Born Reckless" came off the line at 20th Century-Fox. Featuring Brian Donlevy and Rochelle Hudson, the cast further includes Robert Kent, Barton MacLane, Pauline Moore, Chick Chandler, Harry Carey, William Pawley, Francis McDonald, Eddie Dunn, George Wolcott, Joe Crebon, Stanley Andrews and Harvey Clark. Malcolm St. Clair directed.

For RKO-Radio distribution, Hirliman Productions completed "Windjammer." George O'Brien is starred with Constance Worth, William Hall, Gavin Gordon, Lal Chand Mehra, Brandon Evans, Ben Hendricks, Lee Shumway, Stanley Blystone and Frank Hagney. Ewing Scott directed.

"Mr. Dodd Takes The Air" finished at Warner. The cast includes Benny Baker, Jane Wyman, Gertrude Michael, Alice Brady, Frank McHugh, Henry O'Neill, Cliff Soubier, Sybil Harris, Ferris Taylor, Maidel Turner, Craig Reynolds and Harry Davenport. Alfred E. Green directed the Mervyn LeRoy Production.

Selectivity

"Motion pictures for a selective audience" is the purpose of newly formed Southern California Film Society. Composed of people prominent in the motion picture, social, business and educational life of Hollywood, the society will concentrate on showing its members pictures, particularly those of foreign make, that they ordinarily would not have opportunity to view. Additionally it will re-present some of the more rare older American productions.

To that end two series of pictures consisting of five pictures in each series have been arranged for. To permit members to select foreign films which they would like to see a list of productions which includes such films as Elisabeth Bergner's "As You Like It," Feodor Chaliapin's "Don Quixote," "The Golem," "Golgotha," "Hei Tiki," "La Kermesse Heroique," a French production of "Les Miserables," "One Hundred Days Of Napoleon," "Tsar To Lenin," "We Are From Kronstadt" and "King Of The Damned" among many others.

The second series is devoted to the bringing back of American screen classics. With the Museum Of Modern Art collection of interesting and significant productions made since the beginning of the industry in this country available, the Society has many rarities ready for presentation. Listed are the 1895 Edison feature "The Execution Of Mary Queen Of Scots," George Melies' "A Trip To The Moon," "The Great Train Robbery," Sarah Bernhardt's "Queen Elizabeth," D. W. Griffith's "The New York Hat," "Intolerance," "A Fool There Was," "Sunrise," and the first Mickey Mouse, "Plane Crazy."

A closed organization, financed on a membership basis, the society is interested in motion pictures mainly from an artistic viewpoint. While, in conjunction of the Museum Of Modern Art's activities, the idea may spread, there is but little possibility that it will develop as a serious competition to motion picture theatres. If more such organizations are formed, they naturally will reach out for a specialized membership to whom regular theatre attendance is not habitual.

Why the Athletes

No mere avidity to capitalize on already obtained publicity impelled Sol Lesser to sign Lou Gehrig and Glenn Morris to motion picture contracts. Gehrig and Morris are already household names all over America and in many foreign lands and, of course, when their pictures eventually appear, Mr. Lesser's publicity department will not be hesitant to take advantage of their fame as athletes. Rather a more thorough-going understanding of showmanship fundamentals motivated the producer's action.

"Here's the reason," says Sol, "Morris is going to be 'Tarzan' in my 'Tarzans.' 'Tarzan,' in character, is by nature a great athlete, so why should I get the greatest athlete in the world, Glenn Morris, Olympic Decathlon Champion, to portray the character. 'Tarzan' has to run, jump, swim and do everything an all-around athlete does. If in a story, 'Tarzan' has to toss a spear, Morris can do it in correct form and it won't be necessary to engage a specialized double to hurl a javelin in the way Morris can do it. Neither will it be necessary to engage doubles to do any of the other hazardous stunts that 'Tarzan' is called upon to do.

"The same thing applies to Gehrig. He will appear in a picture that will have a baseball background. So when it was possible for me to get him, why should I sign up some ordinary screen name when I could get the greatest baseball player in the land to appear in the film?"

Action Melodrama

Assaying this forthcoming production from the viewpoint of primary name values manifests Fred MacMurray, late of "Swing High, Swing Low;" Frances Farmer, disclosed as a real screen find in "Come And Get It"; the familiar Charlie Ruggles and Lloyd Nolan, who finally seems to have found his proper niche in screen affairs, as the most important personalities. Of secondary importance, either as far as participation in the story or public display worth is concerned are Fay Holden, Ralph Morgan, Edward Robin, Harlan Briggs, Gaylord Pendleton, Horace MacMahon, William Mansell, Irving Bacon, Frank Bruno, Willard Robertson, Chester Clute, Bennie Bartlett, Sam Hayes and James Blakely. The supporting cast is about equally divided between known players and nonentities.

Thought of from a worthy story angle, those at Paramount whose business it is to publicize their employers' screen entertainment intentions say that it is a very different kind of newspaper yarn. The unit man, assigned to keep the press informed of every detail in the picture that looked like it might land a line in print, came up with quite a promise that everybody hopes the picture will make good when she said: "It's got laughs like you had in 'Front Page', romantic love interest like what was in 'Gentlemen Of The Press', dynamic action like what was in 'Front Page Woman' and real low down authenticity like only fellows who were in on the real low down knew but were not let print knew."

That's quite a birthright for any newspaper picture to prove. But it is adapted from John C. Moffitt's "Roaring Girl." Mr. Moffitt was a reporter in New York. He is better known as a one time moving picture commentator on the staff of the Kansas City Star. The producer of the picture, Benjamin Glazer, also was a newspaper man. The paper with which he was connected is no longer published, but Mr. Glazer likes to remember that he was a participant in the very successful silent version of "Seventh Heaven."

Married Before Breakfast

(MGM)

Romantic Comedy

Occasionally MGM, after sufficient preparation, starts, develops, completes, previews without benefit of press attendance, revises, makes revisions and retakes and announces for release, with amazing speed, one of its sustaining productions.

While in the work, and before anyone who is not employed by the organization has a chance to take more than one hasty look around, various and sundry people on the company's payroll are quite naive in attempting to impress the reporter who happens to be working for somebody else that if he is not completely alert and appreciative of and to what is being shown him his boss is apt to find fault and his readers will be deprived of important information.

In the present instance the producing company did not spend very much time dilly-dallying around. The shooting schedule on "Married Before Breakfast might be comparable to the length of a short story compared to an extended serial. As a matter of chronology the title was changed from "You'll Be Married Before Noon" to its present appelation.

There are complications in this romantic comedy. A girl is in love with an insurance agent. One of his prospects in a big "per capital" drive happens to be a milkman. Milkmen never happen to have very much money but wealthy and care free play boys do. The agent's girl friend meets the wealthy playboy. Inevitable complications with inevitable results ensue. Drama and mystery, both approached from the lighter side, have a function in the story before its completion.

Personalities whom exhibitors will be given opportunity to talk about as appearing in the film are Robert Young, Florence Rice, June Clayworth, Burnett Parker, Warren Hymer, Helen Flint, Irene Franklin, Hugh Marlowe, Tom Kennedy and Edgar Dearing. Edwin L. Marin is the director.

A House in the Country

(Tentative Title)

(RKO Radio)

Comedy-Melodrama

No story of sophisticated socialites enjoying a gay week-end at a country house will be unfolded here. Lest that impression might become prevalent the title will be changed prior to release of the film. Rather it's a yarn of a New York state hillbilly family and a lot of gangsters. Mainly it is a humorous story which turns dramatic in the end. Yet even in this treatment, the matter of comedy atmosphere is not completely eliminated. The central characters in the picture are a shiftless happy go lucky farmer, his wife and daughter, a small son, a forest ranger and a gangster who is hiding out until the heat of a bit of gangster warfare cools off. The old farmer, inadvertently, brings death to the rival mobsters, wealth to himself and fosters his daughter's romance with the forest ranger.

The production which was adapted to the screen by J. Robert Bren and Edmund L. Hartman, who collaborated on "China Passage," "Behind The Headlines," "Without Orders" and "The Man Who Found Himself," is based on a stage play written by Melvin Levy. Richard Rosson, who directed "Behind The Headlines" and handled the outdoor sequences in such important pictures as "Captains Courageous" and "Come And Get It," is directing.

The hero is Fred Stone, last in "Grand Jury" and "My American Wife." Emma Dunn is his wife, Marjorie Lord seen in "Border Cafe" is his daughter and youthful Tommy Bond is his son and pal. The Forest Ranger is William Corson, who after completing his training in minor parts now steps into a featured role. J. Carroll Naish, Ray Mayer and Bradley Page constitute a trio of gangsters who show up at the house Stone has claimed by squatter rights. The gangster to whom Stone makes Naish's whereabouts known is Paul Guilfoyle. Other players in the cast are Frank M. Thomas, Dudley Clements and Robert McKenzie.

Love in a Bungalow

(Universal)

Comedy-Romance

Universal views the joining of Nan Grey and Kent Taylor as a new romantic team with confidence that they will be accepted enthusiastically by the public. Kent, who has been seen in featured and lead roles in many pictures is fairly well known. Through a succession of pictures from "Sutter's Gold" to "Three Smart Girls" and more recently "The Man In Blue," Miss Grey has gathered poise and experience and a definite prestige with theatre goers and managers who are on the lookout for new faces that promise to be the stars of tomorrow.

The material chosen for their initial appearance together is light gay comedy romance. Based on a published story, "Be It Ever So Humble," written by Eleanore Griffith and William Rankin, the production was assigned to Ray McCarey, whose specialty is light comedy to direct. It concerns a girl working as hostess in a real estate promotion model bungalow. One morning she discovers that an intruder has made himself at home in the cottage. His breezy charm and refusals to be rebuffed soon lead to romance. Then a contest is announced for young married couples who consider themselves the happiest wife and husband. The two win it and then their troubles begin. Though the girl confesses to all they did to make their entry look legitimate the sponsor decides they are entitled to the prize. The windfall permits them to marry.

While Miss Grey and Kent carry practically the entire thread and action of the story, the supporting cast is lacking neither in talent or name value. Among others who will be seen are Dorothea Kent, Hobart Cavanaugh, the newcomer Jack Smart, Minerva Urecal, David Oliver and Louise Beavers.

Broadway Melody of 1938

(MGM)

Musical

The "Charlie Chans" are standbys at 20th Century-Fox as are the "American Families." Paramount sets great store by its successive "Collegiates" and "Big Broadcasts." With differing casts Sol Lesser bases a good share of his productions on Harold Bell Wright stories. Harry Sherman has found it profitable to feature William Boyd in Clarence Melford's "Hop-a-long Cassidy" yarns. MGM, in happy recollection of its first two adventures, both as entertainment and as commercial experiments, like its brother producers is optimistic about the forthcoming "Broadway Melody Of 1938." Regularly continued serials have exerted a profound effect upon theatre goers. In jest, or otherwise, folks still recall "The Perils Of Pauline"; but intervening serials have usurped their function in the realm of screen entertainment.

Be that as it may, "Broadway Melody of 1938" is on its way. MGM's publicity department already has a prolonged catchline for it—"stands alone as the biggest musical attraction now on exhibition anywhere on the face of

Doyle Leaves Greater Union Theatre Group

Stuart F. Doyle, managing director of Greater Union Theatres, Ltd., and 29 subsidiaries which have a total capitalization of $5,000,000, resigned Friday in Australia. The resignation was said to have followed a reported disagreement on policy with the board of directors.

With his resignation, Mr. Doyle, through his New York attorneys, M. L. Willson of Walker and Redman, announced he had sold his entire holdings in the companies. The resignation will become effective on June 30.

Mr. Doyle will concentrate on radio, motion picture production and theatre operations. He has acquired a major interest in Commonwealth Broadcasting, one of the largest group of radio stations in Australia. He is also transferring his film production activities to England where an important British banking group will be associated with him. A number of stories have already been lined up for future production.

Two theatres, the Regent and Rex West End, are now being completed in London and will be operated by Mr. Doyle. He plans to leave shortly on an extended South Seas cruise before assuming his new duties.

Mr. Doyle has been with Greater Union for 30 years. No successor has been named by the board, comprised of eight local men, who will continue the management of the company.

Negotiations between Hoyts, Twentieth Century-Fox subsidiary, and Greater Union, which have been on and off for the past few months, are expected to be resumed following the return of Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Walter J. Hutchinson, foreign manager, to New York from Hollywood next week. It is hoped that the five year partnership arrangement between the two Australian circuits will be continued.

No Chain or "Divorce" Bills by Illinois Allied

No theatre chain tax bills or theatre divorce bills will be introduced in the Illinois State Legislature by Allied Theatres of Illinois, according to a statement made this week by Aaron Saperstein, president of the group. Mr. Saperstein said that the present legislative calendar was too crowded to get a bill on either subject put before the group and given the proper attention.

No action has been taken on the theatre divorce bill proposed several weeks ago by Representative Schaeffer O'Neill, of Alton. The bill is still in committee.

Finney Moves Headquarters

Edward Finney's Boots and Saddles Pictures, Inc., producers of Grand National musical westerns, has moved to the Grand National studios in Hollywood following completion of this season's release schedule. Lindsley Parsons, supervisor of the unit, and his staff have had headquarters at the International Studios where they remained until now.

the earth on stage or screen, in stadia or under canvas." The man in whose department this identification originated spent many years in the service of circuses. He anticipates enjoying a vacation with one this year.

There will be girl choruses, grandiose and colorful production effects, music, dancing and a romantic love story in "Broadway Melody Of 1938." Also in it will be Robert Taylor. He and the other big name, Eleanor Powell, were in the previous "Melody." As Miss Powell first attracted attention in a 20th Century-Fox picture, Judy Garland who was in "Pigskin Parade" also will be in this. So will Buddy Ebsen, George Murphy of "Top Of The Town" memory, Sophie Tucker yclept "the last of the red hot mammas"; Willie Howard, Broadway comic, new coming singer Charles Gorin; newspaper commentator, author and much laughed screen personality Robert Benchley, Charlie Grapewin who was included when "Good Earth" and "Captains Courageous" were made. Raymond Walburn and Robert Wildhack. Prominence also will be given Igor Gorin, Billy Gilbert, Barnett Parker and Helen Troy.

A large number of persons are credited with putting the production together and Roy Del Ruth directed.

Meet the Boy Friend

(Republic)

Comedy-Romance

Analyzing this forthcoming production with an eye to its prospective entertainment and commercial values, one very quickly notes that it is more than ordinarily worthy from the standpoint of names. While none of the performers have as yet attained that status which assures a rush of patrons upon their names being posted, all are familiar and all, at one time or another, have appeared in important pictures.

The important people in the story are David Carlyle, Carol Hughes, Warren Hymer, Pert Kelton, Andrew Tombes and Gwili Andre. Principal support includes Smiley Burnette, Leonid Kinskey, Sid Saylor, Selmer Jackson, Cy Kendall, Robert Middlemass and Mary Gordon. Assigned to specialties are the radio favorites Oscar and Elmer and the Beverly Hill Billies.

In the story, a radio sponsor wants to keep its popular attraction, a crooner yclept "America's Boy Friend, away from marriage. One girl is railroaded to a fat Hollywood motion picture contract and an insurance policy is taken out against his getting married. But the girl who is assigned to keep him from falling in love, falls in love with the boy and he with her. Complications ensue when mobsters become involved in the arrangement. But all ends well in the finale as the boy and girl are married and instead of having "the boy friend" to enrapture them, radio listeners have "America's Singing Sweethearts" to thrill them.

The production is based on a story by Jack Raymond and Robert Arthur. Bradford Ropes did the screen play and Ralph Staub is directing.

Reported Missing

(Universal)

Melodrama

Two or three weeks ago, William Gargan entertained Universal's salesmen with a vividly hilarious description of how a studio goes about the business of casting. He detailed how a taxi driver emerged on the screen as a submarine driver. In his first picture for Universal on his new contract, "Wings Over Honolulu," Mr. Gargan was an airplane pilot. In this forthcoming attraction he is an inventor of airplane safety devices, also a pilot.

A safety invention the star perfects fails and many lives are lost. He is accused of needlessly sacrificing lives. The resulting investigation results in a disruption of his romantic affairs when he testifies that his girl's brother might have been responsible for the crash. Under similar circumstances, although it is not equipped with the protective device, another plane crashes, and, in addition to the tragedy, a robbery is perpetrated. The inventor-aviator turns detective. Announcing he knows the identity of the air-murderer and thief, he departs by plane to present his evidence in Washington. In a thrill action sequence aboard the plane, the culprit reveals himself, further tests prove the efficiency of the invention and the hero and his girl friend are reconciled.

The story is an original by Verne Whitehead. The screenplay was prepared by Joseph Fields, Jerry Chodrov and James Mulhauser. Milton Carruth is directing.

Assisting Gargan in bringing the story to screen realism are Jean Rogers as the girl, Dick Purcell as the suavely deceptive heavy, Joe Sawyer as a reporter, Hobart Cavanaugh providing the comedy relief and Michael Fitzmaurice as a pilot.

The Man Behind the Law

(Columbia)

Melodrama

Story elements presaging tense melodrama loom as the dominating commercial asset in this forthcoming attraction. In theme it sounds compelling and though not completely novel, it seems to be of that substance that should have entertainment merit and commercial quality.

A law graduate, believed to be the adopted son of a Senator and his wife is given a position in a prominent lawyer's office. Actually the wife is the boy's mother and the lawyer his father. Posing as ethical, the lawyer knows all the tricks and loopholes of the law and specializes in defending gangsters. The boy defends and frees a killer who kills after he has retained the lawyer to defend him. The secret comes out and the boy turns on his employer. Appointed a deputy district attorney, he prosecutes his erstwhile employing lawyer on a murder charge and secures a conviction. The wife, confessing her secret to the Senator and being forgiven pleads with the convicted man to tell the world and the boy the truth of the relationship. Rather than ruin the boy's career, the man remains silent and insists on paying the penalty for a crime he really did not commit.

The cast which is making the picture appears to be adequate both as far as ability and name worth is concerned. Otto Kruger is the lawyer. Douglass Montgomery is the boy. Thurston Hall and Nana Bryant are "Senator" and "Mrs. Mattox." The girl about whom the slight thread of romantic contrast revolves is Jacqueline Wells. Supporting players listed are Gene Morgan, Marc Lawrence, Robert Warwick and Stanley Fields.

The story is an original by Harold Shumate, author of many dramatic stories made by Columbia. Fred Niblo, Jr., Grace Neville and Lee Loeb collaborated on the screen play. John Brahm is directing.

DUKE OF WINDSOR'S WEDDING FILMS BANNED IN BRITAIN BY 'AGREEMENT'

English Newsreel Executives Accede to 'Suggestions' That Exhibition Would Not Interest Public; Reels Rushed to U. S.

Newsreel films of the wedding of the former King of Great Britain and Ireland and of the Dominions beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith and Emperor of India to Mrs. Wallis Warfield reached American theatres late this week after a transatlantic race against time which rivaled that staged for the coronation picture. Audiences in England and the Dominions, closer to if not more interested in the event than the rest of the world, will not see them.

"Suggestions" from high authority convinced motion picture officials in England that there would be no interest in the pictures of the ceremony. It was reported this week, and indications were that similar "suggestions" would lead to an agreement not to show the pictures in the far-flung British dominions.

The pictures were to be shown in New York theatres on Friday after a dash across the Atlantic to Quebec on board the Empress of Britain and thence by air to the New York laboratories. The pictures were made by Andre Conquet, Paramount News staff cameraman in Paris, and were the only motion pictures permitted to be made inside the grounds of the Chateau de Cande at Monts, France, where the romance attained its consummation.

Because of Mr. Conquet's constant attendance at the chateau and daily contacts with Herman L. Rogers, the Duke of Windsor's American friend, he was chosen by Mr. Rogers to make the pictures of the Duke and Duchess. Paramount agreed to supply prints of all its films to each of the other companies, News of the Day, Fox Movietone, Pathe News and Universal.

While no pictures of the actual marriage ceremonies within the chateau were permitted the Duke and Duchess readily posed after the wedding. The reels include complete scenes of the chateau from the ground and the air, scenes of the English vicar who defied his government and church to perform the religious ceremony, as he arrived; the wedding guests; news reporters and photographers in top hats and formal attire, as they were for the recent coronation, and shots of the newlyweds as they descended the steps and posed for the cameramen.

After his pictures were made Mr. Conquet flew back to Paris, where the films were developed and prints made for all the reels. The Empress of Britain was the fastest ship available and although she was sailing for Quebec the companies believed they could make faster time by flying the films from the Canadian city to New York than by waiting for later boats sailing direct.

"Agreed" to Ban Pictures

Reporting an agreement between the British Government and motion picture officials under which the pictures would not be shown in England an Associated Press despatch from London this week said:

"The British public, the newsreel executives were said to have been led to believe, was so enraptured still with the coronation of Edward's successor they would not care for pictures of the Duke's wedding. Consequently, the executives decided to discard the films from Monts.

CORONATION FILMS INCREASE SHIPMENTS

An increase of 145 per cent in the number of films and photographs handled by the Air Express Division of Railway Express Agency at New York City in May, 1937, compared with May, 1936, is seen as reflecting in part the importance of the coronation of George VI as an event of worldwide interest.

The total number of shipments in and out of New York City for last month was 5,722, the report showed. For the corresponding month a year ago the total was 2,336.

"The Daily Express, the only London paper to comment on the decision, informed its readers:

"'You will have to go to France or America—or maybe Russia—to see them, thereby proving that, though a large-sized piece of humbug is talked over here about freedom from censorship and from what not, the imperial British people are still treated as a mentally deficient race.'"

Gerald Sanger of British Movietone News and spokesman for the newsreels in England, was quoted as explaining, "It was felt that to release films of the wedding might reawaken painful emotions and even lead to invidious demonstrations in the theatres."

Anyway, Mr. Sanger said, the pictures were not so good. "They were merely animated facsimiles of the photographs that appeared in the press."

The United Press reported that the newsreel companies had received "strong but indirect hints from official quarters that it would be 'good policy' not to include pictures of the wedding" in releases for the Empire. The report added, "It was intimated that any company ignoring the hints might encounter difficulty in obtaining passes for the filming of official functions."

Canada, Australia and the other Dominions had not taken any definite action this week in the matter but it was believed a similar procedure would be followed when the newsreels arrive there. At the British Consulate and at the British Library of Information in New York it was said that the Dominions have no official, central body with the power to ban pictures and that any decision to keep the pictures from screens in those countries would have to come by an "agreement" similar to the one made in England.

Industry Honors Kalmenson

More than 350 friends and industry associates attended the testimonial dinner at Pittsburgh last Friday night to Ben Kalmenson, recently promoted from Pittsburgh to New York by Warners. Joseph Bernhard, S. Charles Einfeld, Roy Haines and Bob Smeltzer, who were in Pittsburgh for a regional meeting, attended the affair. Harry Seed, manager of the local Warner exchange, was chairman of the dinner.

Paramount News Shelves Pictures of Fatal Riots in Chicago as Too Gruesome, Contrary to the Good of the Public Newsreel pictures of the Memorial Day rioting at the Chicago South Side plant of the Republic Steel Corporation which resulted in the deaths of seven men will not be shown on any screen, according to A. J. Richard, editor of the reel. Paramount was the only newsreel to get any pictures of the actual rioting.

"Public policy," Mr. Richard said, dictated the "shelving". He explained that his company feared exhibition of the pictures in "certain sections of the country might very well incite local riot".

The Paramount editor's explanation was made in telegrams, sent in answer to inquiries, to the Chicago Times and Professor Paul Douglas, chairman of a protest meeting held in Chicago under the auspices of the Citizens' Rights Committee.

The telegram to Professor Douglas said:

"Our pictures of the Chicago steel riots are not being released any place in the country for reasons reached after serious consideration of the several grave factors involved. First, please remember that whereas newspapers reach individuals in the home we show to a public gathered in groups averaging 1,000 or more and therefore subject to crowd hysteria while assembled in the theatre. Our pictures depict a tense and nerve-wracking episode which in certain sections of the country might very well incite local riot and perhaps riotous demonstrations in theatres leading to further casualties.

"For these reasons of public policy which we consider more important than any profit to ourselves these pictures are shelved and so far as we concerned they will stay shelved. We act under editorial rights of withholding from the screen pictures not fit to be seen. This parallels the editorial rights exercised by newspapers of withholding from publication news not fit to be read."

Cameraman Gets Cross

The Distinguished Flying Cross, awarded by the United States Government in recognition of outstanding feats of aviation, was presented to Carl C. Petersen, radio technician and cameraman for Paramount News, at Naval District Headquarters in New York this week. Mr. Petersen, a lieutenant in the naval reserve, received the medal in recognition of his participation in 21 flights during the eight months he spent in Antarctica with Admiral Richard Byrd on his second expedition.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

P. A. (Percival Aloysius) McGuire, vociferous exponent of the product of International Projector Corporation, might investigate a projector just arrived at New York's Cooper Union Museum, from France. Mr. McGuire will learn that old King Vittorio Amadeo of Savoy and his Queen, Maria Antoinetta, toyed with the idea of projection 150 years ago.

A "guioco di luce" (play of light) device, one of the very earliest forerunners of the modern motion picture projector, is the new acquisition of Cooper Union, reputedly the only machine of its kind ever brought to the United States and one of the few known to exist anywhere. It was purchased from a French dealer in antiques who had discovered it recently in a mass of odds and ends in an old French chateau.

Apparently constructed about 1780 for the amusement of King Vittorio and Maria Antoinetta, the device is dated by its covering Italian wallpaper of the period, and by rhymed couplets inscribed in faded Savoyard Italian on the backs of cards, one of which bears the legend, "Vive la Maison Royale de Savoie." The ciphers of the King and Queen appear together on one of the interchangeable designs.

The device is a cabinet 30 inches high, 22 inches wide, and 12 inches deep. Its effect depends on the synchronization of light and movement. A lamp is arranged inside to shine through cards pierced in flowing designs and turned by a sandwheel.

No Comment Department*, from Red Kann's observations on "I Met Him in Paris," in his Insider's Outlook column in Motion Picture Daily:

> "This high comedy was designed for fun. . . . It appears that all her life Claudette Colbert, a fashion designer, has wanted to go to Paris. Finally she does and there she meets Robert Young, a romantic and irresponsible playboy, and Melvyn Douglas, a wise-as-an-owl playwright with a defeatest complex. They both rush her with a vengeance and by the time they take off for two weeks of winter sports in Switzerland, all in the cause of 'good, clean fun', Young and Douglas are in love and Miss Colbert doesn't know exactly where she stands herself. Douglas understands Young's objectives are not exactly spiritual and besides he's married, about which the very attractive Claudette is kept in the dark. . . ."

"Color-conscious" patrons of motion pictures have a wide choice of shades for their selection these days, what with "Black Legion" and "White Hunter," "Yellow Cruise," "Green Light," "Crimson Circle" and "Yellow Cargo," "The Case of the Black Cat" and "The Case of the Velvet Claws," "Big Brown Eyes," "Red Lights Ahead" and "Blue Danube Romance," "White Angel," "White Glove," "White Fang," and "White Squadron," "Green Pastures," "Yellow Dust" and "Yellowstone," to mention a few.

Paramount Pictures Corporation, mid-way in production, got a change of mind on the title of "Adventure—With Music," and has substituted "Good Night, Ladies."

"William P. Bernfield," writes Landon Laird, movie critic, in the Kansas City Star, "variously known on Film Row as 'The Senator' and 'The Vivid Voice of United Artists'"—he's their press agent out there—"is a man whose heart and soul are wrapped up in exploitation and who loyally thinks each of his firm's pictures represents the ne plus ultra of entertainment.

"Describing a current release, Bernfield told newspaper critics enthusiastically: 'It's a laugh riot, better than 'It Happened One Night.' Honestly, you'll have to hold your sides, etc. It'll kill you, believe me!' etc.

"So his listeners saw the film and witnessed, in succession and with growing intensity: A murder. A threat of execution to an innocent man. A ship disaster on the Atlantic. Passengers abandoned to their fates, singing 'Nearer My God to Thee,'" etc. Some fun.

Out in the Dust Bowl—specifically, southwestern Kansas—where there hasn't been a crop in six years, where the dust blows practically every hour on the hour, where "we-view-with-alarmers" have found a fertile field for motion picture camera and author's typewriter—out on the Great American desert they have a new worry. They don't believe now they'll have enough machinery in the area to harvest this year's wheat crop! And motion picture exhibitors are swelling with joy!

Researchers on the WPA Federal Writers' Project in New York stopped work on the compilation of their motion picture bibliography just long enough to discover, for an animal bibliography, that the "ounce," long known as a symbol of measurement, is, of all things, a snow leopard which resides in altitudinous regions where the snow never melts, principally in Tibet and southern Siberia.

Gilbert Seldes sounds an ominous note in the New York Evening Journal to motion picture advertising writers:

"On the marquees of the big theatres, Garbo simply loved Taylor in 'Camille,' but now," he complains, "the neighborhood houses have the picture and they announce 'Garbo Still Loves Taylor in Camille.' The next step is for Garbo to marry Taylor in 'Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea.'

"The men who make up the ads seem to think that movies aren't good enough in themselves," continues Mr. Seldes. "They advertised 'Lloyds of London' by giving the grand total of insurance written by that house 'through the ages,' and 'Rembrandt' got a financial rating on the value of the pictures the original gentleman of the same name had painted."

"I am not as wrong about the movies as I am about most things," Mr. Seldes confesses, "but I still hesitate to give the producers any advice. They won't take it—and besides they make millions and I don't. Nevertheless, I think this Garbo-loves-Taylor formula is leading into a blind alley.

"It will kill off the little acting that there is on the screen. And if the horrid moment should come when Garbo would have to poison Taylor in 'Hamlet,' the audience would rebel."

All things being equal, Odd McIntyre was telling Will Hays, he chooses the movie that shows a Mickey Mouse. And the General wondered if Mr. McIntyre knew one of the big highlights in Mickey's creation aside from his humility and stressing the old-fashioned Virtue-Ever-Triumphant theme.

Mr. McIntyre said that in the studio in Hollywood where Mickey is turned out, there is no private profit, because of an economic theory that profit is an enemy of progress. Whilst all employees receive high pay, he added, Walt Disney himself gets an income so inconspicuous that it would twitch an eyebrow when judged by Hollywood standards. Our understanding is, however, that Disney draws plenty.

Mr. McIntyre also told Mr. Hays that it would be difficult to think of a more aptly named race horse than one owned by Kay Kamen, Walt Disney's New York representative. The gee-gee's name is Snap Judgment by Chance Shot out of Unconcerned.

But Mr. McIntyre did not tell Will Hays that one day recently, at the very tail end of the cold weather, when spring was just starting to peek through the wintry soil, he took his raccoon coat out for an airing. Donning it, he ran a half block to catch a bus and a smart alec yelled: "Hurry, Egbert, or you'll miss chapel!"

The United States Government is pretty tough on citizens found hoarding or otherwise possessing gold. They got Congress to legislate gold out of private possession, and slap a fine of plenty on anyone caught with the precious metal.

Hollywood, however, has employed its glitter and glamour, via Marlene Dietrich, to get the okay of Uncle Sam to use the stuff in a manner that is typically Hollywood. The United States Government this week gave Marlene permission to use gold dust to enhance the beauty of her blonde hair.

Miss Dietrich gave up the use of genuine gold and adopted a substitute when Congress passed legislation prohibiting the private holding of gold, in 1933. However, at the start of "Angel," Ernst Lubitsch, director, urged her to return to real gold dust after Charles Lang, cameraman, discovered that the genuine gold dust is definitely superior in photographic results to the gilt substitute.

Time was when a Kentucky Colonelcy was the dubious honor of the day. Next they started handing out Admiralcies in the commercial air lines. Hollywood, of course, was always out in the front ranks of recipients. They have a way about them out on the California movie coasts of "winning" such epaulets, and a loud fanfare of publicity usually attends each "commission."

The latest quirk of this nature now seems to be a chiefship in a South Sea Island tribe, Monogram Pictures formally announcing that Mrs. Wallace Reid, their producer, has been acclaimed Honorary Chieftainess by the chiefs of the island of Lauli'i in Samoa, with the title of "Sina Lauli'i." Mrs. Reid has been given a "diploma" with the signatures of some 14 Samoan chiefs, euphoniously named Tia, Pele, Salanoa, Pelo, Toamaga, Savia, Tia, Ava, Soi, Deleafio, Puilipi, Aulavia, Ta and Puolo.

OVER 200 PLAYERS TEE OFF IN ANNUAL FILM GOLF TOURNAMENT

Nine Teams and Forty Foursomes Battle on the Greens in Westchester for Scores of Prizes and Trophies in 25th Event

The motion picture industry in and around New York turned on Wednesday from film product drives to golf drives, and the hills of Westchester, near Elmsford, resounded to their whacks, and to the cracks of the "kibitzers" who stood threateningly on green and fairway. The occasion was the 25th Film Daily Golf Tournament, conducted by (Kentucky) Colonel John Wilde Alicoate, publisher.

There was a tennis tournament, a ping pong jousting for Broadway's would-be lifeguards; there were big eats and a gab fest at night, a Mickey Mouse preview and an accordion band. For those who insisted on golf, the course at Elmsford Country Club was available. And in that connection the big event of the day was the team match for the E. F. Albee Silver Trophy, with sides drawn between Captain Charles Einfeld and his Warnerites, Captain Ralph Rolan and his Terrifying Ampaites, Captain Jimmy Cron and his Trade Paper Collegians, Captain Gordon White and the Educationalists, Captain Ted Curtis and Eastman Kodak's Demons, Captain Monroe Greenthal and the United Artists Divots, Captain Jules Levy and his RKO Swingsters, Captain Tom Gerety and the MGM Lions and Captain Arthur Dickinson and his Hays Office Conservatives. The net results are listed elsewhere.

Prizes and souvenirs donated for the competition were pentiful enough to insure awards even for the players who still are trying to blast their way out of the sand traps around the first hole.

Tournament prizes awarded after the banquet were as follows:

Team Winners
Albee Memorial Cup, The Film Daily Medals, Ross Federal Service and United Fruit Growers prizes
Warner Bros.: S. Charles Einfeld, captain; A. W. Warner, Sam Sax, Robert Williams, H. M. Warner.
First Team Runner-up
American Seating Company prizes

Tentative.*

Three sales meetings set for this week and next will bring the annual pre-season convention period nearly to a close with only two large distributors remaining on the list. The exhibitor already has in hand program announcements which include 335 features promised for 1937-38 by seven companies whose salesmen are now on the road with portfolios and contracts for the new product.

Paramount delegates met at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, on Thursday, and the company's product is listed on page 41; the first of two United Artists sessions will open at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, New York, on Monday, and RKO Radio representatives will convene, also at the Ambassador, next Wednesday.

Gaumont British will open a three-day national convention at the St. Moritz Hotel, New York, on June 25th, and Columbia's sessions will start the following day in Los Angeles.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Monogram, Warner Brothers, Grand National, Universal, Twentieth Century-Fox and Republic have held their meetings and begun their sales campaigns.

Paramount announced between 50 and 60 pictures for the new season. The company has more than 125 story and stage properties from which to select its schedule and the program will be flexible enough to allow production of timely subjects.

Following the convention, which will close on Sunday, there will be a series of regionals with Charles Reagan, western division sales head, and J. J. Unger, eastern and Canadian division manager conducting them in various key cities.

The home office delegation which arrived in Los Angeles on Wednesday for the meeting included; Neil F. Agnew, Charles Reagan, J. J. Unger, G. B. J. Frawley, Alec Moss, Herman Lorber, Arthur Dunne, Knox Haddow, Fred Leroy, Jack Roper, Larry Flynn, Bob Moriarty, Don Velde and George Weltner. Also on the train were Fred Lange, Paris office; John Day, Buenos Aires; Albert Deane, A. J. Richards, Lou Diamond, Russell Holman, Louis Phillips and A. O. Dillenbeck of Buchanan and Company.

The convention program opened Wednesday evening with special screenings of new product. Thursday morning the welcoming address was given by Mr. Agnew. Mr. Unger discussed the 100 Per Cent Club. Charles Reagan, western division manager, awarded prizes to winning district and branch managers and salesmen in the Adolph Zukor Silver Jubilee sales drive, and George Weltner addressed the foreign delegates. The afternoon session included talks by Mr. Phillips of the legal department; Lou Diamond, head of short subject sales, and A. J. Richards, editor of the Paramount newsreel.

Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board and production executive, will speak on Friday morning and will introduce William LeBaron, A. M. Botsford and Russell Holman. Mr. Agnew will make the product announcement after lunch and will discuss the sales policy for the new season. Robert M. Gillham, director of advertising and publicity; Alec Moss, A. O. Dillenbeck and Don Velde will also speak.

Separate meetings with district and branch managers will be held on Saturday morning and a visit to the studios will follow. A buffet dinner in the evening will conclude the convention.

United Artists

United Artists executives, owners and producers will meet for the annual sales conference at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, New York, on Monday, at which a program of 20 features, exclusive of the product to be made by Alexander Korda, will be outlined.

Home office executives who will attend the meeting include: George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager; A. W. Smith, Jr., general sales manager; Harry D. Buckley, vice-president; Paul Lazarus, head of contract department; Harry Gold, eastern division manager; Jack Schlaifer, western division manager; James A. Mulvey, Goldwyn eastern representative; Rodney Bush, Wanger eastern representative; Emanuel Silverstone, Korda representative; Hal Horne, associate producer, Walter Wanger; Monroe W. Greenthal, director of advertising and publicity; Lowell Calvert, Selznick eastern representative; Matt Littman, Criterion Films representative, and Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of foreign sales.

The New York meeting will be followed by a three-day session at the Palmer House, Chicago, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week for district managers and exchange representatives from the midwestern and western territories.

RKO Radio

Leo Spitz, president of RKO, arrived on the coast this week to complete preliminary details of the convention which will open next Wednesday at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles. The company is expected to announce 54 features.

Foreign representatives of the company who will attend in addition to home office executives and field forces include: Douglas Lotherington, general sales manager for New Zealand; Clair E. Hilgers, managing director in France; Reginald Armour, far eastern sales manager; Ralph Hanbury, managing director in Great Britain; Ben Y. Cammack, general manager in South America; Luis Lezama, general manager in Mexico; Fred S. Gulbransen, general manager in Panama, and Bert Reisman, home office representative with headquarters in Havana.

Committees Named

Jules Levy, general sales manager for RKO, named the various committees which will officiate at the company's annual sales convention, as follows:

General Committee—A. A. Schubart, M. G. Poller and Howard S. Benedict.

Reception Committee — Sid Rogell, Joe Nolan, Louis Shapiro, Dave Garber and Perry Lieber, representing the studio. Newton Jacobs, Los Angeles branch manager, and his salesmen, S. W. Whitehead, J. Rubinstein, G. R. Giroux, Harold Anderson, Howard Clark and John Smyth.

Transportation Committee—W. J. McShea and William Gengenbach.

The company will complete seven features this month before closing the 1936-37 season. Among them are: "Vivacious Lady," starring Ginger Rogers; "A Damsel in Distress," starring Fred Astaire; "A Love Like That," starring Barbara Stanwyck, and two untitled stories to star Katharine Hepburn and Claudette Colbert. Other releases are "Gunga Din" and "Flight from Glory."

In addition to these "The Toast of New York," "New Faces of 1937" and "Super Sleuth" are being edited, and three others, "Take the Heir," "Hideaway" and "Make a Wish" are before the cameras.

Columbia

Columbia Pictures home office executives are completing plans and product details in connection with the annual sales convention which will be held at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, the week of June 27th. Approximately 250 delegates from the field and home office will attend the session, the first to be held by the company on the coast since 1929.

Both Harry and Jack Cohn, president and vice-president, will be present at the meetings, which will be presided over by Abe Montague, general sales manager.

David Loew, producer of the Joe E. Brown pictures, will transfer his distribution to Columbia for the 1937-38 season under the terms of a two-picture contract he recently signed with that company. He expects to deliver the first production in the fall.

Louis Weiss has started production on "Frank Buck in the Jungle," the first of four serials for Columbia's new season. The cast includes Frank Buck, Reginald Denny, Esther Ralston, Charlotte Henry, William Bakewell, Clarence Muse, Duncan Renaldo, Snub Pollard, Willie Fung and Sacha Sienel.

Winners in all divisions of the Montague Sweepstakes sales campaign which opened January 17th and ended May 1st were announced this week at the home office. Leaders in the 34 final awards were: J. J. Rogers, Memphis, and Phil Dunas, Chicago, in the 15-week billing and collection drive; Harry Weiner, Philadelphia, and Sam Galanty, Washington, for general performance; Sam Moscow, southern division, in the divisional managers' contest; C. Patterson, Charlotte, and G. S. Vojae, Cleveland, in the short subject unit shipments contest; J. J. Rogers, Memphis, and Lester Zukor, Cleveland, in the branch managers' four-week collection drive, and the salesmen and bookers of the New Orleans and Pittsburgh exchanges in the four-week billing contest.

Maurice Conn

Pinky Tomlin will star in four musicals for Maurice Conn, in addition to two which he is making under his present contract. The new pictures will be given heavier budgets than previous productions and are listed for 21-day shooting schedules.

Gaumont British

The three-day GB national sales convention will open at the St. Moritz Hotel, New York, on June 25th. Arthur A. Lee, vice-president, and George Weeks, general sales manager, will preside at the sessions.

Completion of "Dr. Syn," the new George Arliss starring vehicle, will mark 95 per cent of the company's current program as finished. Release dates on "King Solomon's Mines" and "Gangway" are not yet determined but prints of both are expected this month, according to Mr. Lee.

"King Solomon's Mines" was many months in production, considerable time having been spent on location in Zululand. In the cast are Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Anna Lee, Roland Young, John Loder and Paul Robeson. "Gangway" is the second Jessie Matthews musical of the season. The score is by Sam Lerner, Al Goodhart and Al Hoffman.

Grand National

Seven of next season's program of 65, announced at the Grand National convention May 16th, have been completed and are awaiting release. The pictures are "Love Takes Flight," "Sweetheart of the Navy," "Bank Alarm," "Trailing Trouble," "Boots of Destiny," "Frontier Town" and "Small Town Boy."

THREE DIMENSIONS FOR MICKEY MOUSE

Walt Disney is reported to have developed a device to obtain third dimensional effect in his cartoons and will use it in his new RKO releases. The process consists of placing celluloid strips on which the characters are inked on different, movable planes under the cameras. As the action takes place the strips move and the planes move together or recede against the stationary background to give the impression of depth on the screen.

The cartoon producer is now at work on three feature length pictures. Nearing completion after two years is "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" in Technicolor, which will be ready before the end of the year. Two additional features are expected to supplement the regular program of 18 miscellaneous shorts.

In production are "Something to Sing About," "Face the Facts," "Gorgeous," "Flash Casey," "Wallaby Jim in the South Seas" and "Renfrew of the Mounted."

Eric Linden has been signed for four pictures, George Huston, four; Rod LaRocque, four; Conrad Nagel, four; James Cagney, three and Anna Sten, three, it was announced after the convention.

The company will make one outstanding picture to be played on a percentage basis, 24 features to be played on a percentage and rental basis and 40 on a flat rental basis, Edward L. Alperson, president, said.

Plans have been announced for a simultaneous world premiere of the Andrew L. Stone musical, "The Girl Said No," in Washington and Boston this Month.

Phoenix Pruductions has made tentative arrangements with Grand National for distribution of 12 pictures.

Imperial

Four regional meetings will be held by Imperial Pictures. The first, in New York July 4th, will be followed by sessions in Chicago, New Orleans and San Francisco.

New franchises granted by the company recently include ones for Philadelphia, Dallas, Buffalo and Albany.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Actors, writers, producers and directors are being assigned for MGM's next season productions. At the convention in Los Angeles the week of May 2nd a program covering a minimum of 44 and a maximum of 52 pictures was announced.

Seven new player contracts in one week were signed at the studios. The players are John Boyle, Robert Grandin, Roger Converse, Tom Rutherford, Priscilla Lawson, Boyd Crawford and Douglas McPhail. Herbert Stothart, composer and conductor who handled the musical details of "Rose Marie" and "Maytime," has been signed to a new contract and is currently handling the musical direction of "The Firefly."

George Fitzmaurice has been assigned to direct "Wedding Dress," in which Robert Montgomery will be starred. The director recently finished work on "The Emperor's Candlesticks," co-starring William Powell and Luise Rainer.

According to a recent studio announcement James F. FitzPatrick will dramatize all future Traveltalks for MGM, using folklore and music of the localities filmed.

Monogram

Three feature pictures and a musical western will go before Monogram cameras this month to bring the total of the company's productions in work to nine. "Telephone Operator," by John Krafft, and "Port of Missing Girls," by Edwin C. Parsons, started this week with Lon Young as associate producer on both pictures. Although a cast has not been selected "Circus Lady," by Marian Orth, will start production within three weeks. "West of the Rainbow's End," first in a series of Jack Randall musical westerns, has also started with R. N. Bradbury directing.

Of the 26 features and 16 westerns on the Monogram program for 1937-38 four are being made ready for release. "Blazing Barrier," a story of the Civilian Conservation Corps, stars Frank Coghlan, Edward Arnold, Jr., and Florine McKinney. Also being edited are "The Outer Gate," with Ralph Morgan; "The Legion of Missing Men" and "The Thirteenth Man."

Dick Merrill, transatlantic flier, has been signed for the lead in "Atlantic Flight."

In the third week of the company's sales drive 40 per cent of the quota of $1,500,000 was reached, according to Edward Golden, sales manager.

Republic

Republic franchise holders were told at the final sessions of the convention in Los Angeles last week that the studio was attempting to get bigger names for the new season's product. A program of 30 features, 24 westerns and four serials was announced.

Among other draw names, James Cagney will be sought for one picture outside his Grand National contract, it was said.

Delegates were told that the unit system of production would be retained and that producers and directors would be held responsible for cast names.

J. J. Millstein, general sales manager, said that the remaining five features on the 1936-37 program would be delivered before the end of the season.

The convention concluded with a dinner dance and entertainment on Wednesday evening, and the home office executives journeyed to San Francisco for the first of four regional sales meetings. Grover C. Parsons, western sales supervisor, presided at the San Francisco meeting, which was attended by salesmen and bookers from San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Denver, Salt Lake City, Butte and Portland, Ore., exchanges.

The second regional meeting opened Wednesday in Chicago.

Standard Pictures

The newly formed Standard Pictures Corporation plans eight pictures for 1937-38. Officers of the company and of Standard Pictures Distributing Corporation are: B. W. Richards, president; Lou O'Brasky, vice-president; A. Butler, secretary-treasurer; S. J. Tilden, assistant, and Charles B. Taylor, Counsel. Mr.

Three to Hold Sales Meetings

O'Brasky is in charge of distribution and Emil DeRulle is production manager.

Titles of eight features are "The Deerslayer," "The First Woman," "Daughter of Ramona," "Big Business," "Argentine Takeoff," "Night School," "Lone Star" and "Bet a Million."

Twentieth Century-Fox

A total of 66 features, of which 52 will be produced at the Hollywood studios, was announced at the Twentieth Century-Fox sales convention, which concluded last Thursday in Hollywood.

Following the product announcement and addresses by Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, and John D. Clark, general sales manager, Sidney R. Kent, president, told the delegates that the present condition of the industry is comparable to that in 1929 despite the fact that admissions are 10 per cent lower and production costs 40 per cent higher.

European revenues, Mr. Kent said, show a 30 per cent increase over last year in spite of censorship and rumors of war. He stressed the danger to the American industry which would result from a general European war and said that the conflict in Spain had cost the company $1,500,000 thus far and had resulted in even greater losses to other companies.

Darryl F. Zanuck, production head, told delegates that the company had 65 junior players under contract and that each of them was being given opportunities of increasing importance as fast as they qualified. A total of 25 junior writers are also on the studio payroll, he said.

The company's product announcement appeared in Motion Picture Herald for June 5th on page 23.

Universal

Universal's program of 50, outlined at the convention May 17th to 20th in Los Angeles, will include 12 top bracket percentage pictures.

In preparation for the new season's production the company resumed its former system of one man control of both the story and talent departments in New York. Both departments were placed in charge of Charles Beahan, Universal story editor, with offices both at Universal City and at the home offices in New York. Close contact between the two offices will be maintained.

Claudia Morgan, under contract for one picture a year for the next three years, will appear in "The Lady Fights Back," on which production will start soon. The story is from a novel, "Heather of the High Hand," by Arthur Stringer.

Mike Marco of Fanchon & Marco has been signed by Universal as a producer. His first picture will be "The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady," with Pat Rooney, Pat Rooney, Jr., and Herman Timberg in the leading roles.

British International

Phillips Holmes will star in and direct two English made films to be released during the 1937-38 season by British International Pictures. The actor organized his own motion picture company in England last year and produced pictures which were also released through British International. Now in America, Mr. Holmes will return to England in September to start production.

Kestenbaum Resigns

Samuel S. Kestenbaum has resigned as advertising production manager of Grand National and leaves New York this week to become west coast publicity head of Condor Productions. Jack Kerness, formerly of Gaumont British, succeeds Mr. Kestenbaum.

ALL CHINESE DIALOGUE WILL BE IN MANDARIN

Nanking Government Seeks To Effect United Front With Aid of Hollywood

The motion picture is to be used to weld widely diversified China into one, wresting her scores of native tongues from the sleep of centuries, and giving the 500,000,000 inhabitants a single language, with Hollywood's aid.

James Wong Howe, the only Chinese cameraman in Hollywood, under contract to Selznick-International, disclosed Monday the plans aimed toward this result. The move is backed by the Nanking Nationalist Government.

Through the wholesale production of Chinese talking films, in which all talk would be in Mandarin, it is hoped that the ten major dialects and the hundreds of subdialects will eventually be unified into one. Once the existing barriers of such diversified language are eliminated, the Nanking Government believes the path toward China united would be cleared, according to the plans as explained by Mr. Howe.

T. J. Hoyt, one of China's outstanding motion picture exhibitors, is now discussing the plan in Hollywood with Cameraman Howe, with a view to engaging large numbers of Hollywood technicians for the unification productions. Mr. Howe was offered a position as chief adviser under the plan, Mr. Hoyt's trip having been sponsored by the Nanking Government.

Not generally known is the fact that China has several motion picture studios, three in Shanghai and one in Hong Kong among them. But these, Mr. Howe said, are far behind Hollywood in technical departments, and are still devoted largely to the production of silent films. The reigning Chinese star, said Mr. Howe, is a lovely girl billed on the screen as "Butterfly Wu."

Chinese Want Long Films

The Chinese are avid show-goers, who far surpass any possible audience in their liking for long shows. Most of their pictures are twice as long as the average Hollywood film, running from 15,000 to 20,000 feet.

This, Mr. Howe explains, is because the Chinese, not completely educated to the scene-changing of the imported picture, like to see all the action actually take place, instead of being implied at times. If an actor is to take a trolley car, the Chinese audience wants to see him walk to the corner, wait for the car, board it, and then ride to his destination, where they want to see him alight and walk to his final place.

In large Chinese centers, Mr. Howe said, Hollywood films are run as they are, without subtitles in Chinese. It is an added box office attraction, because so many Chinese, anxious to learn English, blend education with their entertainment.

Mr. Howe added that the Chinese have never forgotten America's return of the Boxer indemnity for educational use in China, and feel closer to the United States than to any other nation. Now the vast nation in the Orient is turning directly to Hollywood for aid in creating a united land.

China Asking Hollywood Aid

T. J. HOYT, observer for the Chinese Nanking Nationalist Government, and also one of China's leading exhibitors, on the set at Selznick International Studio, Hollywood, discussing with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., his government's plans for the wholesale production of Chinese talkers in the Mandarin language, as a means of unifying the language and people of his country.

Discouragement in Film Dialects Already Started

The new plan of the Chinese Nanking Government to eventually supplant the many Chinese dialects with Mandarin, as reported this week in Hollywood by James Howe, Chinese cameraman, really started, in test form, last year, when Nanking decreed that as a result of the liquidation of the Kwangtung independent government, the Cantonese dialect for picture purposes be thereafter discouraged.

The Motion Picture Section of the United States Department of Commerce, at Washington, reported last December that it was believed the Central Publicity Committee of the Nanking Government had ordered that the use of dialects other than Mandarin in native-Chinese motion pictures will be prohibited. However, all motion pictures with Cantonese or other dialect now in actual circulation shall be allowed to continue showing.

Cameramen Get Medals

Medals of distinction for meritorious work in covering the Italian campaign in Ethiopia in 1935-36 have been awarded by the Italian government to Herve Missir and Arturo Giordani, Paramount News cameramen. This brings the total of Paramount cameramen who have received medals up to three, John Dored having been awarded the 1936 medal of the Headliners Club for his pictures of the conquest of Addis Ababa.

1934 WAS THE TURNING POINT FOR EARNINGS

U. S. Treasury Department Takes Official Notice of Turn in Exhibitor Income from "Red"

Motion picture exhibitors of the country began definitely to pull out of the depression in 1934, it is disclosed by data made public this week by the U. S. Treasury Department at Washington, based on an analysis of corporation income tax returns for that year.

While only 773 out of 2,952 film theatre corporations operated "in the black" in 1933, it was shown, 1,327 out of 3,668 reporting for 1934 showed taxable net income.

The 773 tax-paying corporations reported an aggregate gross income of $159,032,000 for 1933 and a net income of $10,726,000, on which they paid income taxes of $1,524,000 and excess profits taxes of $24,000. The 1,327 corporations paying taxes for 1934 showed an aggregate gross income of $258,994,000 and a net of $19,804,000, on which income taxes amounted to $2,786,000 and excess profits taxes to $25,000.

The 1933 analysis showed 103 corporations inactive and 2,076 which paid no taxes, the last named group having an aggregate gross income of $284,884,000 and, after allowable deductions, a deficit of $44,927,000. In 1934, 168 corporations were inactive and 2,173 paid no taxes, having a total gross income of $194,072,000 and, after deductions, a deficit of $24,473,000.

The producing corporations also showed improved conditions, 76 out of 293 paying taxes in 1934 as against 42 out of 256 in 1933. The 76 which showed profits in 1934 had an aggregate gross income of $201,181,000 and a net income of $7,396,000 on which they paid income taxes of $1,031,000 and excess profits taxes of $33,000. The 42 profit-making corporations in 1933 had a gross of $27,176,000 and a net of $3,198,000 on which income taxes of $455,000 and excess profits taxes of $22,000 were collected.

There were 57 inactive corporations in 1934 as compared with 56 in 1933, and 160 which paid no taxes, having a gross income of $29,753,000 and a deficit of $3,417,000.

The number of profitable theatre corporations other than film, however, showed a marked reduction from 1933 to 1934, the department reported, dropping from 87 out of 536 to 75 out of 508.

The 75 profitable corporations in 1934 had an aggregate gross income of $6,987,000 and a net of $528,000 on which they paid income taxes of $73,000 and excess profits taxes of $6,000. The 87 tax-paying corporations in 1933 had a gross of $5,577,000 and a net of $499,000 on which they paid $68,000 in income taxes and $5,000 in excess profits taxes.

The number of inactive theatre corporations increased from 141 to 161, but the number "in the red" dropped from 308 to 272, the former, in 1933, having a gross income of $16,392,000 and a deficit of $7,153,000 and the latter, in 1934, having a gross of $9,616,000 and a deficit of $2,971,000.

THEATRE ADMISSION REACHES NEW LOW

New Orleans theatre managers have been known, in the past, to resort to any extreme to increase attendance, and business as well, but it was up to the operators of the Strand to set a new low this week.

When the Saenger interests first operated the house, it was unquestionably the most important theatre in the town and it charged the highest admission prices to do the best business. Joy Houck took over the theatre recently and set an admission price of 10 cents, any time, any seat. Business was not so good, so he cut that price in half for adults, providing they clipped a coupon from one of the morning newspapers. This week, Mr. Houck astounded Film Row by announcing that children would be admitted for only one cent.

Schools Film Committee Ends Second Year's Work

The Schools Motion Picture Committee in New York, composed of representatives of private and public schools, this week completed its second year in listing week-end programs of pictures in neighborhood theatres which were recommended for young persons. The lists are being discontinued with the closing of schools and will be resumed next October.

Last season the cooperating theatres increased from 34 to 200, and 12 junior and senior high schools were added. The committee, it was announced, will try next season to encourage producers and managers to run special programs for children under 12 years of age.

Woolams Appointed Cowdin's Assistant

Leonard A. Woolams of San Francisco was appointed assistant to J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board of Universal Pictures, on Tuesday. Mr. Woolams has had many years of motion picture and industrial experience. He took up his new duties at the Universal home office Wednesday.

Mr. Woolams was formerly a vice-president of Fox Film Corporation, having been appointed by President Edward R. Tinker to handle special work at the home office and in charge of finance in the west. He has served as a director of Banc-America Blair, the California Packing Corporation, Simmons Bed Corporation, United Parcel Service of America and United Parcel Service of New York.

Herbert Wilcox sails from London for New York at the end of this month or early in July with a print of "Victoria, the Great," starring Anne Neagle.

Universal Reports Second Quarterly Loss at $105,069

Universal Pictures Company, Inc. and subsidiary companies, report for the second quarter of its fiscal year, covering the 13 weeks to May 1, 1937, a consolidated net loss of $105,069, after all charges, federal and foreign income taxes, and provision of $78,234 for depreciation of capital assets. This compares with a net loss of $403,966 in the preceding quarter and with a net loss of $730,751 in the final quarter of the fiscal year ended October 31, 1936 (before extraordinary write-offs of $292,369 on certain of the company's foreign interests). In the corresponding quarter a year ago, the net loss, before crediting a profit on the sale of the entire capital stock of its British subsidiary, was $404,752. "The company's earnings are beginning to reflect the return from the substantial outlay on production necessary before an even flow of releases could be achieved," said the company's statement.

Mexico Starts Contest To Stimulate Radio

by JAMES LOCKHART

in Mexico City

To stimulate radio entertainment, a national contest for all Mexican and foreign writers resident in Mexico to produce playlets and other vehicles suitable for broadcasting has been started by the National Revolutionary Party, the political organization that dominates the Federal Government.

Any subject is permitted, provided it does not offend good taste, good manners and religions or religious beliefs. Entries in the contest must be so arranged that their minimum broadcasting is 15 minutes and the maximum 45 minutes. The contest will close July 15. The judges will be officials of the party and the Ministry of Public Education. Six prizes, ranging in value from 200 ($56) to 25 ($7.25) pesos, will be awarded.

Metro and Paramount Win A.I.C. Annual Honors

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Paramount divided honors at the annual awards dinner of the American Institute of Cinematography in Hollywood this week. The awards, in the form of metal plaques of honorary membership in the institute, presented by president Rufus B. Von Kleinsmid, were won by Luise Rainer for her performance in "The Good Earth," Spencer Tracy for "Captains Courageous" and by Lionel Barrymore, all of MGM. The Paramount winners were Cecil B. DeMille, Adolph Zukor and Borros Morris.

Tanner Now Patent Counsel

DeWitt C. Tanner has been made consulting patent counsel of American Telephone and Telegraph Company and Franklin T. Woodward, former assistant general patent attorney of Western Electric has succeeded him as patent counsel for the phone company.

20th-Fox Expects To Acquire Roxy About August 1

After months of litigation and uncertainty, the operation of the Roxy theatre on Broadway in New York is expected to finally be assumed by Twentieth Century-Fox on August 1, by which time, it is anticipated, Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey will have discharged the trusteeship. Last Thursday Judge Caffey approved the reorganization plan submitted by the first mortgage bondholders and which provides for a 20-year lease to Twentieth Century-Fox.

Interests identified with the present operation of the theatre estimate it will take about seven weeks to complete the mechanics of the reorganization. National Theatres, subsidiary of the distributor, is expected to be the parent company which will take over the Roxy. Negotiations whereby Fanchon and Marco will enter into a management contract under a long-term deal are expected to be resumed this week.

Howard S. Cullman, who has been in charge of the Roxy as receiver and trustee for the past four years, is expected to continue in an executive capacity. Artco, a Fanchon and Marco subsidiary, has held a management contract with Mr. Cullman since he was appointed receiver but this pact will expire with the close of the present trusteeship.

Plan Approval Forecast

In order to speed up the proceedings, Twentieth Century-Fox made a formal appearance in court last Friday as directed by Judge Caffey. The court said that no formal order confirming the plan would be signed until the terms of the 20-year film franchise to be issued for the Roxy and the final terms of the new Roxy mortgage indenture had been submitted. Otto E. Koegel of Hughes, Schurman and Dwight, attorneys for Twentieth Century-Fox, reported that the film franchise had been drawn already and assured the court that it "would meet the approval of at least 50 per cent of the attorneys present."

The court also instructed proponents of the plan to prepare the terms of the new mortgage indenture immediately and indicated that substantial savings in the cost of servicing the mortgage were to be expected from competitive bidding for the appointment of a trustee under the mortgage.

Spokesmen for the proposals of the plan informed the court that more than the required two-thirds of the first mortgage bondholders would consent to the plan, while representatives of the second mortgage gold note holders protective committee reported that the consents of the required two-thirds of that group were expected by June 16, two days before the next hearing on the reorganization plan.

Judge Caffey again denied a petition for a participation for Roxy stockholders, made by Samuel Hirschenstein, attorney, who urged that Class A stockholders be given some equity in the new reorganization.

The court, however, still held to its opinion, which said, "the tragic outcome for Class A stockholders is most unfortunate. It appeals to one's sympathy. Nevertheless, there is no escape from the court's attitude to enforce the law which definitely accords priority to the secured creditors."

Meanwhile, Samuel Kramer, counsel for the Class A stockholders committee, said that he would recommend to his clients that they accept the Twentieth Century-Fox offer to pay $1 a share for all Class A shares held prior to the receivership in 1932 and not to appeal from Judge Caffey's decision confirming the reorganization plan.

Culver City Wants the Credit For Making Hollywood Films

The battle of the chambers of commerce is on! Under the sponsorship of the Culver City, Cal., Chamber of Commerce, petitions are being circulated in that city, just outside of Los Angeles, to call an election on the question of the city's changing its name to Hollywood.

Said Blaine Walker, president of the Culver City chamber: "Our board of directors was unanimous in voting to change the name of Culver City to Hollywood. We believe the registered voters of the town will be almost 100 per cent back of the suggestion. Sixty per cent of the motion pictures made in California are made in our city, but we don't get the credit for it."

The studios located in Culver's confines are MGM, Selznick-International, Hal Roach, Victory, and others.

But Carl Bush, secretary of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, who recently led the drive to obtain a Hollywood postage "cancellation" mark for the Los Angeles branch post office there, is already mapping plans to fight the Culver City idea. Hollywood is only a suburb of Los Angeles, being within that incorporated city since 1910 when it dropped its own government to obtain Los Angeles water supply access.

"We have three plans to thwart the move," Mr. Brush said. "First is to confer with the Culver City chamber and show them the confusion that would occur.

"Second is to obtain an injunction in Superior Court pointing out that it would be bad public policy to call the election because of the confusion the name change would create.

"Third — and this is our real ace in the hole — to have the U. S. Post Office Department refuse to recognize the name change, if made, and still cancel their mail with the 'Culver City' mark."

Hollywood business men are particularly burned at the drive of the Culver City chamber. The tourist business, attracted by the film industry, is a big thing in this town to the merchants. So is the annual Hollywood Boulevard "Christmas Tree Lane", at which time the business men adopt special stickers for gift wrappers with the slogan "A Gift from Hollywood".

The war between the Hollywood and the Culver City chambers of commerce has reached comic opera proportions, but, underlying all the great newspaper space, the battle over Culver City's proposed changing of its name to Hollywood is a deadly seriousness on the part of the combatants.

Newspapers out there have been front-paging for days the story of the circulation of petitions in Culver City calling for the special election to determine whether the name change shall be made. Film press agents have climbed on the band wagon offering consensuses of their clients—mostly stars and directors—to newspapers. Both chambers' officials have issued statements deploring the other. The Culver City American Legion Post has endorsed the move to change the name. Blaine Walker, Culver booster president, who is a former newsreel producer, denied that the chamber move was merely a publicity stunt.

By next week, all Hollywood civic bodies probably will be drafted in a drive to stop the Culver City movement. Possibly the Hollywood Post American Legion will act, too, on the matter, asking their Culver City buddies not to support the name change.

The comic opera motif became even more pronounced on Monday when film stars filed into the trenches in Hollywood's struggle against Culver City's attack on the right to its name.

A Culver City cleaning and dyeing establishment changed its name to the "Hollywood Cleaners", and a Hollywood firm with the same name promptly served notice it would file suit on grounds of plagiarism. The possibility that Los Angeles might be embroiled appeared when, according to Associated Press, Hollywood's movie high command announced Hollywood would secede from Los Angeles if the worst comes. John Boles and Richard Dix formed the "Hollywood-for-the-Hollywoodians" division, both Mr. Dix and Mr. Boles declaring "it would be a crime to sit idly by and permit Culver City to usurp the name of Hollywood".

Suit Planned on "Spain" Ban

The police ban on the showing of the Spanish war picture, "Spain in Flames," in Waterbury, Conn., will be fought in the court by the Connecticut branch of the American Civil Liberties Union. The matter was turned over to the union by the local committee after the superintendent of police refused a permit for the picture which was shown in other cities of the state.

Japanese Film Censored

A protest was lodged this week by Japanese theatre officials at Shanghai against an order of film censors demanding elimination of three scenes from a Japanese picture, "The New Earth," which China said was Japanese-Russian propaganda. They said the film was an attempt to counteract the effect of the American film, "The Good Earth."

TAXES STILL A THREAT TO THE FILM INDUSTRY

Nine States and Congress Continuing Study of Taxes and Other Anti-Film Measures

By a strictly party division, the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives in Washington this week voted, 18 to seven, to make a favorable report on the Doughton measure extending the admission and other nuisance taxes for a period of two years.

Efforts of the committee to obtain discussion of repeal of the admission and other nuisance taxes and demands that public hearings be held before any was taken toward their continuance had, meanwhile, cut short committee consideration of the bill last week. In view of the smashing defeat last week of a revolt against the Administration on the relief bill, it was not expected that the movement for repeal of the admission tax would make much headway, nor would public hearings be called.

A "chain store" tax bill to include theatres was introduced in Wisconsin. Levies of five cents to $5 a seat are provided.

At the same time, exhibitors were being requested to ask the Ways and Means Committee for a hearing on the bill in a letter signed by Peter J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, working in conjunction with Walter Vincent of the Wilmer and Vincent circuit. In event the committee decides to hold the hearings, only two persons, Mr. Vincent and Mr. Wood, will appear to "clearly show that the treasurer will receive more money in income taxes by making the change."

The Massachusetts legislature this week closed a session in which a large number of bills viewed by motion picture industry leaders as unfavorable to the business failed to pass. Among the measures defeated were ones that would have established a two per cent sales tax, a chain store tax, regulation of billboards by individual cities and towns.

Reconsidering Sunday Bill

A measure providing for the opening of New Hampshire theatres at 4 o'clock, instead of at 6 o'clock, on the Sabbath in winter months is not meeting with much approval at Concord. Defeated in the state senate after coming from the Judiciary Committee with an unfavorable report, it was decided to reconsider measure.

Missouri defeated a $25 to $200-per-unit chain store tax, the while house members of the joint senate and house committee ironing out differences over the two per cent sales tax, have agreed to the senate amendments and passed the bill which now provides exemption of advertising; give retailers, including exhibitors, three per cent for the trouble of collection, and place an expiration date on the measure—May 31, 1939. The governor will sign the bill in two weeks.

ONTARIO THEATRES NOW FREE FROM TAXATION

For the first time in 20 years, theatre patrons in Ontario, Canada, can enter motion picture theatres without having to pay a few extra pennies out in taxes, for the province this week repealed the admission tax which has been in effect since 1917, when it was passed as a war measure.

The improved state of the Government's finances led to the abolition of the tax. The saving has been passed on to the public in practically every theatre.

In Kansas City, however, while there has been no ruling from the Tax Commission as to whether or not the two per cent sales tax in Kansas, effective June 1, applies to radio or screen advertising, it is being assumed by exhibitors that the tax does not apply, inasmuch as the commission has ruled it is not to be collected on newspaper advertising. Missouri collects its present one per cent sales tax on screen advertising. It also collects the tax on newspaper and radio advertising.

Ticket Tax Approved

The City Council Finance Committee this week approved a tax on tickets to Philadelphia amusements, including theatres, which Mayor Wilson expects will bring in $5,000,000 a year. The tax is applicable to every 25-cent admission or fraction thereof. Children under 14 and the blind are exempt from the tax. It is believed that other Pennsylvania towns pressed for funds will follow the lead of Philadelphia.

The action of the committee followed the appearance last week of Lewen Pizor and George P. Aarons of the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, who asked the committee to postpone consideration of the contemplated tax measures of the city. Besides the amusement measure approved already, there is also a measure calling for a tax of an undetermined amount to be levied on each foot of film shown by a theatre in lieu of the $100.00 license fee now bing paid; a franchise tax covering signs, marquees, poles, stands, oil intake pipes, showcases, sidewalk frames, etc., which is broader in its scope than present sign taxes and which becomes effective, after passage, on July 1; a billboard tax assessing each square foot of billboards, with the amount not yet specified; and a vending machine tax calling for $5.00 per machine that vends anything whatsoever.

Earle Signs Tax Bill

Governor Earle at Harrisburg, has signed the bill imposing taxes ranging from $1 up to $500 on each theatre in Pennsylvania, the amount levied to depend upon the number of houses included in the circuit. The law applies also to chain stores, a number of which were closed by their owners immediately following passage of the bill. The theatre tax will take the form of an annual license fee for the fiscal year beginning June 1. Theatres are given 60 days to make application for the license, as officials of the circuits concerned said that no closings are contemplated as a result of the law.

With the session of the Connecticut legislature scheduled to close at Hartford this week, and the Finance Committee allegedly opposed to the passage of any new tax bills, exhibitors are fairly certain of the defeat of the proposed 10 per cent admission tax measure. Governor Wilbur L. Cross has served notice on the legislature that regardless of their merits, he will have to veto nearly all of the special appropriations on the sole ground that the General Assembly has failed to provide the necessary funds. The perennial two-men-in-a-booth bill was defeated early in the session, while Sunday vaudeville was passed, subject to local option.

Reports from Boise, however, indicated that the sales tax bill, wiped from Idaho's statutes last fall in a general referendum, may be revived as a means of producing new school revenue.

The new Allied bill introduced in the legislature at St. Paul, Minn., and designated as a "license fee for operation of theatres," provides for a 5 cent seat tax for circuits comprising five theatres, one or more of which is in the state, and runs up to $5 a seat tax for circuits of 100 theatres, or over. The bill is not regarded as having much chance of passage, however.

Hicks Names Olsen To Schaefer's Post

Andre Olsen, who has been with Paramount Pictures for the past 11 years, has been appointed Central European manager of the company by John W. Hicks, head of the foreign department, to succeed Gustave J. Schaefer, who recently resigned to join Universal as head of foreign activities.

Mr. Olsen is now in the post with headquarters in Paris. He joined the company in 1926 in the Copenhagen office, then was transferred to Australia for two years. His next post was in Batavia, Java, where he remained six years, after which he came to the home office to study foreign operations for several months. Up to the time of his new appointment, Mr. Olsen was in the Berlin office.

Max Gordon Sails On European Trip

Max Gordon, head of Max Gordon Plays and Pictures Corporation, sailed from New York Wednesday on his annual European trip. Before he left he announced his company would produce the current Broadway hit, "The Women," as a motion picture along with two others not yet selected.

Paine Representing Ascap

John G. Paine, general manager of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, sails this week to represent the society at the World Congress of Performing Rights Societies to be held June 14-20 at Paris. He will also visit Rome Berlin and Vienna before returning.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by BRUCE ALLAN

in London

Buchanan Plans

Jack Buchanan Productions, Ltd., operating at Pinewood Studios with finance from the J. A. Rank interests, and with Mr. Rank as chairman, will produce a series of ambitious pictures, mainly starring Buchanan himself, with the American as well as the British market in view. Universal distribution in the States is a possibility, subject to J. Cheever Cowdin's approval of the product. In the British market, J. B. Productions will distribute through Universal's affiliate, General Film Distributors, controlled by C. M. Woolf.

In its first year's activity, the Buchanan unit plans five features and, in its second, eight at an average cost of £60,000 ($300,000). Of the first year's output three features will star Buchanan; the third is the most important, as Adele Astaire will co-star and Rene Clair will direct. Clair is scheduled for a second picture, probably in color, later. The first Buchanan feature, "Smash and Grab," in which the feminine lead is held by Elsie Randolph, is on the floor. It is a comedy; the second, "The Sky's the Limit," will be a musical, and the continental star Marie Losseff will be opposite Buchanan, who co-directs with Lee Garmes. "Sweet Devil," Tim Whelan directing Bobbie Howes and Jean Gillie is the other subject definitely set.

The big feature of the 1938 program will be a color version of John Gielgud's "Richard of Bordeaux," with that star repeating his West End theatre role.

Buchanan comes to New York in the Fall, for a stage production, and during the visit is likely to make extensive engagements over the air, for the purpose of building his American following, with the film releases in view.

Annabella's Third

Robert T. Kane, for New World Pictures, will make the third Annabella picture for Twentieth Century-Fox in Europe, where "Wings of the Morning" and "Under the Red Robe" already have been made with the French star.

Entitled "Follow the Sun," the new vehicle is a comedy drama by Roland Pertwee and Harold Schuster will direct interiors at Denham and exteriors at Paris, Cannes, Monte Carlo, Deauville and the Lido, beginning at the end of June. There will be a big array of fashionable clothes for Annabella, in line with New World's plan to put her over as the screen's best dressed woman prior to her arrival in Hollywood for the first American picture of her Twentieth Century-Fox contract.

Also with the American market in view, an established male star will be cast. Already signed are Paul Lukas and Romney Brent; the latter made a big comedy hit in England in "Under the Red Robe."

Hellman Film

Marcel Hellman, who has been associated with the Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. unit, Criterion Film Productions, has formed Excelsior Films and will make a first picture for the new unit at Denham, for London Films' release.

Directed by Thornton Freeland, and starring Jack Hulbert, the vehicle, entitled "The Playboy," will be a musical, with an original score by Mischa Spoliansky and Rex Harrison will have an important part.

Two further pictures went on to the floor at Denham this week, bringing the total to five in progress. The additions were the personally directed Victor Saville production, "South Riding," and the Arnold Pressburger "The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel," directed by Hans Schwartz. For early production is the first of the series to be produced by Guenther Stapenhorst, late of Ufa. This will mark Merle Oberon's return to activity after her car accident; she plays lead in a story which shows the life of the Russian ballet from the inside.

Films Victorians

Herbert Wilcox has finished the interiors of the picture "Victoria the Great," and has had the luck of exceptionally good weather for the first shots of a number of large-scale exteriors needed to complete the picture. Of special interest is a reproduction of a series of Buckingham Palace garden parties throughout the reign, which enables the introduction of such diverse celebrities as Charles Dickens, Sir Henry Irving and Sir Edward Elgar. The attempted assassination of the Queen on Constitution Hill is another outdoor scene and a Highland Gathering at Balmoral will be shot with torchlight effects. Finally to be shot, in colour, is the Queen's Diamond Jubilee procession to St. Paul's Cathedral and the Pageant of Empire which will be the screen climax.

Re-Make Jack London

Argyle Productions are producing at Welwyn studio, for Associated British Pictures release, a talking version of Jack London's "Mutiny of the Elsinore," a big silent success in its day. Production is temporarily held up by the difficulty of discovering a suitable player for the key role of "Mr. Pike," the brutal hard-driving mate of the "Elsinore" and, as a fact and not as a publicity stunt, the producer is considering using a complete unknown, of the photographic type needed, in the absence of available stars of McLaglen caliber. In the meantime he is considering and testing a large number of characters and small part players, one of whom may get an exceptional opportunity.

EXTRAS IN ENGLAND MAY BE PROTECTED

An assertion that extra players in British films were employed under conditions which made it necessary that they have Government protection was made in a debate on the Factories Bill in the Standing Committee of the House of Commons last week. Major Procter, M.P., made a point of the fact that players were not covered by the Workmen's Compensation Act. In effect this means that they cannot recover damages or compensation in case of injury.

A promise was made by Mr. Geoffrey Lloyd, Under-Secretary for Home Affairs, that an inquiry would be made into the conditions under which artistes are employed.

Captain Walter Summers is producing and Roy Lockwood directing the picture and a number of genuine wind-jammer shots have been obtained, to be matched at the studio, where a full size replica of the four masted square rigged barque used at sea has been erected.

Gracie Fields and Fox

Supplementing a New York cable which announced the assignment of Samuel G. Engel as associate producer on the first Gracie Fields picture for Twentieth Century-Fox, to be made in England, it was announced in London that "He Was Her Man," an original story by Philip Dunne, would be used. Also confirmed was that Monty Banks would direct.

The statement that the supporting cast would be a blend of American and British artistes confirmed the general belief that Twentieth Century-Fox, with Miss Fields as with "Annabella," is pursuing the policy of introducing new stars experimentally to the American public, in pictures made abroad, building them up for more ambitious work in Hollywood in due course. In the case of Miss Fields, the switch to the Coast is expected with her second film in the Fall.

Itemized

Strand Film Co., which has just concluded "Five Faces," a "Documentary" depicting life in the Federated Malay States, is making a series of twelve pictures of the inmates of the Zoological Gardens at Regent's Park and Whipsnade, under the supervision of Professor Julian Huxley. Two in colour will illustrate changes in animal pigmentation. "The Animal Kingdom" is the general title and Paul Rotha will direct.

William Beaudine is making in "Transatlantic Trouble," with Max Miller, his thirteenth consecutive film for Warner British at Teddington.

British Lion and Tom Arnold, Ltd., are making "It's a Fair Cop," as Sandy Powell's second picture at Beaconsfield.

More Mickey Clubs

Mickey Mouse Clubs in England are being nationalized by Oscar Deutsch of the Odeon Circuit, William Levy, head of Walt Disney-Mickey Mouse, Ltd., states. A committee has been set up to organize the clubs in more than 200 theatres. The clubs are designed to promote good fellowship and meet every Saturday morning.

The circulation of the Mickey Mouse Weekly, published every week by the company, has been increased to 500,000.

EQUITY MANAGEMENT DEFEATS INSURGENTS

Independent Faction and Progressive Committee Are Rebuffed After Hard Fight

The administration forces in the Actors Equity Association in New York, under the leadership of Frank Gillmore, president, won decisively over the independents and the "progressive committee's" tickets by electing a complete slate of officers and councilors, it was announced Monday by Lyster Chambers, chairman of the tellers' committee. The election was held last Friday at the Hotel Astor on Broadway.

Equity is expected, therefore, to continue with its present policies effected by the Gillmore regime, and including a decided ambition to continue actor unionization in Hollywood, as is now going forward through the Screen Actors' Guild, with which Equity is strongly affiliated.

Mr. Gillmore, elected president for a fourth term, trailed the administration's other candidates, having been opposed for the presidency by E. J. Blunkall, candidate of the Progressive Committee, which did not nominate other officers. The independents entered no candidates for office, limiting their choice to councilors. Burgess Meredith, indorsed for the council by both the administration and the independents, led the field of 36 with 1,022 votes.

The three tickets, for which a total of 1,198 valid ballots were cast, and the number of votes received by each candidate, follows:

*Indorsed by independents.
†Indorsed by progressive committee.

It was apparent from the total number of ballots that nearly 200 actors refrained from voting for the administration ticket of officers. The independents refused to indorse Mr. Blunkall on the ground that his committee was too right-wing in viewpoint.

Mr. Gillmore, whose supporters accused the independents of fostering dissension and ignoring the administration's record, declined to comment on his victory other than to express pleasure that his entire ticket had been elected.

Independents Disheartened

The independents were admittedly disheartened by their defeat, having expected to capture at least a few councilor positions, but promised to continue their fight at next year's election. They said the election was carried for the administration by a bloc of 465 votes from out-of-town

One of the subjects that brought about considerable discussion at the meeting was the financial report, which failed of acceptance and was referred back to the council by a considerable majority of those present. Robert Reed made the motion after George Heller attacked the report, contending that the financial statement was incomplete and that the assets were overestimated in valuation.

Two other resolutions, which had been rejected by the council, were referred back to that body for re-consideration. One had to do with the salaries of Mr. Gillmore and Paul Dulzell, executive secretary-treasurer, which the independents seek to control by constitutional amendment. The two leaders receive $19,000, of which amount Mr. Gillmore gets $12,500. The amendment proposes to fix Mr. Gillmore's salary not in excess of $7,500 and Mr. Dulzell's at $5,200.

The second proposed amendment, also referred to the council for reconsideration, proposes to reduce the dues to $15, a cut of $3 annually. Although that would reduce Equity's revenue, it is claimed by the independents that economies would more than balance the difference.

THEATRICAL UNIONS PLAN WPA PROTEST

Representatives of the American Federation of Labor unions concerned with the Federal Theatre Project meeting at the request of Frank Gillmore, president of Actors Equity Association, at the association's headquarters in New York Monday resolved to send to Washington a delegation to protest against the Woodrum amendment limiting the WPA appropriations to $1,500,000,000. New York senators and the Senate Appropriations Committee will be contacted. Maintenance of the project in its full strength will be demanded.

The committee will be composed of Fred Marshall, president of United Scenic Artists Local 829; David Freed, executive board, Local 802, Musicians Union; a member of the Washington office of the International Alliance of Theatrical, Stage Employes; a representative from the American Federation of Actors; Alfred Harding, representing Actors Equity, and Dorothy Bryant, executive secretary of Chorus Equity Association.

Employee Contract Valid, is Ruling In Sam Katz Case

The validity of executives' employment contracts in the state of New York was established this week in a unanimous decision by the United States circuit court of appeals in New York City upholding Sam Katz's action against Paramount, seeking $265,498. The action was based on the unexpired portion of his contract with the company after 1932, when his association with Paramount ended.

Mr. Katz's claim was filed against Paramount during the company's bankruptcy and reorganization proceedings and has been in litigation for the past three years. The claim was disallowed by Special Master John E. Joyce originally on the ground that Paramount was relieved of liability under the contract by Section 60 of the New York stock corporation laws which specify that the directors of a corporation may remove a contract employe "at pleasure." The special master's ruling was reversed later by Federal Judge Alfred Coxe, who held that Section 60 did not relieve the corporation of liability for removing a contract employe without cause. Judge Coxe, however, did not allow Mr. Katz's claim, but left that to be determined by a subsequent action to show whether or not Mr. Katz was wrongfully discharged and, if so, in what amount he was damaged. Judge Coxe's ruling was upheld by the United States circuit court of appeals.

Mr. Katz's contract was for three years beginning January 1, 1932, at $2,500 weekly and an option to purchase at stipulated prices a block of Paramount stock at the end of each six months. Mr. Katz's claim alleged that he was wrongfully discharged by the company on October 28, 1932.

IN COURTS

$15,000,000 Radio Suit in Settlement

A $15,000,000 treble damage suit filed by National Union Radio Corporation against Radio Corporation of America, RCA Manufacturing Company, General Electric and American Telephone and Telegraph under the Sherman anti-trust laws was settled in the federal court in New York Saturday except in the instance of A. T. and T. The plaintiff had charged unfair trade practices. Javits and Javits, its lawyers, said the action cancels mutual obligations and will eliminate a number of coincidental actions now pending in federal and New York courts.

Tally-Corbar Certiorari Plea Denied by Court

The United States supreme court at its final session in Washington last week before the summer adjournment issued an order denying the petition of certiorari brought by T. L. Tally and Corbar Corporation, general creditors, against Fox Film Corporation, Wesco Corporation and a group of subsidiaries and associates. Creditors sought to set aside bankruptcy adjudication on the grounds of fraud but the high court order sustained the decision of the lower court.

Order Messmer Testimony

Julian Messmer, president of the Ray Long and R. R. Smith Corporation, has been ordered by the federal court in New York to submit to examination before trial in connection with the corporation's action against Twentieth Century-Fox and Irvin S. Cobb. The suit charges infringement on the copyright on the stories "Down Yonder with Judge Priest and Irvin S. Cobb" and "Br'er Rabbit" in the Twentieth Century-Fox picture, "Judge Priest."

RKO Asking Dismissal

RKO Radio Pictures, RKO Distributing Corporation and RKO Studios this week will ask Federal Judge Samuel Mandelbaum in New York to dismiss the bill of complaint filed by Samuel Shipman and Clara Lipman on the ground that the complaint failed to state a cause of action. The plaintiffs allege infringement of their play, "Depend on the Woman," in the RKO picture, "I Dream Too Much." They asked for an injunction, damages and an accounting.

Ramona Appeal Lost

The appellate division of the New York supreme court this week upheld the decision of the lower courts in its refusal to grant Ramona Davies, pianist and singer, a temporary injunction restraining Paul Whiteman from compelling the plaintiff to perform service under a contract executed March 1, 1934. The plaintiff argued that the contract was not binding and lacked mutuality.

Set Fox Brooklyn Hearing

A hearing on applications for fees and expenses in the reorganization proceedings of the Flatbush Avenue and Nevins Street Corporation, owners of the Fox Brooklyn theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., has been set for June 21 by Federal Judge William Bondy.

Emmet J. Flynn, Director, Passes

Funeral services were held in Hollywood on Monday for Emmet J. Flynn, former director, who was found dead in his rooming house in Los Angeles last Friday.

Mr. Flynn was born in Denver, Colo., in 1892 and received his education there at Sacred Heart College. Following his graduation he entered the legitimate theatre as an actor and was on Broadway. He appeared first in pictures for Paramount in 1907 and after several roles he became an assistant director.

He directed Norman Kerry, Rudolph Valentino and Mary Pickford at the height of their success. Among his most widely known efforts were "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court" and "The Count of Monte Cristo."

Burkan Estate Is Valued at $511,258

The estate of the late Nathan Burkan, attorney, was valued at $511,258 by an accounting filed this week in surrogate's court in New York by the executors. The bulk of the estate was left to the widow and six-year-old son, the principal to accrue to the son on the widow's death.

Mr. Burkan's extensive library on copyright was bequeathed to the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, for which he was general counsel for many years. His law library was left to Charles Schwartz and Louis D. Frohlich, his partners and successors.

Monroe Owsley

Monroe Owsley, actor, died of a heart attack Monday while aboard a train en route from Los Angeles to San Francisco. Born at Atlanta, Ga., 35 years ago, he first entered the theatre in stock and made his debut on Broadway with Helen Hayes in "Young Blood." Later he appeared in "Holiday" and went to Hollywood, where he worked for several companies. Among his pictures was "Goin' to Town," for Universal.

Searching Victory Ruins

Although 25 players and studio workers escaped injury in the fire which destroyed the Victory studios in Hollywood, the ruins were still being searched Tuesday for possible victims. Among those who left the studio safely were Tom Tyle, Bobbie Rey, Jeane Martel, Roger Williams and Robert Hill, director.

Fox Unit Is Dissolved

A certificate has been filed in the office of the Secretary of State at Albany, N. Y., dissolving the corporate existence of Fox Film Distributing Corporation, New York City.

The Ohio censors reviewed a total of 584 reels in May, from which 39 deletions were ordered. This compares with 514 reels and 21 eliminations in May of last year. In April, 1937, 605 reels were reviewed, with 36 eliminations.

OBITUARIES

Phil Blum, Theatre Veteran, Is Dead

Philip Blum, veteran New Orleans theatre operator, died Monday at his home there at the age of 82. Funeral services were held Tuesday and burial was in Hebrew Rest Cemetery.

Mr. Blum, a native of Plaquemine, was in the theatre business 23 of the 53 years he lived in New Orleans. He retired about five years ago, at which time he was connected with the Saenger Theatre's Corporation. His start in the industry was with the Fichtenberg Enterprises.

G. F. Myers

G. F. Myers, 81, owner and operator of theatres in Carrolton, Texas, died at his home there last Thursday following a paralytic stroke.

A. E. Mainwaring

A. E. Mainwaring, veteran of the industry in England, died this week in London at the Cinema Trade Benevolent Fund's home. Starting with the Hepworth Company in 1909, Mr. Mainwaring was manager of Western Import for Harry Aitken before the war. He was originally an actor.

Paramount Takes Olympia Circuit

The operation of the former Olympia Theatres circuit in New England were assumed this week by Martin Mullin and Samuel Pinanski under their management contract with Paramount for New England Theatres, which has until 1940 to run. Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount vice-president and in charge of the company's theatre operations, participated in the formal transfer of the Olympia assets in Boston. The $4,000,000 cash bid of Mr. Mullin and Mr. Pinanski for the Olympia assets, which consist principally of 30 theatres in Massachusetts, was approved by the courts several weeks ago.

New England is a wholly owned subsidiary of Paramount.

Marshall Named to RKO Exploitation Post

Fred A. Marshall, former theatre manager, press and exploitation representative in various fields, was this week appointed public relations representative for Radio Pictures for the western district. His headquarters will be in Los Angeles and his operations will cover the exchange territories of Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Denver and Salt Lake City, and he will work in cooperation with district manager, Harry C. Cohen.

RKO Adds Theatre

RKO has taken over the Park Hill theatre at Yonkers, N. Y., as another link in its national circuit.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Parnell

(MGM - John M. Stahl)

Romantic Melodrama

A foreword to "Parnell" concludes: "Charles Stewart Parnell, the greatest patriot in all Irish history, fought against desperate odds to unite a nation divided against itself. He reconciled opposing factions and brought reason out of hysteria in an effort to obtain Home Rule for his long suffering people. Regarded by his enemies as a man who betrayed his country, he is revered by his followers as a man who his country betrayed."

Fact and legendary fiction have combined to make Parnell known to the world as "the uncrowned king of Ireland." Withal "Parnell" is the story of a man long idolized as a god by the persecuted turbulent forces he led, yet a mortal man subject to and unable to escape worldly temptations. As presently conceived by the writers, with Clark Gable portraying the character under John Stahl's direction, "Parnell" is a radically different type of man than the traditional concept of great Irishmen might vision him. By no stretch of imagination can the screen personality be considered Hibernian.

While in actuality and by illusion, the drama of political conflict has been incorporated into the picture, the essence of "Parnell" is the dramatic romance of a man and a woman. It presents real and believable human beings, swept by a force beyond any man's control, into a great crisis. Despite seemingly inconsistencies, the story is thoroughly plausible. As the central characters have their virtues as well as faults, none appear as mechanical automatons. Rather as it deals with people capable of all normal feelings of appreciation or disappointment, it carries a naturalness that achieves unique realism which adds much to the production's entertainment appeal and commercial value.

The day of Ireland's long fought for and cherished dream of Home Rule seems about to dawn. Alien "Parnell" has united to many inimical Irish factions. By diplomacy and tolerant compromise, he stands on the threshold of gaining the support of England's Prime Minister, "William Gladstone," for an Irish parliament in Dublin. A married woman, "Katie O'Shea," whom "Parnell" has met but often avoided, suddenly becomes a potent influence upon his career. Much as he loves his adopted country, he finds himself loving her more. His followers view the infatuation with fear. Exonerated of the charge of complicity in murder in a sequence in which the performances of defense attorney "Sir Charles Russell" and witness "Pigott" can be depended upon to stir audiences deeply, "Parnell" announces to his followers that "Gladstone" has approved their plan for an Irish parliament. The emotional appreciation of the Irish race is superlatively expressed by "Old O'Brien."

But "Parnell" is soon involved in a circumstance more menacing to Irish hopes and his own career than anything that had ever happened before. Disappointed because political favors are denied by the now triumphant "Parnell," "Willie O'Shea" files suit for divorce, naming the leader as correspondent. Because of his love for "Katie" "Parnell" makes no defense. England and Ireland seethe to the details of the scandal. The Irish parties split. "Gladstone" disavows his pledge. "Healy" and "Redmond" lead a revolt that deposes "Parnell" as leader. "Old O'Brien" deserts him.

A failing man, he lingers the last days of his life in "Katie's" home. A delegation of his faithful followers visits him. Advising them to continue their fight for Home Rule peacefully and without resort to violence, he dies in "Katie's" arms.

"As "Parnell" is personal melodrama, that exciting and eruptive action that might be expected of a political story is not present. There is always a threat of an explosion, but the spark is never ignited. Gable and Myrna Loy play their roles with restrained dignity, and, with but minor exceptions, the supporting players work similarly. In order to appreciate the entertainment and commercial values which the picture provides, it would be advisable to see it before playing. It has the potentialities which, properly understood and brought out, may make for financial success. Misunderstood, or sold on an improper premise, it may not do as well as might be hoped.

Previewed June 2 in Grauman's Chinese Theatre. Audience reaction graphically indicated the necessity of seeing the picture in advance of presentation. In this way knowledge of how to handle the film should be gained.—Gus McCarthy.

Fly Away Baby

(Warner)

Comedy-Drama

Some months ago Dorothy Kilgallen participated in a race around the world via air. Warner Brothers signed her to a writing contract, evidently with the intention of producing a picture based on her experiences. A mechanical map illustrates the route of the travels. The story, a mixture of comedy, romance and mystery melodrama, is entirely fiction and, very likely, something Miss Kilgallen never thought of while on her journey or when she signed her contract.

In any event, Torchy Blaine, resourceful crime-solving newspaper woman, becomes the flying reporter. Starting her race with rival reporter, Hughie, she is soon mixed up in melodramatic mystery and in love with detective McBride, who is not very quick to get the proper evaluation of things, and a sundry lot of criminals. Around the world they go, by transcontinental planes, China Clippers and Zeppelins. Two or three murders take place which McBride has a difficult time in trying to fathom and does only when Torchy provides the leads and clues and a gang of jewel smugglers also lend their talents to complicating things in a way that demonstrates they have little regard for McBride's professional ability. Bothered by the crooks, McBride can't make much progress in his seige of Torchy's heart, but in an amusing and semi-suspenseful climax, the criminals are foiled and it is evident that McBride will have another chance to win Torchy's affections in a later number in the Torchy Blane series.

Midnight Madonna

(Paramount-Major)

Melodrama

With two new faces featured in a cast that presents many wellknown players to serve as the backbones of exploitation campaigns, this human interest melodrama also provides several unique story angles on which to base attention arousing publicity. In her first leading role, Mady Correll demonstrates that as soon as she gets a little more experience a place will be awaiting her among the screen's popular personalities. Four-year-old Kitty Clancy, already an accomplished performer, also seems earmarked to be an important new figure.

Though a crime story, "Midnight Madonna" is a family type picture. The plot is based on the premise that the commission of a crime that rectifies the injustice of an earlier crime is justifiable. Played to stimulate sympathetic and sentimental emotions, the drama is contrasted by situation, character and dialogue comedy and there is sufficient love interest to assure the necessary romantic quality.

Widow "Kay Barrie" and her child "Penny" know nothing but poverty. Coming to the attention of night club owner and gambler "Denbo," "Kay" becomes an entertainer in his cafe and the child goes along as his good luck charm. "Penny's" grandfather names her inheritor of his estate, cutting his worthless son, "Vinny Long," off without a penny. By perjured testimony, "Long" proves to "Judge Clark" that "Kay" is not a fit person to be the child's guardian and "Penny" and her fortune is placed in his custody. Resorting to crime, "Denbo" kidnaps the judge, takes him into his underworld haunts of the perjurers and demonstrates to him that the witnesses did not know what they were talking about. On the condition that "Denbo" will stand trial for his own crime, "Clark" reopens the case, awards "Penny" to "Kay," jails "Long," wipes "Denbo's" crime off the records and paves the way for happiness for "Kay" and "Penny" and "Denbo."

Under the Red Robe

(New World-20th Century-Fox)

Costume Romance

The story of this picture, founded on the Stanley Weyman novel, is the sort of stuff motion picture directors' dreams are made of; it is audience material plus, and Hollywood knew it as long ago as 1922, when Cosmopolitan made a silent version, with Alma Rubens, which was no box-office disappointment. Now staged with dialogue in England by the Robert T. Kane unit, working at Denham, it still looks a family picture, with a particular appeal to women through its cloak-and-rapier atmosphere and its presentment of one of those rapscallion-heroes conquered by love and willing to go smilingly to death for its sake—but not called on for that sacrifice. In fact, it is not life but romance more highly colored than life; dream-realization in its most agreeable and highly colored form.

For the older patrons it has high pictorial qualities, a very engaging comic-servant part, written in for that clever artist Romney Brent, and all that finesse in details of action and facial expression which its director, Victor Seastrom, has shown ever since his Swedish Biograph days. It is costume, of course, but it is also entertainment.

Annabella, French star of "Wings of the Morning," is seen in her second Fox picture and is an additional selling value and the cast as a whole is excellent; Conrad Veidt is properly cast in costume romance, there is a physically striking portrait of Cardinal Richelieu from Raymond Massey, Romney Brent's drollery already has been praised and Sophie Stewart, J. Fisher White, F. Wyndham Goldie, Haddon Mason and others carry striking attire with the right air.

Gil de Berault, notorious as "The Black Death" from his skill as a swordsman, is condemned to the scaffold by Cardinal Richelieu, whose tool he has been, for breach of the law against dueling. He is reprieved at the last minute because the Cardinal wants a desperate man for the desperate job of arresting the Duke of Foix, Protestant leader, in his chateau and bringing him under arrest to Paris. Berault, under a false name and accompanied by a knavish servant, Marius, attached to him by the Cardinal, succeeds in gaining entrance to the Chateau. The Duke is in Spain, raising troops against the Cardinal, but Berault, allaying suspicions, falls in love with and is loved by the Lady Marguerite, sister of the Duke, but posing at first as his wife.

Marius steals the jewels which the Duchess is sending to the Duke in order that he may pay his levies. Gil returns them to Marguerite. When the Duke returns and is surprised by a party of Richelieu's troops, de Berault produces his authority from the Cardinal and claims the prisoner.

Learning that her lover intends to surrender to the Cardinal, Marguerite rides ahead to Paris and attempts to intercede with Richelieu. He sends her to a cell but news reaches him, when he is in disgrace with the King, that the Duke of Foix has left the country and that the revolt has ended peacefully.

That Annabella makes rather a task of her English dialogue is not so big a drawback as it may appear, since a French star is being presented to America, but the blend of accents is one of the weaknesses of the picture.

There was particular appreciation for the comedy work of Romney Brent at the London trade show of the Phoenix Theatre, and the color and convincing atmosphere of the whole production got favorable exhibitor comments.—BRUCE ALLAN, London.

Last Train from Madrid

(Paramount - George Arthur)

Melodrama

Two things are offered exhibitors in this picture whereby public attention may be aroused. First, it has the Spanish revolution for a background. In that phase it has been exceptionally well done. Actually and by impressive illusion it makes evident the fear and terror under which the several characters live, love and die. Secondly, and a probable more valuable asset than the first, is the fact that a few of Paramount's younger players, particularly Olympe Bradna, and Anthony Quinn, Lee Bowman, Robert Cummings, Dorothy Lamour, are ready for more important assignments. Assisting these younger players are Lew Ayres, Gilbert Roland, Karen Morley, Lionel Atwill and Helen Mack. All give capable and convincing performances, but Miss Bradna is the one who stands out over every one else.

Rather than one story, the film includes several, with the necessity of all concerned escaping from revolution menaced Madrid as the tie which endeavors to hold them all together. Naturally, when such a technique is adapted, the result is a series of episodes. Mainly the atmosphere, as would be expected under the circumstances, is tensely dramatic. All the romances are marked by melodrama. The only comedy contrast is provided by newspaperman Lew Ayers and only Miss Bradna's romance with him could be compared to real love blossoming in a welter of fear and turmoil.

Consequently the film as a whole is quite peculiar. In seeking to blend all the incidents together, the interest which accrues to successive happenings is permitted to lapse as the threat of something else is picked up. Nevertheless there is definite continuity which considered from the standpoint of the picture being an integral thing in itself can be understood and appreciated.

Riding on Air

(RKO Radio - David Loew)

Comedy

This is one of the funniest comedies that has come along in a long time. In characterizations, dialogue, situations and bizarre production technique, it does nothing but move from one ridiculous incident to another. Seldom has the writer seen an audience so thoroughly enjoy itself and give vent to its feelings as did the crowd which witnessed the preview of "Riding on Air" in the RKO Hillstreet Theatre, Los Angeles, last Saturday night. The reaction to the picture emphatically indicates what may be expected any time and any place the picture is presented. Not only have the Joe E. Brown followers, and the recurring exhibitor polls of money making stars prove there are a great many of them, something really to excite them, but the picture further is of the smartly insane brand of amusement that should meet no difficulty in holding the attention and satisfying general audiences as well as fun loving specialists. To pique the interest of comedy devotees, exhibitors not only have Brown's name to exploit, but the film is crowded with all sorts of novel and unique possibilities on which flamboyant showmanship campaigns may be based. Good screen merchandise for adults, the show is a natural for the youngsters.

A comedy of adventures and misadventures, the production provides the fifth ranking box office name with the sort of material in which he appears to best advantage. Portraying the character of "Elmer Lane," country newspaper correspondent and fabulously lucky fellow, whom millions have become familiar with through following his experiences in Richard Macaulay's Saturday Evening Post stories, Brown is right in his element.

"Elmer's" winning $5,000 in a radio contest thrills "Betty," amazes prospective father-in-law "Mr. Harrison" and is looked upon as a seventh day wonder by "Mr. Byrd," country editor of the Chicago Star. When city slicker "Waddington" arrives to promote a new fangled radio beam which Elmer's pal "Bill" has invented, "Lane" not only falls for his smooth talk hook, line and sinker, but convinces his townsfolk friends that here is a chance for all to get rich.

About the time that it is becoming evident that "Waddington" is a swindler, romantic and comedy-dramatic complications set in for "Elmer." With the populace after his scalp, Betty

THE ANSWER

EASTMAN'S coöperation with the industry has helped to solve many a problem of motion picture technique. Now it supplies a complete answer to the important duplicating problem. gives him the cold shoulder in favor of city reporter, "Harvey," who uncovers a scoop story about smugglers right under his nose. But "Elmer's" astounding luck remains with him. Not only does he capture the smugglers who are wanted on all kinds of crime charges, but in proving the practicability of Bill's invention, he reaps a great profit for himself and all those he prevailed upon to invest, gives "Byrd" a sensational story, and wins back "Betty."

Clean, wholesome and lively as a bursting bottle of fizz water, the film looks like an insurance policy guaranteeing that while it is around during the ordinarily dull-for-business summer days the only handicap managers playing it will have to worry about is finding room for all who will want to see it.—G. Forever Yours

(Grand National)

Musical Romance

In "Forever Yours" we have Beniamino Gigli, "the world's greatest tenor," which immediately suggests to exhibitors exploitation angle No. 1. And in this picture along with Mr. Gigli, whose name has been synonymous with the highest traditions of grand opera for many years, we have love, romance, pathos, drama and melodrama, which should be enough for any audience.

The story begins on the S.S. Orlandia, bound from Southampton to New York. Hugh Anderson, the ship's first officer, is trying to break with a former sweetheart, Irene, and in the attempt meets Helen Carlton, secretary to George Arnold, wealthy business man. They fall in love, quickly, in fact, a little too quickly. Irene, however, skillfully manages to let Helen overhear that Hugh "falls in love" on every voyage regularly. Helen is deeply disillusioned, and when the ship finally docks, refuses to become reconciled with Hugh.

Sensing that she is depressed, Helen's employer takes her to the Metropolitan to hear the great tenor, Enzo Curti. At the end of the performance, she is overcome with emotion, she rises to her feet; tears fill her eyes. Curti sees all this and is immediately attracted to her.

Returning to the hotel, Helen befriends an altogether adorable little boy, Benvenuto, who chances to be Curti's son. She meets Curti and his attraction to Helen is further cemented when he sees that she has been kind to his little boy. Curti, who cannot speak English very well, proposes to Helen with the aid of a dictionary, and is accepted.

On their first wedding anniversary, they set off on a world tour, traveling to many capitals and finishing in London. Helen comes face to face with Hugh and difficulty. He begs her to go to Australia with him. Helen is in a quandary.

It is the night of a big concert and Curti receives a telegram at the theatre saying that Helen is about to leave London with another man. He is overcome with anguish and pain and cannot go on with his performance. However, Helen appears in her box and Curti is then able to go on. While he is singing, he sees Helen leave the box, and in a tensely dramatic scene, almost rushes off the stage in a frenzy.

At the end of the concert Curti returns back to the hotel and his little Benvenuto. He is terribly unhappy. As he sings his customary lullaby to his little son, Helen returns, and "all's well that ends well."

This picture will indeed be of appeal to music and opera lovers, as well as to compatriots of the Italian Gigli, as he sings nine operatic arias, from "Il Trovatore," "Rigoletto," "Faust," "Lohengrin," "L'Africana," etc., and in the grand manner. He gives an ingratiating performance; he handles the dramatic sequences with restraint and the comedy with gusto, especially those scenes, where handicapped by his lack of knowledge of English, he tries to make himself understood. The child, Richard Gofe, completely won this reviewer and the audience with performance and personality.

The picture was produced in England and does not have the glamour, glitter and technical expertness of a Hollywood production. It has that "imported" quality. However, along with its unquestionable musical appeal, it portrays many human emotions which any audience can understand.

Storm in a Teacup

(London Films-United Artists)

Comedy

Not for the first time, a British success traces back to a Continental original, Bruno Frank, an animal lover, wrote the play in German as an exposure of the fact that the high dog tax in his country compelled many poor persons to send their pets to a lethal chamber. It was a big stage success (in London also) and Mr. Frank showed his sincerity by giving most of his fees to animal protection societies. That gives an exploitation value to the picture, but is less important than the fact that the English, or rather Scottish, version, is first-class comedy. The adaptation has been done by James Bridie, Scottish dramatist, and the rich range of types he has provided, and the vivid picture of life in a small Scottish community, look like American assets.

Essentially it is a humorous exposure of pompous self-importance, as personified by a small-town careerist. The type being universal, the laughs should be as loud in Main Street as in High Street. It has two outstanding scenes; one shows the Provost, or Mayor, shouted down, or rather barked down, at a public meeting at which hostile animal lovers are present in force. The other shows him still more seriously disconcerted by an invasion of hundreds of dogs during a dinner at which he is entertaining a party leader. Better crowd work never has been seen in a British picture, or a more humorous or convincing atmosphere of realism. All through, the picture is rich in the incidentals of humorous character and episode.

Frank Burdon, a young English reporter, gets a job on a small Scottish newspaper and is left in charge during the proprietor's absence. Ordered to interview the Provost, a self-important individual with aspirations to found a Scottish national party, he publishes instead a slashing attack on that individual for refusing to hear the appeal of an Irish widow whose dog, because she has been unable to pay the license fee, has been condemned to death.

The article inflames local opinion and a meeting at which the Provost is to announce his new policy becomes a riot. The reporter, in love with the Provost's daughter, refuses to withdraw his criticism and she eventually comes over to his side, not uninfluenced by the fact that her father is conducting an intrigue with the wife of the newspaper owner. Another manifestation of public disapproval ruins the Provost's political future when the dogs are let loose at his dinner party. He takes action against the reporter, but by this time the whole country is aroused. Money pours in to a fund for the defense and for the support of the widow dog-owner, who is raised to affluence. When the case comes into court the reporter, much against his will, is defended by a lawyer briefed by an animal protection organization. Finally, the latter gives up the case in disgust but the young man is discharged because the Provost, influenced by his daughter and also by fear of exposure, admits the truth of the article which caused all the trouble.

The success of "Storm in a Teacup" is due, in equal measure, to excellent story material, to direction worthy of it and to really first-class acting by the whole of a very big cast. Probably Cecil Parker as the pompous Provost, with the most difficult task, deserves most praise, but Vivien Leigh, Rex Harrison, Sara Allgood (in a rich Irish character part) and Gus McNaughton all score. It is a British picture which will repay special attention.

At the London trade show, Phoenix theatre, it went over to a gale of laughter.—B. A.

Talent Scout

(Warner)

Comedy

The entertainment and showmanship potentialities of this picture are premised on the idea that the world at large is amused when some one deliberately or unknowingly undertakes to ridicule himself. The more prominent the personality who does so, the greater the amusement. Hollywood is one of the best known names on earth. Even when it is inclined to take itself most seriously, people, as a rule, are not similarly disposed. Thus in the case of this film, in which Hollywood intentionally kids itself, the chances for entertainment and commercial success are more than favorable.

In this production Hollywood merely endeavors to give picture theatre patrons a good time at its expense. If the picture has any purpose other than to provoke laughter, it is simply to show people alien to the community how those amazing accidents sometimes happen.

Producers Lambert and Carter send a bunch of girls chaperoned by publicity man Stewart on an exploitation tour. He is also commissioned a talent scout to see if he can discover anybody who might be prospective screen material. Failure of the tour is only one of Stewart's problems, which are softened by the manner in which rube Harron attaches himself to the scout and his discovery of amateur singer Mary Brannigan. Miss Brannigan's screen test fails to live up to Stewart's promises, but reverting to the status of publicity man, he tricks

Labor Makes Move Against Wisconsin Divorce Measure

Labor, for the first time while represented by attorneys, this week in Milwaukee, took a militant stand against the divorce bills pending in the senate at Madison, Wis., at the hearing before the committee on state and local government this week. Labor protested on the grounds that the passage of the bills would close the larger theatres thereby throwing hundreds of persons out of work.

Attorneys representing the projectionists' union, electrical workers, stage hands, building service employes and the state federation of labor at the hearing, maintained that the producer controlled houses offer labor the best wages and working conditions. The danger of monopoly and subsequent high admission prices were cited by representatives of the independent exhibitors, in defense of the measure. The committee failed, however, to make an immediate recommendation following the hearing.

Meanwhile, at Minneapolis, the state senate voted to confine itself entirely to tax legislation and appropriation matters during its present special session and thus sounded the death knell of the state's proposed divorce bill for at least two years. The bill is sponsored by Allied State Exhibitors and is similar to the one which was passed in North Dakota prohibiting distributors or producers from owning or operating theatres.

At the same time, with the sine die adjournment of the California legislature at Sacramento the divorce bill there passed out of existence without having reached the floor of either house.

Allied Theatre Owners of Illinois will postpone any theatre divorce or chain tax legislative moves until the next session of the state legislature, Aaron Saperstein, president, said in Chicago this week. He said it would be impossible to get bills through at this late date.

New Film Society Is Formed in Hollywood

The Southern California Society has been formed in Hollywood with the reported backing of industry figures to show selected motion pictures, both foreign and American, to subscription audiences in a cooperative idea which will not conflict with regular theatres.

Several thousand subscription blanks were mailed this week to others in the industry explaining the plan under which $2 would be charged for the five screenings of the series.

Industry names connected with the venture are Stephen Morehouse Avery, Welford Beaton, George Cukor, C. B. DeMille, Howard Estabrook, Mrs. Victor Fleming, Lewis E. Gensler, Edmund Grainger, Rupert Hughes, Tamar Lane, Fritz Lang, Jesse L. Lasky, Albert Lewin, Frank Lloyd, Kenneth MacGowan, Douglas MacLean, Rouben Mamoulian, Lee Marcus, David O. Selznick, Hunt Stromberg, Genevieve Tobin and William Wyler.

Officials Attend Special Screenings of "Barriers"

Representatives of the United States government were guests at two screenings of Monogram's "Blazing Barriers" in Washington last week. The film was produced with the cooperation of the Civilian Conservation Corps and the United States Forest Service.

The picture was shown in the theatre of the Department of Interior Building and again in the Auditorium of the Department of Agriculture. Among those present were James D. Strong, manager of the Federal Radio Project; Guy L. McKinney, assistant to the director of Emergency Works Conservation; Mrs. Thelma Maddox, Department of Labor; Major W. Ransopher, CCC office of education; Robert Kyhe, Forest Service; W. Hearon, National Park Service, and J. J. McEntee, assistant director Emergency Works Conservation.

Delay Moskowitz Hearing

Examination of Charles C. Moskowitz, scheduled for this week at the office of Milton C. Weisman in connection with the suit of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York suit on the split week policy of Loew's, Inc., of which Mr. Moskowitz is an executive, has been delayed until next Thursday. Melvin Albert of the I.T.O.A. counsel's office asked for the postponement.

Lambert and Carter into giving her a part. She goes on to success, but Stewart's dreams of romance with her are blasted when she falls in love with leading man Crane. Appointing himself Harron's manager, he wrangles the producers into giving him a fabulous contract.

The picture is a colorful and amusing bit of screen entertainment. The gayly prepared story is full of devices in dialogue, situations and action which with good acting and direction caused the folks who saw the preview in Warners' Hollywood theatre to do a lot of laughing.—G. M.

Behind the Headlines

(RKO Radio)

Melodrama

Marking the return of Lee Tracy to the screen a story has been concocted especially suited to his talents, for it is the sort of role that established him in the star brackets. A reporter who deserts the newspaper field for radio reporting, Tracy has been presented with situations, the incredulous kind, that drop like apples off a tree into Tracy's lap and which with aplomb he accepts as the natural course of life. More pertinent, however, is that he gets this spirit across to the audience and it is only after reflection that one realizes to what extent liberties have been taken.

But that is all part of the lore of a reporter's life and when it is entertainingly presented, as it is here, why quibble? For this is fast-paced melodrama that never lets you down and builds to a most exciting climax, destined to hold an audience's undivided attention. The theme of the script concerns the rivalry of Tracy and a girl reporter, from the paper he deserted, in their efforts to out-scoop each other.

The girl, Diana Gibson, proves to be an excellent choice for the role and her performance as a girl newshawk at cross purposes with Tracy while being in love with him is nicely done and should be a stepping stone to other important parts. An unusual bit of casting has Donald Meek as the leader of a gang bent on stealing gold bullion from the government, a role vastly different from what he has been accustomed to. He handles it capably enough if a little strange in the part.

"Eddie Haines" (Lee Tracy) and "Mary Bradley" (Diana Gibson) are reporters on the same paper. When "Eddie" leaves the paper to become a radio reporter "Mary" uses extreme methods to scoop him. But "Eddie" with a portable sending set and wise to the tricks of the game invariably scoops, not only "Mary," but all other reporters. "Eddie" and "Mary" in their efforts to outscoop each other lend themselves to become involved in a gangster plot to rob the government of a sizeable sum in gold bullion. "Mary" is kidnapped by the gang but manages to send a message by radio which leads to a thrilling rescue by "Eddie" and the law.

What Price Vengeance?

(Rialto Productions)

Melodrama

Beginning with a jail break, ending with a warehouse raid, and interspersing a couple of chases on land and sea (how an airplane pursuit was omitted is the picture's mystery) naturally catalogues this production as one belonging to the action-thrill category. From the melodramatic story content, the picture's appeal will be primarily to the masculine taste. There is, however, a smattering of romance and the plight of a child to solicit feminine interest.

Lyle Talbot and Wendy Barrie play the leads and are capable if not stellar performers. Wally Albright, as the youngster, is refreshingly free from juvenile precociousness and makes his role likeable and believable. Eddie Acuff, Marc Lawrence, Lucille Lund and Reginald Hincks form a collective and competent menace to the wellbeing of the principals. The question posed in the film's title, together with the "cops and robbers" theme, may provide the exhibitor with some exploitation angles.

The plot is a bit obvious but the telling of it has been done in swift style. In a series of action flashes the tale unfolds how Lyle Talbot as a policeman plans to capture the thugs who in the course of making their escape from a bank robbery have injured Talbot's nephew, Wally Albright. By working his way into the confidence of the gang, Talbot uncovers their plans and leader. A fight to the death between Talbot and the mob's leader settles the score on the side of law and order. The ending finds Miss Barrie and Mr. Talbot more than ever in love and little Wally, now recovered, blesses the impending matrimonial union.

Sound Defects

(Vitaphone)

Novelty

Rufe Davis, a young man possessed of the unique talent of being able to reproduce odd noises that sound like anything from a motor boat to a horse trot, runs an amateur radio station and entertains the local people with his impersonations and buccolic line of talk. When the "Lovebirds of the Air," a radio team scheduled to broadcast that night, are forced down in their aeroplane near Rufe's station, they avail themselves of Rufe's broadcasting facilities and enlist him as their sound man. The whole affair serves as an excuse for Davis to exploit his vocal bag of tricks. Irene Delroy and Rodney McLennan are a good looking team of capable singers. Running time, 22 minutes.

Colored Cartoon

Freshly executed and brightly colored is this cartoon sermonette on the ancient adage that a boy's best friend is his "motor." Disregarding his mama's wise words of warning to watch his speed, the little auto aspires to become a fast steping taxicab and paces a speeding train. The results of the contest are victory for the train, a good time for the audience and a pretty miserable experience for the young car. The material is interesting and novel. The appeal should be spontaneous and general. Running time, eight minutes.

Sport Reel

Physical culture fadists will find ample material for sermonizing on the body beautiful in this sport reel subject. From girls in their teens to professional athletes, assorted demonstrations of how to obtain physical fitness through grunts and groans are generously supplied for the audience's consumption. Noted exponents of the arduous art of keeping fit are some sturdy young men from Annapolis, the brown bomber, Mr. Joe Louis, and a collection of nimble big league ball players. Because of the strong sport flavor in the entertainment, the material will, of course, appeal primarily to the masculine element. However, those countless ladies interested in maintaining slenderized figures will be able to draw many rich suggestions for calisthenic exercises.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

A Looney Tune

Picturing the trials and tribulations encountered by Porky and his pal Gabby on their camping trip affords some lively and mildly amusing moments of comic entertainment. The highlight of the subject is the introduction of the new cartoon character of Gabby, a vociferous and excitable individual. He is a welcome and amusing addition to the category of comedy clowns. Both Gabby and his introductory screen vehicle will be especially appreciated by the younger element of the audience. Running time, eight minutes.

Dr. Leslie Burgin, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade on Friday will receive the trade deputation which he asked to wait on him with agreed suggestions for legislation to replace the expiring Cinematograph Films Act of 1927.

Representative of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, the Kinematograph Renters Society and the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries, the delegation had to report that trade agreement had been found impossible of attainment on the main issue of the British film quota. Instead of an agreed report the three bodies presented three separate and conflicting statements, on the "deadline" date, May 26th.

The CEA asked for the establishment of a Quality Test for British films, as suggested in the report of the Moyne Committee which considered the general question of Films Act revision.

The KRS asked for the establishment of a Cost basis for quota films, with provision for credit expenditure over the minimum, so that one expensive film might rank as of equal value as two of half the cost.

The Film Group put forward a skeleton scheme in which the limitation of foreign film imports was coupled with a Reciprocity plan under which American companies buying British pictures for U. S. release would be granted concessions in import facilities and in reduction of their British quota obligations.

These major points of difference between the three trade sections are intensified by differences on important details. The Film Group wants a quota of 20 per cent on distributors and 15 per cent on exhibitors; exhibitors ask a 15:10 ratio; distributors 10:5, with a proviso of an average cost for a British film of £20,000-£25,000. The C. E. A. and the K. R. S. are agreed in opposition to an official Films Commission as suggested by the Moyne Committee, proposing instead a Joint Trade Committee with Board of Trade arbitration. They also oppose the suggestion that there should be a separate quota basis of shorts against foreign shorts.

Emphasizing the difference between the three trade bodies was the fact that two of the delegations were not completely representative of their own sections of the industry.

The CEA delegates included only one circuit representative, the Gaumont-British, Associated British Pictures and other interests having withdrawn in disapproval of the CEA Council's rejection of the cost basis for quota films. The KRS representatives were in a position to speak only for the American members of the Society, the British distributors having formally advised the Society that their views were represented by the Film Group.

In place of a clean division on the lines of exhibitor-distributor-producer, the delegation to Dr. Burgin therefore really broadly represented the following new trade lineup:

MAXWELL HONORED BY KING GEORGE

John Maxwell, chief of Associated British Pictures, and Mrs. Maxwell were received by King George at Buckingham Palace last week and received the ranks of Knight of Grace and Commander, respectively, of the Order of St. John and Jerusalem. No title is involved in the honor.

Joe Grossman, studio manager of ABP at Elstree, has also been made a commander of the order, which is concerned with voluntary ambulance and casualty work.

Independent exhibitors.

American distributors and theatre circuits.

British producers and British distributors.

In many details of policy the CEA, as representative of the smaller theatre interests, is undoubtedly nearer to the Film Group than to distributors and the adhesion of the circuits to the KRS on the question of the Cost Clause is not unqualified, many of them having production affiliations which give them a common interest with the Film Group. To further confuse an already confused situation is the fact that the final CEA and Film Group policies, as presented to Dr. Burgin, both represented considerable revisions in the anticipated attitude of these sections, and have not, in fact, at this date been officially released.

Two-Hour Discussion

An official statement from the Board of Trade, after the reception of the deputation, said simply that Dr. Burgin undertook to give consideration to the views expressed. Unofficially, it is known that there was a two hours' discussion and that a further meeting with the Board of Trade is contemplated.

The breakdown in the attempt to form an agreed trade policy follows upon prolonged conferences between the CEA and the KRS, with the Film Group, last to be consulted, also in touch with the CEA separately. Between the CEA, represented by a committee of 11, and the KRS, there was understood to be a preliminary understanding, based on the acceptance by the distributors' organization of various concessions demanded by the CEA as minima. These included:

Acceptance of the principle of Board of Trade arbitration in exhibitor-distributor disputes and of the registration of trade agreements with the Board of Trade.

KRS support for the CEA policy aimed at Redundancy, or Overbuilding.

A Standard Contract embodying trading concessions to exhibitors.

Most striking of these concessions was that the KRS agreed to the setting up of a Redundancy Committee of eight exhibitors and eight distributors, with an independent chairman, to rule on all new building projects. In the case of theatres opened in face of a prohibition by the committee, distributors undertook to withhold product, even if the theatres were their own. This agreement, on its face value, represented a big exhibitor victory, the KRS having on many occasions previously refused to intervene in the overbuilding problems. For reasons stated later, it was not taken at its face value by all exhibitors.

Concessions Conditional

All these distributor concessions were conditional on CEA support for the KRS advocacy of a minimum cost of £15,000 for quota films, with a viewing test for cheaper films, and carrying the important qualifications that footage obligations were modified by increased cost.

When the CEA committee's preliminary agreement with the KRS came up before the Council, it was rejected by a sweeping majority, two of its bitterest critics being C. P. Metcalfe, the president, and Ken Nyman, the vice-president, both members of the negotiating committee, in which their views had already been expressed. The Council reaffirmed the Association's old policy of a Quality Test and in doing so advertised to the trade that the efforts to find a common trade policy for Dr. Burgin had completely failed.

The immediate result was that the KRS and Film Group held emergency meetings at which distributors reaffirmed, in broad principle, the policy stated in their previous memorandum to the Board of Trade while producers evolved still another new policy, demanding adoption of the policy of import restriction on top of the institution of a scheme of reciprocity with the United States, on the lines previously published.

Recognizes Exhibitor Opposition

About this suggestion, the Film Group said officially:

"A further essential method of insuring the protection and development of the industry would be the imposition of restrictions on imports of foreign films, coupled if desired with a considerable increase in the specific rate of import duties. . . . Reduction in the total number of foreign films would make available much more playing time for British films on British screens and enable them to earn bigger returns and secure part of the important revenue now derived from this country by American producers."

The Film Group recognizes that exhibitors will be opposed to a reduction in the number of available films, but suggests that exclusion of poor American pictures would stimulate British production and improve its quality. It adds that "Reciprocity" and Import Restriction might be adopted together, with provision that American companies importing British films to the States might be given increased powers of import to England.

Unofficially, it is understood that the Film Group suggests an immediate limitation of imports to 75 per cent of last year's figures, with a saving clause that additional footage may be imported, foot against negative foot of British film bought for America. A duty of a shilling per foot positive is understood also to be suggesed, with provision that it shall be payable also on prints made in England from foreign negatives.

Extent of Schism

While this further development was shaping, the extent of the split in the CEA ranks was revealed at a meeting of the London and Home Counties branch of the association when, on a motion to receive a report on "Moyne" negotiations, there were speeches from Major A. J. Gale and Mr. Theo. Fligelstone in which they expressed their intention to withdraw from the Burgin delegation and revealed that only President Metcalfe and Vice-President Nyman had opposed the KRS agreement in the negotiating committee. The answer was, of course, that that committee had only power to report to the Council and that the Council had rejected the agreement and in emphasizing this point both Mr. Metcalfe and Mr. Nyman made it plain beyond any doubt whatever that their attitude was based on a belief that all the KRS promises were illusory and made for the purpose simply of obtaining exhibitor support for the KRS quota policy. Although two circuit representatives on the CEA delegation, Mr. Arthur Jarratt of Gaumont-British and Mr. Arthur Moss of Associated British had also announced their withdrawal, the London and Home Counties meeting showed that it shared the views of the CEA leaders by unanimously endorsing the action of the Council.

JOINT TRADE COMMITTEE AWAITED

Want Ample British Footage

The London exhibitors' meeting emphasized two things: the theatre man's complete distrust of the KRS and the importance he attaches to the continuance of a big supply of British footage, even of inferior quality. On the first point there were very explicit statements that all the KRS concessions had a big "If" in them; the exhibitor view was that he was being asked to pull the quota chestnut out of the fire for the distributor and that the latter then might, if he felt like it, make a trading concession or two. There was a bitter comment that even the Redundancy agreement had a joker in it; it would be necessary to have a circuit representative among the exhibitor nominees, and he would be under secret orders to act on KRS instructions, said one speaker.

On the merits of a Quality Test as against a Cost Clause, the overriding consideration in the minds of the London exhibitors, typical in this of the rest of the country, undoubtedly was that it was necessary only to eliminate "quickies" of the worst type, of which the extreme examples are the Indian and other "Empire" films bought to be scrapped. The exhibitor view of the Test is that it should admit "B" and even "C" pictures and his criticism of the Cost basis is that it would tend to produce fewer pictures, of better quality, which would be absorbed by the circuits.

Americans Criticized

There was outspoken criticism of American distributors at this meeting. On the argument of the KRS that the Moyne proposals entailed an impossible financial burden on American distributors, one comment was that U. S. companies had made vast sums of money during the past ten years by evading the Films Act and that they could afford to finance the better films demanded by an Act on "Moyne" lines. Another was that U. S. companies put a false value on films for purposes of Income Tax and would be competent to adjust similarly their nominal obligations under a Cost clause. It was freely asserted that exhibitors would be better off under an act which included all the Moyne recommendations than under a cost clause which permitted distributors to put all their money into a few British pictures and possibly reduced the total number of films available by 100 per annum.

The conclusion to be drawn from the continued, and indeed accentuated, differences of trade opinion appears to be that the new Films Act is once again in the melting pot. Dr. Burgin has got very little, as a result of his demand that the industry should "Organize or be organized" than a general expression of opinion against the Films Commission as the Moyne Report proposed it. If he pays any regard to trade opinion at all it seems likely he will settle the problem of industry control by instituting a Joint Trade Committee, possibly with an official chairman, from which there will if necessary be appeal to arbitrators with statutory powers, appointed by the Board of Trade. As regards the other probable features of legislation, the only definite forecast so far made is that of Mr. Simon Rowson, who, in a statement published in London on May 27th, said that he expects:

A commencing quota of 15 per cent distributors and 12½ per cent exhibtors, with the principle of Flexibility, according to each year's output, applying.

A minimum cost clause, without a viewing test, and a probable figure of £15,000. A viewing test for "under-£15,000" films.

It is recognized by all sections of the British industry that the Government does not want too controversial a bill and in the view of many this consideration makes it unlikely that the Board of Trade will suggest either Import Restriction or Reciprocity. This may be an optimistic view, but it is recognized that neither of these proposals have been considered in detail either by the industry or by the Board of Trade.

Shorts May Be Separate

Failure of agreement between the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Associations and the Kinematographers Renters' Society, in opposition to various proposals for a new form of the quota, is regarded as making more likely the adoption by the Government of the Moyne report's suggestion of separate quotas for long and short films, implying the provision of British shorts against foreign.

Twelve More for Odeon

Oscar Deutsch of Odeon Theatres Ltd. has acquired control of the twelve theatres of London and Southern Super Cinemas, including the Bloomsbury Super Cinema in the West Central district of London and the Ambassadors, Hendon; the rest of the theatres are in the South of England.

New Ministers' Problem

The reorganization of the British Government, consequent on the retirement of the Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin as Prime Minister and the accession to the post by the Rt. Hon. Neville Chamberlain, faces the film industry with two new ministers at the Board of Trade, while negotiations with that department on a new Films Act are at the half-way stage.

The Rt. Hon. Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, has resigned and becomes a Peer. He is succeeded by Mr. Oliver Stanley. Dr. Leslie Burgin, who as Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade has had active charge of the negotiations of the new Films Act, has become Minister of Transport and a member of the Cabinet. His successor is Capt. Euan Wallace.

Understood in London is that the new Films Act already has been drafted and that the new ministers may therefore merely decide to operate an already decided policy, but an uncertain factor in the situation is the impression which trade criticism of the new measure may make on Ministers who will have to handle the problem without the detailed knowledge acquired by Dr. Burgin. That he might pilot the new legislation in the House of Commons, or at least lend expert assistance to Mr. Stanley in the debates were possibilities discussed in Wardour Street this week.

Short Hours Raise French Production Costs 45 Per Cent

by PIERRE AUTRE

in Paris

Production costs are said by producers in France to have risen as much as 45 per cent as the result of the compulsory 40-hour week in the industry, which has been in operation for about two months.

Studios originally had sought permission to use two shifts of workers, employed for six hours and 40 minutes per day for six consecutive days, from Monday through Saturday. The Workers' Film Syndicate, although admitting that the law gave the employer the right to select any method of complying with the 40-hour week stipulation, refused permission for the method asked by employers.

The group insisted that the 40 hours should be worked out on a basis of eight hours per day for five days, Monday through Friday. That method, the producers complain, allows no more than 25 to 30 shooting hours per week. All estimates of the expected increase in production costs resulting from the new law have been exceeded, the producers declare, pointing out that a film which previously would have cost 1,500,000 francs is now costing a minimum of 2,300,000 francs. The producers are seriously disturbed by the mounting costs.

English Building Booming, Hanbury

Theatre construction in England shows that from 200 to 250 de luxe houses are being built every year, according to Ralph Hanbury, managing director of Radio Pictures, Ltd., London, on his arrival in New York this week on his way to the company's sales convention in Hollywood. This theatre expansion includes independents as well as major circuits, Mr. Hanbury explained.

Last year was Radio's banner year and by the number of contracts written at the time he sailed from England, Mr. Hanbury said, all indications pointed to this record being beaten this year. Last season independent producers made 16 quota pictures for the company. A like number will be financed by Radio this year.

Business is booming, Mr. Hanbury added, since the rearmament program started in the British Isles. He will sail July 3 on the Berengaria with William Levy of Walt Disney-Mickey Mouse, Ltd., who also arrived in New York with him.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

PENNIES FROM HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Madge Evans—Proved one of our best Sunday draws for several months and held up very nicely for the three days in spite of playing it so old.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

RANGER COURAGE: Bob Allen, Martha Tibbetts —This is our second Bob Allen picture but he doesn't seem to have much draw. There is no music in this picture which, on the whole, is very ordinary. Running time, 58 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

WHEN YOU'RE IN LOVE: Grace Moore, Cary Grant—A good production, but it re-proves what we so well know; opera stars are poison at our box office. And it's too bad when they can do more than warble arias, as witness Miss Moore's interpretation of Cab Calloway's "Minnie the Moocher." It is the high spot of the picture. Played May 6-7.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

First National

GREEN LIGHT: Errol Flynn, Anita Louise—Excellent on all counts. Played April 25-26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MOUNTAIN JUSTICE: Josephine Hutchinson, George Brent, Guy Kibbee—Swell in any spot. Running time, 82 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

ONCE A DOCTOR: Donald Woods, Jean Muir—Fair picture. Pleased majority of our patrons. Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 20-21.—E. I. Hawkins, Hawkins Theatre, Newellton, La. Village and rural patronage.

PENROD AND SAM: Billy Mauch, Frank Craven, Spring Byington—Much better than we expected. Had quite an appeal for the grown-ups. Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 14-15.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PENROD AND SAM: Billy Mauch, Henry Watson —Well liked by all, and if you want a picture that will lay way over many of the so-called big ones, here it is. Good in any spot. Running time, 67 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

STOLEN HOLIDAY: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter—This picture did more than an average business. Kay Francis still possesses her drawing power at my theatre and stars that draw we like. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 9-10.—E. I. Hawkins, Hawkins Theatre, Newellton, La. Village and rural patronage.

Grand National

HEADIN' FOR THE RIO GRANDE: Tex Ritter, Eleanor Stewart—A good western picture. Tex Ritter is a newcomer and a coming star in our opinion. He has that singing ability which goes well in pictures of action. A little more scrapping and shooting and he'll be O. K. Running time, 61 minutes. Played May 15.—E. I. Hawkins, Hawkins Theatre, Newellton, La. Village and rural patronage.

ROMANCE AND RICHES: Cary Grant, Mary Brian—Only a fair program picture. It seems that Grand National just can't deliver. If G. N. would have made twelve good pictures instead of trying to make fifty, they would have been much better off. Running time, 58 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BORN TO DANCE: Eleanor Powell, James Stewart —Even a late playing date failed to diminish the pull of this excellent musical. Patrons liked it plenty and said so, the cashier was kept busy, so everyone concerned was happy. Running time, 108 minutes. Played May 16-18.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

DANGEROUS NUMBER: Robert Young, Ann Sothern—Pretty weak fare for a 'lion's' roar. Its stars deserve better treatment. Played April 28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ESPIONAGE: Edmund Lowe, Madge Evans—Just a programmer; will get by. Running time, 65 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

FAMILY AFFAIR, A: Lionel Barrymore, Cecilia Parker—A picture of home town folks, and it should be right down the alley, but it did just average business.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

FAMILY AFFAIR, A: Lionel Barrymore, Cecilia Parker, Eric Linden—Nice little picture that pleased, even though it failed to make the grade at the box office. It's all Barrymore and where he is liked this will satisfy the fans. Running time, 69 minutes. Played May 14-15.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GENERAL SPANKY: Spanky McFarland—For "Our Gang" fans only. This, of course, includes all the kiddies you can corral; it's especially their show. Not box office for us, however. Played May 1.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer—A great cast in a lavish production somewhat too big for a small town and too long. A ten reeler with more speedy action would have made this a real show. This way everyone gets tired out before the end flashes on the screen and that way it takes part of the joy out of it. Running time, 20 reels. Played May 9-10.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

LAST OF MRS. CHEYNEY, THE: Joan Crawford, William Powell, Robert Montgomery, Frank Morgan —For some reason, this failed to make a showing at the box office, nor did it seem to appeal to our patrons who did turn out. Personally, thought it above average entertainment, but apparently our patrons thought differently. Running time, 98 minutes. Played May 23-25.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LAST OF MRS. CHEYNEY, THE: Joan Crawford, William Powell, Robert Montgomery, Frank Morgan —Same old story. Swell cast, very likeable story, beautifully produced and directed, but no drawing power! Pictures of this type cost the small town exhibitor more than he can afford to pay, because they will not get them in. Running time, 98 minutes. Played May 16-17.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LAST OF MRS. CHEYNEY, THE: Joan Crawford, William Powell, Robert Montgomery—A long winded talky picture that three popular stars could not save. It is not worth a Sunday date. Booked for three days but pulled it after second day.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence Ky. Small town patronage.

LOVE ON THE RUN: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford —Good program picture. Running time, 81 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MAMA STEPS OUT: Alice Brady, Guy Kibbee—I made a big mistake by putting this on Saturday. It proved a complete flop and I think it would be a flop in my town on any night. Alice Brady overplayed her part, making it entirely too silly. Kibbee sorta saved the picture, making it possible to sit through it. —A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

NIGHT MUST FALL: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—If there was one single good comment on this one, we did not get it. It was the most universally disliked picture that we have ever played. We did not hear one that said they liked it. I'll admit that the acting was brilliant by both Robert Montgomery and Miss Russell, but what does that get you, when they put thumbs down on the picture? Nothing from nothing makes nothing, and that it what you have for public appeal in this picture. The business on the second night, nil. I would probably have had more with a small pox sign on the door.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PERSONAL PROPERTY: Jean Harlow, Robert Taylor—Some liked it, some didn't, so I can't report with any accuracy. Of course, it has the latest rave, Taylor, so average business, that is all, and it was a top price picture that did program business.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PERSONAL PROPERTY: Jean Harlow, Robert Taylor—The drunken scenes on the trailer, and not in this otherwise very good picture, kept patrons away. —Florence Wigton, Wigton Theatre, La Grange, Ind. General patronage.

THREE GODFATHERS: Chester Morris, Lewis Stone, Irene Hervey—A very, very good Friday and Saturday program; a western of a higher class that everyone will enjoy. An action drama of the Arizona Desert, cattle rustling and gold digging used as a background of this story. It's very good. Running time, 8 reels. Played May 19.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

WAY OUT WEST: Laurel and Hardy—The public went for it, whether it was because they did not kill anyone or that they were famished for laughs. Me, I'll welcome any picture that will give them laughs instead of creeps. Another break, there were no tap dancers.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WAY OUT WEST: Laurel and Hardy—Where Laurel and Hardy are liked, this picture is tops. Swell comedy. Produced in an elaborate style western and plum full of good laughs. Running time, 65 minutes. —W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

Paramount

ARIZONA MAHONEY: Joe Cook, Robert Cummings, June Martell—A comedy western by Zane Grey and Joe Cook as "Mahoney" is very good. Lots of comedy, plenty of action makes this a swell show, but too short. Very good for a double feature. Running time, 6 reels. Played May 21-22.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

BORDERLAND: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—Pretty good out-of-doors tale. Locale, Mexican border. Played May 21-22.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND ESCAPES: Ray Milland, Heather Angel—Good detective yarn. Ray Milland is pleasing many. They ask to see him more than a few times. Played April 27.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND ESCAPES: Ray Milland, Heather Angel—Quite good. Ray Milland is up and coming.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

CRIME NOBODY SAW, THE: Lew Ayres, Ruth Coleman—The number of complaints we received on this one would cause any exhibitor to blush.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DOCTOR'S DAIRY, A: George Bancroft, John Trent, Helen Burgess—This is one of the best programmers we have had in some time. This Trent is a comer and we liked both the new girls, Burgess and Ruth Coleman. And that boy who played the violinist part was a dandy. New faces don't help a lot at the box office, but in many cases they sure fill the bill for those you do get in. Running time, 77 minutes. Played May 21-22.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

HOPALONG CASSIDY RETURNS: William Boyd, Evelyn Brent—Here is a western that is of the better type and entertaining from start to finish. Something all the time. Mr. Boyd makes a cracking good sheriff and he sure cleans up the town of outlaws and makes it a better place to live in. O. K., Bill. Running time, eight reels. Played May 14-15.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

KING OF GAMBLERS: Lloyd Nolan, Claire Trevor—I thought when I showed "Night Key" I had given my patrons the best picture ever made, but this "King of Gamblers" is even better than that. Played last two days of week to big business.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

MAID OF SALEM: Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray—Good production but no business to speak of. Played May 2-4.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

PLAINSMAN, THE: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—Very good show in every way. Hold this for your best days even if it is late.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

SWING HIGH, SWING LOW: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—Good comedy drama with MacMurray and Lombard doing work that pleased our people. Locale, Panama and New York. Played May 23-24.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

TRAIL DUST: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—These westerns are very popular here. The prints are exceptionally good and are well patronized. The scenes in this picture are quite remarkable. Did above average week-end business on a single bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Republic

BIG SHOW, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Perfectly grand western type picture. Don't pass up this one. Plenty of comedy and the ladies go for Gene's singing.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

ROUND-UP TIME IN TEXAS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Gene Autry's are all good even if you are taken to Africa, as happens in this picture. Talking trailer swell on this one and saved my show.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

THREE MESQUITEERS: Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune—This entire series to date has been swell, especially "Riders of the Whistling Skull." My fans know "Tucson" and "Lullaby" by name and like them.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

RKO Radio

DON'T TELL THE WIFE: Guy Kibbee, Una Merkel, Lynne Overman—Played this and "Arizona Mahoney" as a double and we thought we had a swell program as far as quality counts in entertainment, but we got disappointed by very poor business of attendance. O. K. Running time, 6 reels. Played May 21-22.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

DON'T TELL THE WIFE: Guy Kibbee, Una Merkel—Program fare, with no special box office appeal, but will please as the second half of a dual bill. Running time, 63 minutes. Played May 21-22.—M. A. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

OUTCASTS OF POKER FLATS, THE: Preston Foster, Jean Muir, Virginia Weidler—Another picture that has a promising start but a poor ending. Didn't even draw on cash night.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

PLOUGH AND THE STARS, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—This type of Gaelic speaking film is very poor for my neighborhood. I wish I hadn't played it. Poor business in spite of the stars.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

RAINBOW ON THE RIVER: Bobby Breen, May Robson—A very good picture. Drew good attendance both days. This picture will please the average picture fans. I wish I could get hold of pictures like this every week in the year. I plan to run it again. Running time, 88 minutes. Played May 18-19.—E. I. Hawkins, Hawkins Theatre, Newellton, La. Village and rural patronage.

SHALL WE DANCE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Edward Everett Horton, Eric Blore—We haven't played this picture in our theatre, but I have seen it. RKO is falling down on their stories for these two stars. In this picture they have copied after "One in a Million" and "Top of the Town." Astaire and Rogers try to duplicate Sonja Henie in "One in a Million" on roller skates and they do a very poor job of it. And also the only place that they could have the show is on top of a building like in "Top of the Town." Also, the story is the same as all the rest of them. Astaire wants to meet Rogers and Rogers don't like Astaire, but finally Rogers admits she is in love with Astaire. Why don't RKO get a different kind of a story for them. If RKO keeps putting these two good stars in these kind of stories, they won't last long. I don't expect any big business on this picture when we play it because the people that come to see it the first night will tell their friends that it is the same as all the rest of them. I wish RKO would give Astaire-Rogers a different kind of a story once.—A. E. Harman, Elgin Theatre, Elgin, Ore. General patronage.

WANTED: JANE TURNER: Gloria Stuart, Lee Tracy—Program fare that proved entertaining as a midnight show. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 14-15.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

WE'RE ON THE JURY: Helen Broderick, Victor Moore—Not as good as the original "Ladies of the Jury." Maybe this is a good time to ask where is Edna May Oliver? Our folks would like to see her again. Played May 4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHEN'S YOUR BIRTHDAY?: Joe E. Brown, Marian Marsh—Whoever said this was the best Joe E. Brown picture must not have seen the others. While it's not bad, Joe is awfully subdued and lacking in his natural spontaneity. The audience laughed only occasionally, whereas they usually roar at Joe's antics. Played May 8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

AS YOU LIKE IT: Elisabeth Bergner, Laurence Olivier—The cooperation of schools and women's clubs put this over with fair success. First showing locally of a Shakespearean production, met with approval generally. Principal complaint was Bergner's poor enunciation, which may have been considered "Art," but was difficult to understand. Running time, 96 minutes. Played May 11.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GIRL'S DORMITORY: Herbert Marshall, Ruth Chatterton, Simone Simon—Better show than "Ladies in Love." Simone Simon sure was good in this one and played very good opposite Herbert Marshall. Running time, 8 reels. Played May 23.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

HOLY TERROR, THE: Jane Withers, Anthony Martin—Jane, as the pet of the air squadron men at the base station, furnished some good fun and pleased. Played May 19-20.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED: Robert Kent, Rosalind Keith—Good, and swell background.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

LOVE IS NEWS: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power—A genuinely entertaining picture that everyone seemed to enjoy very much. Under average business due mostly to school activities.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

OFF TO THE RACES: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane—Good family entertainment. Cannot be expected to attract many outside of those who come anyway. Played April 24.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SECRET VALLEY: Richard Arlen, Virginia Grey—Poor. It seems that Fox can't make a good western. Running time, 57 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

SEVENTH HEAVEN: Simone Simon, James Stewart—This good old story lives anew in this excellent production. It is, therefore, with regrets we must report only a fair average intake. Played April 29-30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WILD BRIAN KENT: Ralph Bellamy, Mae Clarke—This has no suspense, not much comedy relief, and is, in fact, a very ordinary outdoor drama that played to below average Saturday business.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage

WINGS OF THE MORNING: Annabella, Henry Fonda—The only British picture we have ever played that our patrons considered entertaining. Pulled well at the box office and comments were all to the good. A refreshingly different picture, photographed in the most natural Technicolor yet seen on the screen. Running time, 87 minutes. Played May 12-13.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

WINGS OF THE MORNING: Annabella, Henry Fonda—In spite of extra advertising this picture did not make expenses for us. Annabella, as well as most of the cast, is very hard to understand.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

United Artists

GARDEN OF ALLAH, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Charles Boyer—This was far from a special in this situation, although we did above average business first of the week. Marlene Dietrich, I believe, has seen her best day.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HISTORY IS MADE AT NIGHT: Charles Boyer, Jean Arthur—High class production. Well liked by all. Not a box office smash, but good in any spot. Running time, 95 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

MODERN TIMES: Charlie Chaplin, Paulette Goddard—O. K. for the kiddies but the grownups want comedy talking pictures, not only synchronized. Ran only one night and we were glad of it not to drag our customers out for this sort of slapstick fun. They would not have come, anyway. Running time, 10 reels. Played May 16.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimmall, S. D. Small town patronage.

SPLENDOR: Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea—A picture that makes you believe that you are living the parts that flash on the screen. Full of interest and pathos. Every once in a while you are reaching for more air to keep your pulse ticking. Miriam sure plays her part to perfection opposite Joel McCrea. Very, very good couple to put on a good show. Running time, eight reels. Played May 12.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Universal

BREEZING HOME: Binnie Barnes, William Gargan—Same as "Call It a Day," fit only to be supported by a stronger picture. Poorly produced and directed.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LEFT HANDED LAW: Buck Jones—Another grand western from Buck Jones. Keep it up and Buck will hold his position of the biggest western box office star.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

NIGHT KEY: Boris Karloff, Jean Rogers—As good as anyone could expect; a box office attraction and everyone in it doing a good job. More than likely, the one that wrote this script is responsible for part of its success and the balance goes to everyone else connected with the picture.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

POSTAL INSPECTOR: Ricardo Cortez, Patricia Ellis—We aroused a big interest when we advertised this picture, but the picture fell short of the people's expectations. We had a good comedy and "Custer's Last Stand," serial, for support so we didn't come out so bad. Running time, 6 reels. Played May 14-16.—Ruff Brothers, Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kan. General patronage.

WHEN LOVE IS YOUNG: Virginia Bruce, Kent Taylor—This New Universal has delivered another "just a picture." Something awfully wrong in this one. Just so darn poor, I fail to find comment that justifies. 'Ginny Bruce has possibilities and will do a lot better than most. The Jack'O'Lantern number is delightful, but the picture does not click. Business below average for three days.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Warner Bros.

BLACK LEGION: Humphrey Bogart, Erin O'Brien-Moore—Good picture of its kind. Running time, 79 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

BLACK LEGION, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Erin O'Brien-Moore—A very fine picture. The same old complaint, though. The trailer kept people away instead of inducing them to come. It made the picture appear much more brutal than it really was. Why will producers do these things? Running time, 83 minutes. Played May 23-24.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CALIFORNIA MAIL: Dick Foran, Linda Perry—This western is above average. Good story and well carried through. Dick Foran's singing is well liked. Running time, 6 reels. Played May 21-23.—Ruff Bros., Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kan. General patronage.

CALL IT A DAY: Olivia de Havilland, Ian Hunter, Anita Louise, Alice Brady—Did not hit, of double bill character, and that on the lower end. My opinion of the exhibitor is that he is dumb that practices double billing. He not only penalizes himself, he does it to the rest of us and if he thinks that pictures are not made for the particular purpose, take a look at a lot of them that have come out his year, that had neither star power nor care in producing.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE WOMAN: George Brent, Beverly Roberts—An extra good attraction. Many commented on how well they liked Beverly Roberts. About average box office. Played May 2-3.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE WOMAN: George Brent, Beverly Roberts—We played this picture right after "The Garden of Allah," doing three times the business. It was a natural. The only thing we regret is we did not play it for three days.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

GREAT O'MALLEY, THE: Pat O'Brien, Sybil Jason—Good story and cast but little draw.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

KING AND THE CHORUS GIRL: Fernand Gravet, Joan Blondell—Very good program picture that did well at the box office. Running time, 97 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

READY, WILLING AND ABLE: Ruby Keeler, Lee Dixon, Allen Jenkins—Certainly not a special, nor is it entitled to be out of the B classification. Had a lot of complaint on this one. Running time, 88 minutes. Played May 18-19.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SMART BLONDE: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—Very mediocre entertainment. Played May 1.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SMART BLONDE: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—My patrons could see nothing in this one. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

DIZZY DUCKS: Scrappy Cartoons—First rate cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DIZZY DUCKS: Scrappy Cartoons—A splendid black and white cartoon.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

KNEE ACTION: Andy Clyde—This brought a good quota of laughs. Columbia really has best Saturday comedies on the market. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

LET'S GO: Color Rhapsodies—Good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 3—Okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Educational

ANY OLD PORT: Buster West—Another good comedy from Buster West. Music and dancing are the highlight of this short subject. Running time, 2 reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

GIFTS IN RHYTHM: Song and Comedy Hits—Good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HOLD IT: Herman Timberg, Jr., Pat Rooney, Jr.—Not very funny.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JAIL BAIT: Buster Keaton—No complaints on this one; it's okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LOVE NEST ON WHEELS: Two-Reel Comedies—This one got its share of laughs, but all in all, it's only average comedy fare. Running time, 18 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

PUDDY THE PUP IN CATS IN A BAG: Terry-Toons—Fair cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SPORTS IN THE ALPS: Treasure Chest—Excellent and just what the title implies.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TERRY TOONS: These cartoons are going stale and are about the poorest put out today. How about some color cartoons, Educational?—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

GIRL'S BEST YEARS, A: Musical Comedies—Very poor. Why does Metro go on producing these so-called musical comedies? Outside of solo or dialogued songs, they have no music. The dancing or comedy is conspicuously absent.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

IMPORTANT NEWS: M-G-M Miniatures—Good Miniature and "Chic" Sale is good to look at. Very good comedy, even if it is just one reel. Running time, 1 reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

NO PLACE LIKE ROME: Musical Comedies—Very clever. In fact, too clever for most of our audience.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

PICTURESQUE SOUTH AFRICA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Another good travelogue in Technicolor. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

PICTURESQUE SOUTH AFRICA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Very satisfactory travelogue.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PUPS' CHRISTMAS: Harman-Ising—Good natural color and full of action. Should please all who see it. Very good subject. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE OF DIGESTION: M-G-M Miniatures—Terrible. Put Benchley on the bench. Same report for "Penny Wisdom" and "What Do You Think?" Absolutely no entertainment.—Florence Wigton, Wigton Theatre, La Grange, Ind. General patronage.

SWING WEDDING: Harman-Irsing—Not so good, and if you know anything worse than a cartoon that moves without rhyme or reason, I'd like to know what it is. Running time, 8 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SWING WEDDING: Harman-Ising—Another very clever Happy Harmony, with the frogs doing clever imitations of the popular swing bands and leaders.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SWING FOR SALE: Hal LeRoy—Well done musical comedy and can he dance! Worth plugging.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

Paramount

BLUE VELVET MUSIC: Headliners—Very good band act. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

BROADWAY HIGHLIGHTS: Paragraphics—A very interesting tour of Broadway, radio broadcasts, stage scenes and night clubs where many stage, screen and radio stars were appearing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HOLD THE WIRE: Popeye the Sailor—This is good cartooning.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MUSIC, MUSIC EVERYWHERE: Headliners—Good band act.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PANELESS WINDOW WASHER, THE: Popeye the Sailor—Funny.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PLAY SAFE: Color Classics—Good moralistic cartoon. Safety campaign idea.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE, NO. 1: All natural color about science, the latest gadgets at work on sound and, oh, boy, how it picks up the sound. Educational and entertaining. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

RAH, RAH, FOOTBALL: Headliners Series—Good entertainment.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TALKING THROUGH MY HEART: Screen Songs—Very good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BAD HOUSEKEEPING: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—A very entertaining comedy appeals to both sides of the house. Running time, 19 minutes.—E. I. Hawkins, Hawkins Theatre, Newellton, La. Village and rural patronage.

BAD HOUSEKEEPING: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Excellent comedy. Should please anywhere.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DOWN THE RIBBER: Leon Errol—Leon Errol gets his car stolen, the local boys frame him in ridiculous situations when making his claim. A lot of dialogue. Well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

EDGAR KENNEDY COMEDIES: This series is fair to good. It's hard to find a laugh in most RKO comedies, however.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

GASOLOONS: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Only fair. RKO two-reel comedies are no good.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

LOCKS AND BONDS: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Not so good. Very few laughs. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MAJOR BOWES AMATEUR PARADE: Entire series as a whole has been below standard. Wish I hadn't had these forced on me.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME SERIES: RKO's pet is just about eight beats behind the parade on most of the subjects, one of which was the British crisis of the King and his lady. If you think that this was not an outdated number, after the Coronation was done and gone, you are in error. Should not have been released so late.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FOX NEWS: I think Fox should be congratulated for giving the exhibitor a special reel, along with the regular news, at no extra cost, of the Hindenburg disaster. They certainly never fail to deliver the goods with one better up their sleeves.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PACING THE THOROUGHBREDS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Nothing new nor startling, but proved entertaining enough. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

PACING THE THOROUGHBREDS: Adventures of Newsreel Cameraman.—Usual stuff.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

United Artists

GOLDEN TOUCH, THE: Silly Symphonies—This one reeler shows you that no matter how rich you are if everything you touch turns to gold you soon are hungry and can't eat gold. Then you change your mind and wish for something to eat. Very good. All the gold standard advocates should see this one reeler and then concentrate on the common horse sense economy to provide for the hungry. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MICKEY'S FIRE BRIGADE: Mickey Mouse—Well received, as usual.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MICKEY'S KANGAROO: Mickey Mouse—Oh, boy! this is a corking good cartoon. Mickey Mouse sure has a time of it with a kangaroo by giving him a working out with a pair of boxing gloves. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MOTHER PLUTO: Silly Symphonies—Another hit from start to finish. Running time, 8 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

FLIPPEN'S FROLICS: Mentone Musical Comedies—This old Mentone is again better than the new season's singles.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FUN IN THE FIREHOUSE: Mentone Musical Comedies—The best single reel Mentone to date.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

CAB CALLOWAY AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—All of their band acts are good.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

CARNIVAL DAYS: Henry Armetta, Felix Knight—Very good musical. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

CLYDE McCOY AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—If you want to book a real hot orchestra single for your young folks, play this one. It will take all the sciatica out of your bones. We enjoyed it so much that we held it over and played it at the opening and closing of the show, using the sound only. Everybody was talking about it. The time it was on the screen, I happened to be on the floor, and I believe if there had been a good-looking blonde come in about this time, I couldn't have resisted asking for a dance. Thank you, Warners, for this treat.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HERE COMES THE CIRCUS: "Poodles" Hanneford—This circus short is better than some circuses we've seen of late.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

I ONLY HAVE EYES FOR YOU: Merrie Melodies—Fair colored cartoon. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

JOE PALOOKA IN "THE BLONDE BOMBER": Joe Palooka Series—This series is okay. Using cartoon strip idea is fine for comedies and serials also.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

LAND OF THE MIDNIGHT SUN: Colortour Adventure—In color. Interesting.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

LEON NAVARA AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good. Running time, 8 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

LOGGING ALONG: Vitaphone Novelties—A well worth while single on the logging industry.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

NUT GUILTY: Vitaphone Novelties—A very clever ventriloquist comedy that brought a lot of laughs.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WIFE OF THE PARTY, THE: Ken Murray, Oswald—Very good; brought down the house. This chap, Oswald, with his "Oh, Yaa" grows on you. Good comedies are hard to get, but don't be frightened of this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

GENERAL MOTORS REELS: The two on baseball are swell and worth showing, especially "Big Shots of Baseball" with Bob Feller, Joe Di Maggio, Grove and others, teaching your audience to pitch, bat and field.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

Serials

Mascot

ADVENTURES OF REX AND RINTY: Rex, King of Wild Horses, Rin Tin Tin, Jr.—Going into the second chapter. Think it's going to be O. K. Picked this old one up very reasonable from Mascot, and feel it's doing some extra business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Republic

ROBINSON CRUSOE OF CLIPPER ISLAND: Mamo Clark, Mala—O. K. Believe it could have been made into a very fine serial. Title is not fitting. Should have been the "Mystery of Clipper Island." I wish serial producers had to sit down every day and look at their serials over and over and figure how any intelligent person could pay their good money to see the hero killed one week and the entire thing changed the next week. But, what's the use of exhibitors complaining about that angle. Producers have clearly shown us that they will continue to produce serials the way they want to and make us like it.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Stage and Screen (Weiss-Mintz)

BLACK COIN, THE: Ralph Graves, Ruth Mix—Mediocre and quite slow moving on first three chapters to date.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

CLUTCHING HAND, THE: Jack Mulhall, William Farnum—Kept their interest quite well throughout, but far from being well made.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

Universal

SECRET AGENT X9: Scott Kolk, Jean Rogers—Good serial. Well done.—Maxwell L. Rothman, Alvin Theatre, Guttenberg, N. J. General patronage.

Universal Signs New Asher Contract

E. M. Asher, producer, signed a new contract with Universal Pictures in Hollywood this week covering a period of two more years. It is the fifth consecutive contract signed between the two parties. Mr. Asher's next production will be "Too Clever to Live."

Laemmle Visiting Europe

Carl Laemmle, Sr., accompanied by his secretary, Jack Ross, left New York this week on the Normandie for visits to Paris, Zurich and Carlsbad, with plans for returning at the end of July. The trip is solely for pleasure, Mr. Laemmle said, declaring that he would transact no business while abroad. Mr. Laemmle is now retired from the industry, having sold his interests in Universal Pictures last year to the Cowdin-Cochrane interests.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

GUTS, IT IS

It's not only a photo of the Quigley April Silver Plaque ceremonies, that shot to the right showing Mayor Marvin making the presentation to the winner, Ed McBride, manager of Loew's State, in Syracuse, New York.

It's also an excellent illustration of a man arriving at a predetermined objective, a man who sets for himself a certain goal—and gets there.

For some three years, Ed McBride has been striving to win a Quigley Plaque. Time and again he's landed high but not high enough to catch the eye of the Judging Committee for top honors.

Well, after three years of trying, you wouldn't exactly blame the lad if he just sat down and said "to hell with it". But not McBride. He may have cussed but not hard enough to keep him from trying again.

It took a lot of determination to continue boring in for so long a spell without ever getting closer than reaching distance of the Big Prize, but evidently Mac is blessed with plenty of those plain, old-fashioned guts to back him up.

And that's your answer, folks, whether it be a Quigley Award or anything else a man wants bad enough to fight for.

WHO WILL SLAY THE DRAGON?

The letters published in last week's Round Table and this, setting down pros and cons on giving cash instead of passes for certain services and contest prizes, are, at the very least, provocative. Gratifying they are, too, in the number of correspondents inclined to favor the idea. Sid Holland even goes further by suggesting it actually be tried out by theatremen imaginative enough to pioneer.

The pass is an evil, without doubt, and the exhibitor who would attempt its destroyal by testing the merits of cash payments instead may find himself in receipt of the industry's blessing for slaying this dangerous box-office dragon.

CREDIT ALSO THE THEATREMAN

In studying the layout of representative newspaper ads carried on a following page, one calls to mind Joseph Schenck's comment on advertising before the recent Twentieth Century-Fox convention in Hollywood. Mr. Schenck declared newspapers to be one of the most important factors in the world distribution of films.

"There are many mediums through which we advertise our product to the world," he said, "but none has so far proven as far-reaching and effective as the daily newspaper."

Few will disagree.

Publishers may well be credited for wide circulation which makes theatre space valuable. But not to the exclusion of the able theatreman who fills that space effectively to insure maximum reader-interest. The ads in this issue well illustrate the point we make.

By their efforts in creating displays that enhance the readability of newspapers, showmen contribute no little to the drawing power of that medium.

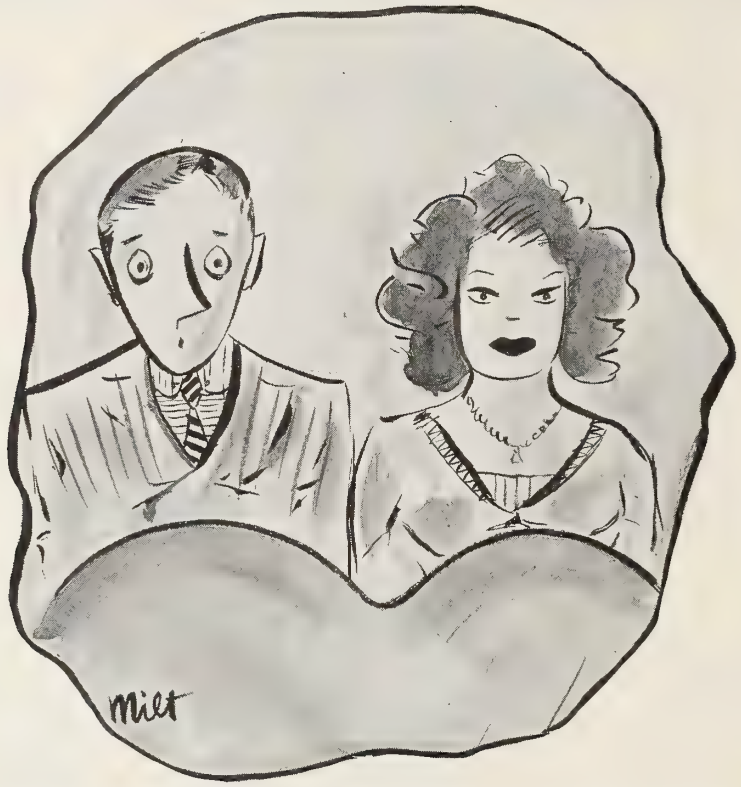
SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS!



SHE: THE ONLY ONE I DON'T SUSPECT IS CHARLIE CHAN. HE MUST BE THE GUILTY ONE.

Gag Stunts Publicize "Cheyney" for Redmond

To exploit "Last of Mrs. Cheyney" at the Bonham Theatre, Fairbury, Neb., Jimmie Redmond ten days in advance put a set of scales in his lobby with a cutout blowup head of Joan Crawford and title of picture. Patrons were invited to weigh themselves and if their weight was the same as the star's they were presented with guest ticket to see the picture.

To balance the display, the other side was filled with a glove, stack of love letters and triple strand of pearls. Below these items was a card with copy reading, "A woman's glove, a telltale love letter and a strand of pearls meant much in the life of Mrs. Cheyney." Jimmie reports the stunt attracted all the ladies, who stopped to examine the "relics."

Pollock's Mimeograph Gag

Tying up with a local mimeograph machine company, Les Pollock, Loew's Rochester Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. promoted machine and girl who ran off stencils in front of his house on forthcoming attractions. As crowds gathered to watch the procedure, girl distributed approximately 10,000 copies of the mimeographed heralds.

Clark's First Time Co-op Ad

Charles Clark, manager of the Tivoli Theatre, Frederick, Maryland, is credited with the reported first full page cooperative advertising ever sold there on a motion picture. Ad on "Maytime" appeared in the Daily News and Charlie used the mat material offered in the press book.

Soaring Elevator Lifts Eyes To "Top of Town" at Ritz

Use of toy elevator on a thirty-foot compo board skyscraper in front of the Ritz Theatre, San Bernardino, Calif., attracted the attention of passers-by to Howard Ralston's "Top of the Town" lobby. Sign offered free passes to those who could jerk a rope and send the elevator up the skyscraper so that it stopped at a bell, which then rang. Giant letters spelled out "Top of the Town" down the skyscraper front. Spectacular appearance of display, plus frequent ringing of bell by boy in charge, plus lure of free ducats, and clatter of zooming elevator, added to success of the novelty.

Shirley Ann Takes a Bow

Pressing his little daughter Shirley Ann into service, L. W. Shuppert, Paramount Theatre, Cushing, Okla., for "Waikiki Wedding" dressed the two-year-old tot in a grass skirt, brought her up on the stage and introduced her as a representative of the cast. Shirley made a very short pre-arranged speech in her best baby talk which Leo says brought plenty of laughs and comment.

Jaynes Hosts Teachers

Selling his "High School" date at the Guild Theatre, Norwood, Mass., Arthur Jaynes invited several civic clubs and school teachers to view the picture at a special Saturday morning showing as guests of the management. The teachers were told of the showing through the Superintendent of Schools and story of the preview was planted in the local daily.

Newspapers Cooperate With Di Pesa on "Woman"

Five-day feature of "How to Cure a Stiff Neck in Five Lessons" started Joe Di Pesa's Boston campaign on "Woman Chases Man" with a bang. Stunt suggested in the pressbook consisted of stills taken from one of the comedy scenes in the picture. The Globe gave it a big build-up.

Di Pesa secured a full-page photo of Miriam Hopkins in the American and set the serialization with the Globe which gave it a two-column art spread daily. All papers carried advance stories and features. The Record used the "Inquiring Reporter" gag effectively.

Radio plugs consisted of "Man-on-the-Street" broadcasts, old song-guessing contests, and transcriptions. Co-op ads and elaborate window displays were the real feature of the campaign, Di Pesa cashing in on many local angles as well as the national ads.

Unusual Window Displays Sell "Borderland" for Royal

Utilizing three vacant store windows, Bruce Royal, Fair Theatre, Plainview, Tex., for "Borderland" had his artist, Clarence Wisdom, construct an outstanding display. For the background scenes of the west were painted, including rugged hills, trees, waterfalls, etc. These were done on muslin and cut to exact size of windows.

Floor in each window was covered with sand on which were planted model chuck wagon, miniature horses, dogs, stuffed horn toad and human skull. Chalk novelties consisted of big hatted Mexican sitting in sand with cowboy in front of boiling pot playing a guitar. Cast iron black silhouettes included cowboy leaning from his pony watching cow hand prepare range breakfast, bucking broncho and cowboy and girl sat on ground with their ponies grazing nearby. Western novelty bookends of small log cabins and cactus completed the effect.

Talent Night Opened In Miami by Barnett

The merchants of Lincoln Road (the 5th Ave. of the South), Miami Beach, Fla., cooperated with Jimmie Barnett, Community Theatre on putting over a "talent discovery and screen test night." Stunt consisted of a sort of amateur show on the stage, photographing the acts which will be included in a feature picture to be shown later at all Paramount Theatres.

The screen tests were made in cooperation with the Historical Records Film Company who in turn are producing the feature "Greater Miami of 1937." Jimmie says that while all tests made on the Community stage will not be included in the picture, a great many will, and enough, he hopes, to bring out the people to see themselves on the screen.

When the show itself was put on, Barnett planted flood lights on the roof and marquee as well as the sidewalk in front and turned it into a regular Hollywood premiere. H. K. Carrington, director and producer, directed the rehearsals of those appearing before the camera. Papers carried stories together with art work.

Country Store Night Works for Moller

Recently at the Wicomico Theatre, Salisbury, Md., Harry L. Moller resurrected the old idea of "country store," elaborating on the stunt and promoting all gifts from local merchants amounting to about 75 weekly. In presenting the gifts to the lucky patrons, merchants' plug is given.

For his kid matinees Harry always puts on a stage presentation of local amateur boys and girls and another recent stage feature was a home talent minstrel show which he reports as being highly successful.

Locally Made Picture Exploited by Webb

Billing his opening of "Rangle River" as the "Kangaroo and Uncle Sam unite in making Australia's first world standard production," W. Dalton-Webb, manager and director of publicity for the Kempsey Theatres in Kempsey, intrigued his patrons and business houses as well which assisted in tieups and window displays.

Two weeks ahead Webb devoted part of his lobby to an animated display with cutouts of a kangaroo and Uncle Sam in the foreground, live grass and small shrubs with picture copy, cast and playdates completed the setpiece. Tieup was made with local Pontiac people, which car was used on location during filming of the picture, dealer bannering cars with copy "The model car which was used," etc., etc.

Harris' Sweetheart Contest

In connection with the opening of "Maytime" at Loew's State, Cleveland, publicist Milt Harris staged a six-day "sweethearts" contest with the Cleveland Press cooperating. Paper advertised for oldest living married couples with cash prize going to winners. Front page human interest stories were run with three-column photo of Grandpa and Grandma Fuller, ages 93 and 91 respectively, who gave their "recipe" for a happy married life.

'TAIN'T ENOUGH

The recent spell of hot, sticky weather might just as well be accepted as a harbinger of Summer advancing with relentless step. And, as ready theatremen should do, managers are preparing their cooling-artillery and comfort-ammunition to lay down a barrage in defense of hot weather grosses. Cooling plants, crisp seat covers, marquee valances, lobby posters and decorations, subdued lighting — all are ready to function, soothe, beguile. Yes, folks, theatremen are dug in on a wide front to repulse the enemy — but 'taint enough.

Not so long ago, theatres had the field of air-cooling to themselves. But it's another story now, with stores, hotels, restaurants and even apartment houses advertising the same comfort and convenience. Today the open-eyed showman realizes he must put something more on the ball and not depend entirely upon his cooling plant to bring 'em in.

That extra "something" includes, and importantly, the way in which patrons are received, the manner in which the manager and his personnel convey a courteous welcome. Folks are liable to be irritated by the hot weather and more difficult to handle when the thermometer goes up, up and up. The manager who does not receive patrons graciously and sincerely as does any other hospitable host is not prepared to fight for his share of Summer business when, ofttimes, business is hard to get. —A-MIKE.

Waiters and Chef Bally "History"

Two waiters and a chef properly bannered paraded through the streets of Rochester exploiting Les Pollock's opening of "History Is Made at Night" at Loew's Rochester Theatre, trio carried salvers on which were cards with picture copy that were distributed as the man meandered.

An "eye contest" was planted in the German newspaper, contestants to supply names of various picture stars whose eyes were shown in the paper. The Rochester Gas and Electric Company devoted entire window to display of cutouts of Boyer and Arthur with large neat card standing on stove, copy reading "History is made day and night with a modern gas range," playdates were included. Mounted stills were placed in stores about town, cooking column gave Leo Carrillo's recipe for Lobster Cardinal a la Casare and teaser ads were run in dailies 10 days ahead.

Bennett Stages Jubilee Star Guessing Contest

W. Bennett, Empress Theatre, Vernon, B. C., planted an Adolph Zukor silver jubilee star guessing contest in the Vernon News with cash prizes from merchants and tickets awarded winners. Thumb nail cuts of stars were run and contestants had to correctly identify them, cooperating stores' names were also listed on the co-op page.

Bennett reports that the editor of the paper thought so highly of the tieup with the merchants that he agreed to run off nearly 1,000 extra copies of the paper and mailed them to all people within a radius of 30 miles in towns where the paper is ordinarily not delivered.

Classified Ad Contest Sells "Property" for Allen

Wally Allen, Athena Theatre, Athens, Ohio, put over a classified ad contest on "Personal Property" and received two front page boxes in the Athens Messenger, a reported first time a theatre made the first page. Readers were instructed to turn to classified ad section, where tickets were offered for three-line, three-time want ads which listed a "personal property" item for sale or swap. Wally also ran teaser ads such as "Beware, personal property," etc., etc.

For "Wake Up and Live" Allen secured a full page co-op ad, each merchant's ad carrying the picture title tied into the copy. Imprinted photos of Ben Bernie were distributed in connection with American Can publicity and various window displays were planted about town.

Various Stunts Used For "Waikiki Wedding"

Jonas Perlberg, Paramount publicity department, Miami, Fla., forwards a couple of stunts on "Waikiki Wedding," first of which was put over by manager Alfred Weiss, Jr., at the Olympia Theatre. Al promoted a tieup with local chain ice cream stores for a special "Waikiki" sundae. All stores were bedecked with Hawaiian decorations and waitresses dressed in grass skirts and leis and a four-piece Hawaiian orchestra played tunes from the picture.

While at the Colony Theatre in Miami Beach, manager Austin Moon tied up department store for a full window with art work and display of costume worn by an Hawaiian princess and beach toggery was modeled by the girls in the store during run of picture.

Hog Calling Contest Staged on "Wedding"

Conceived by Clarence Wasserman, who was aided by his assistant, Nevin Seamonds, a hog calling contest was put over for "Waikiki Wedding" at the Tulare Theatre, Tulare, Cal. Accompanying photo shows winner in front of theatre.

Wasserman secured approximately 56 inches of free publicity on the stunt with photos taken of the contestants on theatre stage. Cash prize was awarded to winner with hams, bacon and tickets going to runnersup.

Candid Cameraman Snaps 'Em For Reynolds "Light" Date

At the State Theatre, Austin, Texas, manager Al Reynolds ahead of "Green Light" put a roving candid cameraman on the streets to snap passersby. Shots were later displayed on easel in lobby and to those patrons recognizing themselves, guest tickets were awarded. Al reports the cameraman was one of his staff, the pictures were developed free and the cards which were handed to folks when their pictures were taken were also promoted.

Special radio program was prepared with leading members of the University of Texas Curtain Club, who rehearsed weeks in advance, giving a skit from the famous Lloyd Douglas book. Program was publicized by the University as well as the theatre and players were all promoted free to the theatre.

The Mayor waived the city ordinance and permitted placards plugging the picture to be placed on street light standards throughout the city and "Green Light" copy was painted on street curbs. For theatre front, a regulation traffic signal light equipped with a bell rang intermittently with flashing green light as an extra attention-getter.

Sobler Greets Starlet From "Top of Town"

Al Sobler, New Spreckels Theatre, San Diego, hopped on the fact that Peggy Ryan, youthful dancer featured in "Top of the Town," was a local girl. Tieup was arranged with local aeroplane company to bring the starlet and her mother to San Diego for the opening of the show.

Party was met at the airport by a large welcoming delegation and presented with flowers. Newspaper photographers were present and her arrival together with photos appeared in the news sections in addition to regular publicity breaks. Peggy was interviewed over station KGB, was the mayor's guest of honor at a Chamber of Commerce dinner, and reception was held in the lobby of the Spreckels opening night.

City-wide tieup was made with local dairy with all children admitted to matinee for empty wrapper from ice cream confection and the manufacturer also arranged a theatre party of his employees advertising the event on all their store windows. Various window displays were secured and restaurants featured "top of the town" salads, cocktails, sundaes, etc.

Seff says the ferry carries thousands of passengers each day and the banner attracted plenty of attention. Ray Wernimont, manager of the Garen Theatre in Davenport, worked with Ely on the stunt.

"$90 IN CASH; $1,000 IN PASSES"

—SID HOLLAND, ELCO THEATRE, ELKHART, IND.

FEELS CASH PLAN WOULD FLOURISH

Col. Mike Vogel's editorial in issue of May 22nd analyzing the age worn pass evil in show business will cause considerable discussion. It might even get a few showmen to think about it for a while, but the writer questions the possibility of an evidence of intestinal fortitude ("Guts" to youse guys) of a sufficient number of exhibitors to give the thing a fair trial. The old "Let George Try It" attitude will probably prevail and nothing of any consequence done about it.

Mike alleges that the promiscuous passing of courtesy tickets cheapens the merchandise we have to sell, that once a patron becomes addicted to the pass habit it is difficult to get him back to a paying basis? If this is statement of fact we must admit we are allowing a parasite to eat into the very vitals of our business. If you question the value of Mike's contention I would ask you to analyze the situation in the only fair way—put yourself in the other fellow's place..

Over an indefinite period you have been receiving, weekly, a pair of passes to a certain theatre in exchange for one form of advertising or another. You awaken some morning and find that the theatre has found a more suitable location for its advertising—and you find yourself without the usual means of admission. Are you inclined to pass your shekels over to the box office of that theatre? Surely you are not. You are more likely to be peeved and shun that playhouse from then on—and patronize the opposition.

On the other hand you have been receiving a twenty-five cent piece on each change of paper. The advertising location is for some reason discontinued, and cash payment for same ceases. It is the termination of a fair cash business transaction and there is no hard feeling.

Let us take the average theatre in a small town. We will assume that it has built 20 six-sheet locations in surrounding towns, city limits and in the town proper. These theatres think nothing of giving two or three and possibly four passes for each of these spots.

Fifty dollars in theatre tickets annually; $1,000 in theatre tickets for the 20 locations which could be bought for $90 at four or five dollars cash for each spot.

It will always be necessary to smooth the way with courtesies to the legislative and judiciary bodies, and I would continue to remember the kiddies on their birthdays with card greetings admitting them to the show. That is business building! Elephants and children never forget and the children of today are your bread and butter of tomorrow. But I would certainly subscribe to any plan which shows a possibility of having the box office function as it is intended to functnon—to receive cash for value received.

Mike Vogel's plan is certainly worthy of a trial. Let us analyze our locations, making certain all spots are doing the jobs intended for them. If we are using the right type and size of paper in ticket selling locations each one of them is worth twenty-five cents or more of my advertising appropriation. And I stand a good chance of having that quarter spent at my box office.

The town that puts this test to work will have to have the unanimous support of all theatres in that town. The reason for this is obvious.

Who will be the pioneers?—Sid Holland, City Manager, Elco Theatre, Elkhart, Ind.

"KEEP AT IT," CHEERS JAMEY

Dear Mike:

The world is filled with certain unmitigated evils—dandelions . . . mosquitos . . . the guys who thump you on the back . . . confirmed New Yorkers . . . blatant Californians. The theatre world has its own particular and peculiar evil—the pass evil.

There is only one thing I know to do about it: Keep working at it all the time, just as you keep digging dandelions . . . slapping mosquitos . . . giving the steely eye to confirmed New Yorkers . . . and saying, "Oh, yeah?" to the Californians.

—H. E. Jameyson, District Manager, Fox Midwest Theatres, Wichita, Kan.

SAYS PASS PRIZES CUT THE GROSSES

Dear Mike:

Tent shows, circuses and carnivals in small town situations inasmuch as they distribute passes liberally makes it impossible to entirely eliminate passes from the theatre. . . .

The solution in the case of city officials is the conducting of our affairs with them as any other business would—strictly on a merit basis with no favors asked. Police officials on duty or firemen on inspection tours are permitted to enter the theatres at any time. When police officers visit the theatre while off duty they are required to sign a "pass" requisition and to purchase tickets for their wives or guests. Firemen purchase tickets any time they see a show.

The window card situation has been solved through the use of an attractive frame in which the cards are placed—a mirror frame hanging on a bracket, eye-height, at the side of well located windows—thus with the assurance the card is not destroyed as soon as backs are turned. Twelve locations are used and for them 22 passes, total per month, are issued. The merchants were sold on the idea that the attractive frames would help dress up their windows—that the motion picture was of interest to more people than anything mentionable—and for these reasons would stop passersby and call attention to their own merchandise. Small town stuff no doubt, but in this case it works.

One, two or three passes for a window card is the most expensive advertising that can be used. We prefer to discontinue the use of window cards rather than give even one pass, except in the case of intense campaigns.

Billboard locations are rented. Double three-sheet stands—at an average of $4.30 per annum per location. A former publicity man was issuing seventy-two passes per month. Cost in passes $267.84 with a third of the locations on theatre property. Cash cost averages $86.00 a year. Cash rental for outdoor advertising locations in my opinion is the solution.

In the case of three-sheet billboard locations in the surrounding towns and trade territory, a pass is issued each time a poster is changed. A survey shows that from one to four paid tickets are purchased with each "pass" used.

Radio is paid for time; they pay for tickets where they use them with contests. Ministers are issued "trip-passes," in limited numbers if they come to the theatre office to get them. At all times they are made to feel it a pleasure to issue "guest tickets" for them and their wives.

The newspaper business manager has a season pass for himself and wife. Four newspaper passes per week are issued in addition which the manager distributes to his personnel as he sees fit. If the newspaper wants tickets for a contest they buy them.

Theatre-promoted contests with ticket prizes are rarely used for the reason that people not interested in movies do not try to solve them, and we are only cutting down our potentialities when passes are given to our regular patrons—about the only ones who participate in contests. Paid space is more satisfactory, more economical and accomplishes better results. . . .

I believe the only solution for the pass evil is through discreet, judicious and diplomatic issuance. The pass should be considered as just that amount deducted from the gross and unless equal or several times the value is received, passes should not be issued.—E. R. Hardwick, Manager, Lyceum Theatre, Clovis, New Mexico.

SERVICE CHARGE CALLED SOLUTION

Dear Mike:

Your editorial relative to passes is food for thought, but no five theatremen will agree as to its proper distribution.

The trouble with "passes" is that the average house manager has no valuation thought of these pieces of paper. Right at this time I happen to know of a manager who left behind him some 300 issued passes (if not more) after he had left his house for transfer to another theatre. The new manager had to stand the burden of the deadwood attendance three months after this man had left the theatre.

The best pass set-up is Chakeres Theatres, Springfield, Ohio, whereby all passes demand a five cent service charge, all such obtained money has purchased and keeps up the circuit's employees' life insurance and sick benefit fund.—Milo De Haven, Manager, Fenkell Theatre, Detroit, Mich.

Proper Attitude Between Employer and Employee

Canadian Analyzes Qualifications of the "Good Boss"

by WALTER F. DAVIS

Manager, Capitol, Regina, Sask., Canada

Elbert Hubbard once said, "When you work for a man, in Heaven's name work for him, and don't be constantly disparaging."

The boss's lot is not always a happy one. Whether he has charge of one person or many, he must necessarily be a good boss. He must have qualities about him that men admire, and these qualities can be applied wherever one person is trying to lead others.

The successful one is primarily a leader, and one of the essential factors in leading others is getting cooperation from them. But cooperation cannot be obtained unless it is given. Employees' problems have to be dealt with as though they were the employer's own problem. In school, a child cannot be made to learn unless the teacher can see the child's difficulties from all angles, and as the child does. Then, and then only can the teacher help the child.

Employees of Famous Players-Canadian Corporation have a definite goal to aim at. Because one happens to be a junior to somebody else does not necessarily mean that his position is an inferior one. Upon the satisfactory and pleasing manner in which each and every employee discharges his or her duties depends the success not only of the particular theatre where they may be employed, but of the entire Corporation. If a boss is to function adequately he must be acquainted with his employees' errors. People will very often do disagreeable things if they know that the consequences will be pleasant; on the other hand punishment is a way of getting what is required, but it is not a good way. If an employee fears the results of his mistakes he will work with an entirely different attitude. Punishment depresses the spirit of the employee and the boss too. It creates a nasty feeling on both sides, and defeats natural and voluntary cooperation.

Consequently, it should be definitely understood between employer and employee that errors and omissions should be freely discussed; that suggestions relating to new methods should be tried where practical when the old ideas do not work well enough. A suggestion (we'll say from an usher, doorman or ticket taker) put into actual practice in the theatre will do more towards securing cooperation than a tangible award in cash. This Personal-Interest factor is extremely vital in winning the confidence of employees, but it must not be confined to merely what they do, nor how they do their work, but about themselves as humans as one of the great family of Famous Players.

A good boss will do this with the right amount of diplomacy and still retain his position of leader and at the same time develop a natural enthusiasm not only for Famous Players Corporation and the theatre itself, but for himself through his employees.

Now just a word on enthusiasm. Apart from the actual recognition of the particular job or suggestion that might be accepted by the boss, it is necessary to do something along general lines to keep this enthusiasm up by providing good conditions for the people who have to do the work by giving a little thought about their hours and the amount of work that has to be done by being reasonable and not by expecting too much for too little recognition. The employee who continues to do his work satisfactorily and carefully needs instruction to correct his mistakes—nothing else. Of course it is simpler, quicker and very often more self-satisfying to give an employee a "tongue-lashing," while to instruct him patiently would take much longer. Nevertheless, the latter method is usually more effective.

A good boss is one who extends as well as invites cooperation; who has the happy faculty of being able to exercise a Personal Interest, and who can create a natural and lasting enthusiasm for his company, for his employee and for himself. In short, he must be human. He should treat his employees as he would be treated himself. He should be able to put himself in his employees' shoes. The good boss has learned just how to do that. There are such bosses. The other kind should follow suit.

John Rowberry's date of "Elephant Boy" at the Hunter Theatre, Elko, Nev., tied in perfectly with the local opening of the circus. John borrowed an elephant, used side banners on him and paraded the jumbo behind the circus band and in the ring itself.

For his lobby display, John used his three-sheet cutout and directly back of it planted native grass. To give life effect hidden deep in the brush was a tiger house cat size with lights giving realistic effect.

On "Two Wise Maids" Rowberry placed numerous suitcases and trunks in his lobby with signs reading "Two Wise Maids moving into the Hunter Theatre."
